Autonomous State to Be Declared for North, Is Tokyo Report.

Economic Welfare Will Be Preserved

Policy of Non-Resistance Adopted to Prevent Useless Slaughter.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Peiping (Wednesday), Nov. 20.—The autonomous North China state probably will be declared some time today, Japanese newspaper correspondents understood.

Chinese sources confirmed the report but no official information was available.

Dispatches from Nanking indicated that the central government headed by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek will not offer armed opposition to the plan.

Plans Completed.

Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, chief political agent of the Japanese army who is credited with promoting the whole scheme, told newspapermen late last night that "Chinese plans for an autonomous North China council have been completed."

"I expect formal announcement of the new regime shortly," Doihara continued.

Chinese leaders then reportedly told Japanese correspondents that they would wait until noon today "when we plan to act on our own responsibility if no definite plan is forthcoming from Nanking."

All sorts of rumors were in the air. One Chinese official at midnight said: "I expect an announcement of the autonomous council either Wednesday evening or Thursday."

Maj. Gen. Doihara denied rumors that he had issued an ultimatum to the Chinese.

"Problem of Chinese."

"Let me emphasize that this is a Chinese problem," he said. "Naturally the Japanese army is offering advice for we have very vital rights and interests in North China.

"I do not think there is going to be any trouble whatever—certainly not an armed conflict."

In Nanking Chiang Kai-Shek was equally placatory.

Addressing the Kuomintang (Government Party) congress he said:

"I am still hopeful of peace. The hour of eventual sacrifice has not yet arrived. We must first consider the interests of the entire nation. We must be patient regarding secondary problems."

Paraphased, Chinese here said, the dictator's remarks mean that China is in no position to resist the Japanese army and if the Japanese army wants an autonomous state China must yield, for any resistance would simply result in needless slaughter—as occurred during the Shanghai incident three years ago.

Ambassador Arrives.

Chinese here believed the new state will offer a nominal but meaningless allegiance to Nanking. They believe the Japanese army will move carefully, profiting by its experiences in the establishment of Manchukuo, and will not upset normal economic practices any more than necessary.

The Japanese Ambassador reportedly arrived in Nanking late last night and was to confer with Chiang during today.

Japanese understood Chiang will devote his efforts to preventing a complete separation of the five northern provinces—Shansi, Shantung, Hopeh, Chahar and Suiyuan—and would ask the ambassador to use his influence with the Japanese military in effecting the best "face-saving" formula that can be worked out for the central government.

The Japanese expected Gen. Sung Cheh-Yuan, commander of the Peiping-Tientsin garrison and recently a close ally of the Japanese army, to be named head of the new regime. The appointment would be

To Represent U. S. at Naval Parley

U. S. Names 'Big Navy' Delegates To Conference in London Dec. 6

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Although frankly pessimistic that any substantial progress will be made toward continuing a limitation of naval armaments, the Government decided yesterday to treat the forthcoming London naval conference as an important and major meeting, chiefly because France and Japan have adopted similar attitudes.

This decision was revealed when President Roosevelt announced that the United States delegation to the conference would consist of Norman H. Davis, American Ambassador-at-Large; Undersecretary of State William Phillips, and Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations.

Davis will act as chairman of the delegation, which will be accompanied by a group of naval and diplomatic experts. The American party probably will sail from New York November 27, landing in time for the convening of the London conference December 6.

Phillips Adds Prestige.

The appointment of Phillips came as a distinct surprise and undoubtedly was made to increase the dignity and prestige of the American delegation. President Roosevelt disclosed that Phillips would remain in London only a few weeks to ascertain the situation within the conference and would then return to his post as Undersecretary of State to act as a liaison officer here between the delegation and this Government.

Although until now this Government privately has been inclined to treat the London Conference lightly, the appointment of Phillips indicates it has been decided the United States "should not take a chance," to express it in a colloquialism.

When Great Britain originally called the conference it was regarded here as more or less a formality, since both the London Naval Treaty, which expires December 31, 1936, and the Washington Treaty, which terminates on that date due to its renunciation by Japan, require that a conference take place this year.

Japan Sending 20.

It was thought that any substantial agreement for continued limitation would be remote, but that the December meeting would satisfy the requirements of existing pacts and that the conference could recess until next year, when the outlook for agreement might be more propitious.

With that thought in mind some consideration was given several weeks ago to having Robert W. Bingham, the American Ambassador to Great Britain, and Admiral Standley represent the United States. The view held when the conference was called still prevails in the State Department.

But those in charge of American foreign policy have been perplexed by the importance attached to the conference by Japan and France. The latter is including in its delegation a cabinet officer, while a delegation of 20 has left Japan for the London meeting.

Due to this turn of events, it was decided to send Davis and Admiral

U. S., London Leaders Study Chinese Crisis

Trend of Conference of Lindsay and Phillips Is Kept Secret.

By the Associated Press.

The supposedly imminent seizure by Japan of control over North China, a matter of growing administration concern, yesterday precipitated a joint Anglo-American canvass of the crisis.

For half an hour, Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador to Washington, discussed the Sino-Japanese developments with the Undersecretary of State, William Phillips. If any possibility of joint action by the two governments was discussed, however, it was kept a carefully guarded secret.

Both governments have an interest in the five North China provinces over which Japan seeks control. More than 1,000 American citizens are reported to be living in this section, exclusive of military forces. Extensive American business interests and investments are seated there. The British population and investment is even heavier.

Administration Concerned.

Concerning his conference with Ambassador Lindsay, Phillips said later at his press conference that the discussion was confined principally to generalities. He asserted that nothing of particular importance from the British government had been conveyed by the Ambassador.

Notwithstanding that he sought to minimize the significance of the conference, it was learned authoritatively that the reported Japanese intention to foster autonomy for the north China provinces was a matter of growing concern to Administration officials.

In more than one quarter here the move is looked upon as a further development of Japan's intention to extend its hegemony on the Asiatic mainland, a policy which evoked sharp representations by the American Government when it first was announced a year ago last April.

In those representations, Washington challenged the right of Japan to carry out its inferential statement to the rest of the world to keep "hands off Asia." Tokyo's attention then was called directly

Chest $468,671 Short of Goal With One Day Left for Drive

Washington's 5,500 Community Chest solicitors today will enter the home stretch in their campaign to feed the hungry.

With $1,409,228.13, or 74.45 per cent of the total, reported yesterday, the volunteer workers must raise $468,671.87 before their "victory rally" tonight at 8 o'clock in the Willard Hotel, if their minimum goal of $1,877,900 is to be reached on time.

The basic objective would care for the 65 Chest agencies. Twenty per cent more, about $400,000, is sought to finance direct relief since the Federal Government has withdrawn from that field.

As the canvassers have been busy nine days persuading 125,179 persons to donate, leaders hoped to avoid extension of the drive beyond tonight's scheduled ten-day limit.

Dr. William McClellan, general campaign chairman; Elwood Street, of the Board of Public Welfare and a former Chest director, and Newbold Noyes, former Chest president, spurred the workers at the final luncheon meeting.

"You've heard these area chairmen tell about exceeding their quota by as high as 200 per cent," McClellan said. "If small groups can do that, why can't we? I'm still confident of success."

Street declared the workers could do anything they set out to accomplish.

"Too many people," he added, "are not giving adequately and do not seem to understand that they are giving for 65 service agencies.

"There have been too many small gifts. I have heard it said that Monday should be a good day for the Government group, of which I am one, because Saturday was pay day. That is a wrong premise.

"There is too much tendency to take the spare change that a Gov-

Italian Fliers Defeat Foes, Killing 2,000

Planes Swoop Down on Ethiopian Force of About 15,000.

Defenders, in Vale Near Makale, Are Routed After 2 Hours.

The War Crisis.

Twenty Italian planes routed an Ethiopian force of 15,000, the Italian high command reported, killing an estimated 2,000.

In Rome, Mussolini declared a monopoly on gold. Fascism's high council was understood to have agreed on a policy of continued resistance to the League of Nations' sanctions. The government announced the Sultanate of Biru, in northeastern Ethiopia, had surrendered to Italy.

The advanced Italian position in the north around Makale was reported to be virtually surrounded by Ethiopian troops and the bloodiest battle of the war was believed imminent.

Copyright by the Associated Press.

Asmara, Eritrea, Nov. 19.—A fierce, pitched battle between Italian pilots and Ethiopian land forces was described today by jubilant Fascists, who estimated the enemy dead at about 2,000.

Military experts said it was the greatest air engagement since the World War, the most important battle of the current campaign and one of the strangest of modern times.

A force of more than 15,000 Ethiopians concentrated in a narrow valley south of Makale was routed, it was officially announced. After the fighting, bodies of hundreds of tribesmen were scattered on the field, pilots reported.

Il Duce's Sons Hailed.

The Ethiopians, employing rifles and anti-aircraft guns, fought desperately. When some of the Italian bombers dived as low as 100 feet, the Ethiopian gunners, perched on crags, actually shot down on the planes.

Hailed as among the heroes of the engagement were Premier Mussolini's two sons, Bruno and Vittorio, and his son-in-law, Count Galeazzo Ciano.

Ciano had to return to Makale when his oil tank was hit by a bullet and another plane was forced to descend. Bruno's plane was struck seven times and Vittorio's nine. One Italian mechanic was seriously wounded.

A 20-plane squadron attacked the huge encampment of Ethiopians yesterday shortly beyond the farthest Italian southern outpost. The odd battle, believed almost unprecedented, between air and land forces lasted for two hours.

Tells of Battle.

"We saw the Ethiopians scatter fast, but we got hundreds of them before they could take shelter; probably we got more than 1,000 of them," said Ciano. (Official Italian reports estimated the dead at around 2,000.)

Fascist planes scored an average of a dozen hits each, despite the severe enemy fire, official reports said. The squadron was commanded by Gen. Aimone.

Count Ciano said of the engagement:

"Baron Ostini, piloting the No. 5 plane, returned to Asmara with his mechanic suffering from a fractured leg.

"The mechanic, however, scribbled

Full Strength In Air Asked By Andrews

Recommendation to the Chief of Staff Involves Planes, Officers.

By Robert C. Albright.

Strengthening of the general headquarters air force, striking arm of the Nation's new air defense, by more than doubling its officer strength and plane power, has been recommended to the Army's chief of staff by Brig. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, commanding general of the force, it was learned yesterday.

Reporting on the first six months of experimentation with the unique mobile flying unit, combining tactical combat forces under one commander and staff, Gen. Andrews declared the development "sound," resulting in an "increase in the combat efficiency of the air force and in better control and supervision."

He asked that every effort be made to secure, by legislation or from any other available source, funds sufficient to bring the air force up to its authorized airplane strength within the next five years. This would entail an increase from the present 371 ships to an ultimate total of more than 1,000.

The report asked at least 477 Regular Army officers be assigned to the command, slightly more than the present strength, and that 550 reserve officers in addition be placed on extended active duty in the Air Corps. These would go to the G. H. Q. air unit.

Registers Complaint.

Andrews complained the unit is now undermanned.

Embodying many of the recommendations of the War Department special committee on the Air Corps, headed by Newton D. Baker, the highly mobile tactical air unit was organized last March 1 for a test period of one year. It was strategically planned as a powerful deterrent against possible attack on American shores. Although part of the Army, it was designed to strike not only in support of ground forces, but far at sea if the occasion arose.

After six months of operation, Gen. Andrews expressed general satisfaction with the plan, but noted some flaws in the present setup. He said the test organization was "unsatisfactory" from a quartering and supply (logistical) point of view.

"Mobility depends on adequately manned bases, under the exclusive control of the air force commander, which maintain sufficient supplies and facilities to permit air operations," he told the Army chief of staff.

Would Shift Control.

This was said to have reference to present Army Corps area control of stations for which G. H. Q. combat units operate. If the recommendations are carried out, control of these stations, supplies and personnel, would be transferred to the air force chief.

Other conclusions reached in the report were:

"The G. H. Q. Air Force headquarters is inadequately staffed.

"Hard surfaced runways are essential to operations of modern military aircraft, and the lack of such runways is causing excessive deterioration and loss of valuable equipment.

"There is insufficient commissioned and enlisted personnel in the G. H. Q. Air Force to care for any

Radio Carries Death Warning As Poisoned Soda Kills Three

By the United Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 19.—Countless purchasers of bulk baking soda from a local store tonight were warned they face possible poison death if they use the compound.

Three deaths already have occurred among persons who bought the preparation. Dr. J. C. Geiger, city health officer, said the soda was found to contain arsenic.

The dead:

Alfred Terry, 81.

Mrs. Bessie Shufelt, his daughter.

Mary Ogle, 61.

Proprietors of the store could not explain how the soda, salvaged from damaged containers came to be poisoned.

Six hundred pounds of the soda were sold before October 23 and two barrels since then. It was revealed nine other persons had been treated at Emergency Hospital and had recovered from effects of the arsenic-charged compound.

Miss Ogle died November 7 after dining with Helen Handock. Miss Handock also became ill, but recovered. A report of the cause of Miss Ogle's death was not completed until last night, when Terry and his daughter died within a few moments of each other.

The Department of Health requested all radio stations in the city to broadcast warnings to householders to refrain from using bulk soda for the present, until a thorough check of the poison deaths could be made.

Joe Rosenthal, owner of the store which sold the bulk soda, said he could not understand how the product could have been poisoned.

The soda was salvaged merchandise and came from damaged steamship cargoes.

Police guarded the dumping room of the Manno Salvage Co. plant, where the soda was purchased by Rosenthal. Health officers started a thorough search to determine source of the arsenic in the soda.

The room was found to contain piles of powdered substances—painting cleaner and washing soda—close together. Samples were taken by the health officers for analysis.

"Whether the barrels contained arsenic, or the soda itself already contained arsenic, we have not been able to determine," Dr. Geiger said. "It is possible some chemical action took place while the soda was kept in bulk."

'Needy Will Not Starve' After Relief Deadline, Roosevelt Tells Mayors

Girl Who Flaunted Code of Hills Gets 25 Years for Killing Father

Jury of Mountaineers Upholds Parent's Right to Spank 'Modern' Daughter; Rejects Story of Her Fight to Save Life.

By the United Press.

Wise, Va., Nov. 19.—Edith Maxwell was convicted tonight of first-degree murder for killing her father because he invoked the code of the mountains and tried to whip her for staying out until midnight with a boy.

The verdict carries a penalty of 25 years in prison.

True to the age-old morality code of the mountains, the jury of 12 hill men brought in a verdict that sustains the authority of a father as dictator and a lord of the household.

The jury was out only 30 minutes.

The pretty black-haired school teacher received the verdict, clutching at the arm of her brother, Earl Maxwell.

"It's all right, it's all right," she said to him as he leaned over and tried to console her.

Edith crouched back in her chair at the defense table, her black hair tightly curled and tucked under a brown hat. It was such ideas as rouge, curled hair, smart clothes and suede shoes that brought her into conflict with her father, who thought the outside world taught women things that were disgraceful.

For two days she had listened to the testimony, and had heard her relatives give evidence both for and against her. The Commonwealth had tried to picture her as a girl gay and careless in her relations with men; the defense tried to convince the jury that she was doing nothing more than "exercising her God-given right of self-defense" when she picked up a shoe and battered Trigg Maxwell's head until he had wounds from which he died.

It would have been possible for the jury to have sent Edith to the electric chair, and tonight it appeared that the only reason she escaped was that there was considerable evidence to show that she killed in self-defense.

Her mother, Mrs. Anne Maxwell, under indictment as an accessory to the murder, probably will be tried later, although it is doubtful whether the Commonwealth will

Hoover Leads G. O. P. Attack On Trade Pact

Roosevelt Plans a Survey to Check Results of Canadian Treaty.

By the Associated Press.

Amid Republican denunciations of the Canadian tariff-reduction treaty, President Roosevelt last night announced a survey to check its effect upon commerce with the Dominion.

At the same time, State Department officials lauded the trade pact as a step toward the elimination of world trade deterrents, without which, Secretary Hull said, there can be no permanent world economic recovery.

Herbert Hoover led the Republican attack with a statement in Chicago that the treaty "brings hardship to hundreds of thousands of dairy and other farmers," adding "I presume it is more of the abundant life—for Canadians."

Mr. Hoover's statement:

"The Canadian treaty is just another instance of this hasty economic planning without full consideration of consequences.

"There has been no opportunity given for public debate, no opportunity for adequate hearing of the groups affected.

"But this much even now is obvious. It means still larger imports of foreign food. It thus means further decreases in the home market of American agriculture. It brings hardship to hundreds of thousands of dairy and other farmers. I presume it is more of the more abundant life—for Canadians."

At Republican Western headquarters Harrison Spangler tagged the agreement a "step toward free trade" and called for a referendum before it is made effective. Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, was satirically critical.

Mr. Roosevelt's announcement was made at his press conference. He said George Peek, his special adviser on foreign trade, would make an analysis of the treaty with particular attention to its effect on

Admiral Stitt's Wife Plunges To Her Death

Dives Through Sixth-Floor Window; Devoted Life to War on Disease.

A life devoted to tireless effort in the name of medical science ended yesterday in a bleak alleyway behind a fashionable, midtown apartment house, when Mrs. Laura Armistead Carter Stitt, 52-year-old bride of Rear Admiral Edward Rhodes Stitt, retired, former surgeon general of the United States, died in a six-story plunge.

Less than five months ago, Mrs. Stitt, daughter of the late Dr. Henry Rose Carter, noted physician, was married to Admiral Stitt, who once was her father's chief in the surgeon general's office.

The wedding was a surprise to Washington society. They were married quietly in Ashland, Va., June 22, and came here to live in the Westmoreland Apartments, 2122 California street northwest.

Admiral Absent at Time.

Yesterday, as was his custom, Admiral Stitt left the apartment in the morning. A few hours later, near the tradesmen's entrance at the rear, a young hospital interne kneeled beside the crumpled body of Mrs. Stitt and pronounced her dead.

She had plunged from a hallway window on the sixth floor. The Stitt apartment was on the second floor. A maid, Nellie Reese, colored, told the story to Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

After the admiral left, the maid cleaned the apartment. Mrs. Stitt was busy at her desk. After completing her work, the maid changed her clothes and prepared to go to a fifth floor apartment, where she worked for an Army officer.

The maid told Mrs. Stitt that she was going downtown later in the day and asked if there was anything she could purchase. Mrs. Stitt named several articles and the two talked for 15 minutes. There was no hint that Mrs. Stitt was nervous or distraught.

As the maid prepared to leave,

Westward Ho! Hiccoughs Fare, And Taxi Driver Collects $900

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, Nov. 19.—Ed Michaels, New York cab driver, was on his way home tonight aboard a bus, his cab sold for $25 and his pockets jingling with $900—the fruits of a cab driver's dream.

Ed appeared at a used car lot today, offering the cab for sale.

"I'd give you $25," the car dealer said, "if I bought it. How come you got New York license plates?"

"I'm from New York," Ed explained, and told his story:

He picked up a fare two weeks ago at the Pennsylvania Station. The man wanted to go to New Jersey.

When they reached Newark, the fare threw all his clothes out of his luggage cases, filled them with two cases of whisky, and ordered Ed to "drive to Pittsburgh."

They stayed at a hotel in Pittsburgh, the fare settling up at straight meter rates. The next day he waved his hand Westward, and said:

"Continue, my man—westward ho!"

That night Ed wired his home office for instructions. He got them:

"Keep going as long as he pays fare."

Ed kept going. Each night he collected the day's fare, registered at "15 cents for first ¼ mile, 5 cents for each ¼ mile thereafter."

100 Cheer Hint U. S. Aid Will Continue After July 1, 1936.

Congress' Session 'Likely to Be Short'

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt assured mayors of 100 American cities yesterday that the Government "does not propose to let people starve" after July 1, 1936, when the present WPA program is expected to be concluded, "any more than during the past few years."

Interpreting this statement as an answer to their demand that the Government continue to carry part of the relief burden, the mayors, gathered around the President's desk in the White House, applauded loudly.

The question of whether Federal relief will continue during the next fiscal year—a question which the President described as "silly"—has been the chief subject of discussion during the first two days of the mayors' annual conference. Led by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, of New York, a half-dozen city executives attending the conference have pointed to the necessity of continuing relief and have expressed the fear that Federal funds might be shut off.

Sees Short Session.

President Roosevelt also told the mayors that he expected to call a general conference late this winter on the subject of Federal, State and municipal taxation. He said the tax situation called for revision and that he hoped a report on the whole subject could be made before the close of 1936.

The report will not be submitted to the next Congress, the President said, adding that he expected the session to be short.

"As you know," he added, "there will be an election next year, and we don't want this tax question mixed up in that."

In the official transcript of the President's talk, which was extemporaneous, his reference to the relief question being "silly" and his reference to not mixing the tax problem with the election were deleted.

The question: "Is the Government going to stop giving relief next July?" was asked by a reporter at the President's press conference just prior to his meeting with the mayor.

"One of the newspaper men," the President told the mayors, "a few moments ago in the press conference, asked the kind of silly question you are all asked and I am asked every week."

A Presidential secretary leaned over his shoulder, evidently calling attention to the fact that newspaper men were still present.

"Members of the press are present, I know," Mr. Roosevelt said, "but I do not mind their hearing this."

"That is the kind of thing—spreading the word around that everybody who is now on relief will be taken off relief rolls beginning the first of July—we have to combat.

Sees Permanent Program.

"My answer was that the Federal Government, and I am sure your answer will be the same for the city governments, does not propose to let people starve after the first of July any more than during the past few years."

The mayors went to the White House fresh from hearing a spirited defense of the works program by Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, who said that the whole question of future relief rests with Congress. He added, however, that he expected a permanent program to be developed.

It had been announced that Hopkins would answer the mayors' questions on the subject of relief, and most of the mayors were pre-

Friends Ready To Enter Borah Name in Race

Comment Is Withheld by Senator; He Plans a Speaking Tour.

By the Associated Press.

Friends of Senator William E. Borah were represented yesterday as willing and ready to place the Idahoan's name in next year's Republican Presidential primaries unless he definitely declines to run.

So far Borah's closest approach to a declaration of intent is the "I can't say I won't" given last week in answer to a newsman's query as to whether he would formally enter the lists.

Borah did not comment yesterday on the report that supporters intended to enter his name in some of the primaries. Instead he talked with associates. He plans a speaking schedule to be carried out before the opening of Congress in January.

Hoover Returns Home.

En route East he talked with political leaders frequently. Conversations with men and women whose friendship he secured over years of Washington service are a matter of almost daily routine.

Herbert Hoover, whose activities are being scrutinized closely by observers to determine whether he will seek return to the White House, is on the way back to California after his New York speech Saturday criticizing New Deal fiscal policies.

Both Borah and Hoover have so far devoted their public discussions to issues and have not definitely indicated whether they are candidates or whom their candidate preferences are.

Where the former President has attacked financial policies of the Roosevelt Administration, the Senator has stated the question of monopoly is at the base of all issues.

Roosevelt Defenders.

Increased revenues and a smaller percentage rise in the national deficit were cited in a statement yesterday by Chairman Mead (Democrat), of the House Ways and Means Committee, as evidence President Roosevelt is a better business manager than was Hoover.

Mead likened Hoover's recent speech attacking Administration monetary policies to the expression of "the grand-stand manager, who can see all the plays after they are made." He declared the former President sought to pose as "an expert on a subject at which he proved a failure."

"With not much to show for it, the national debt jumped from $16,185,308,299 for the fiscal year 1929-1930 to $20,934,729,209 when Roosevelt took office.

"My choice is Roosevelt when it comes to good business management."

Farley Warns Clerks.

Meanwhile, James A. Farley, Postmaster General and Democratic National Chairman, warned his postal clerks against sampling the political winds.

"A number of newspapers and magazines are engaging in taking straw votes," Farley wrote, "and the department has received information that in some instances postal employes are displaying an unwarranted curiosity in the postcard ballots transmitted through the mails.

"Postmasters and all postal employes are warned that mail matter of this kind is to be handled expeditiously and promptly dispatched to the addresses. Employes of the postal service must not make any examination or classification of the ballots.

"Violation of this order will result in severe disciplinary action."

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Nov. 19.—New Deal handling of the unemployment problem was described as a major failure of the Roosevelt Administration tonight by Mrs. Robert Lincoln Hoyal, director of the women's division of the Republican national committee.

In a many sided criticism of the New Deal, given in an address to the Business and Professional Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts, she said:

"I know of no greater indictment that can be leveled against the Roosevelt Administration than to say that he has borrowed money from future generations to feed the unemployed from the hand of Government while, at the same time, insisting upon the enactment of measures which have kept the unemployed from securing the one thing they want above all others—jobs."

She accused the Administration of "flouting" tradition-tried principles and the Democratic platform and campaign pledges, then added:

"We will regain prosperity when we can have more legitimate business and less Government monkey business."

Hoover in Chicago Has No Statement

Allen Belittles His Remark to Hotel Keeper.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Former President Herbert Hoover had nothing to say to newspapermen here today aside from the statement he issued attacking the Canadian trade treaty, but his traveling companion, Ben S. Allen, received reporters.

The newsmen recalled Mrs. Gussie Machson, who conducts the inn at Monticello, N. Y., where Hoover and Allen had stopped Sunday night, had quoted the former President as replying to a question concerning his possible entry in the 1936 Presidential race:

"Sometimes you have to do those things."

"Hoover," Allen said, "would hardly have regarded a conversation with a hotel keeper as a propitious time to announce a candidacy."

"Hoover," he added, "is solely interested now in bringing out the issues which should be debated."

Between You and Me

Actions Speak Louder Than Words, So Hoover Is Labelled A Candidate In 1936.

By Raymond Clapper

HERBERT HOOVER'S friends deny he is a candidate—yet—but in the absence of any disavowal from him, his actions distinctly label him as one.

These activities, plus the very much-needed presence at his side of the expert ghost, Ben S. Allen, point more and more to that goal, as has been contended in this column since the writer was in California and observed what seemed to be unmistakable symptoms of a recurrence of the Presidential fever.

Of course, it is possible to be wrong about this, but in view of Mr. Hoover's activities, anyone who wants to observe the Republican Party's progress toward the White House realistically is more likely to be correct by assuming that Mr. Hoover is preparing to be a candidate. At any rate that will be this reporter's working hypothesis until new evidence indicates the contrary.

The fact that a man does not admit being a Presidential candidate is no evidence at all that he isn't. Sometimes Presidential candidacies move ahead like the new style wars of Japan and Mussolini which are not declared until they are over.

Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, continues to say that he is not a candidate when, in the opinion of many, he is among the first-line possibilities, and is being discussed as such. Gov. Landon of Kansas, who probably is the leading figure in the race, doesn't admit that he is a candidate, although he doesn't attempt to pretend that he won't be. Senator Borah doesn't say no and he doesn't say yes, but it takes no mind reader to discern that he is ready to be a willing sacrifice in the hands of his friends.

Candidate Hoover has rushed headlong into a denunciation of the Canadian trade agreement. He is speaking as a politician, not as an economist. Undoubtedly he is smarting with resentment at the repudiation of his own Hawley-Smoot tariff act which this trade agreement implies.

He has put himself in a position where he will have to defend that ultra-high tariff as against the Canadian reciprocity agreement and that will be no picnic. Democrats will revive their 1932 argument that it was the Hoover-Hawley-Smoot tariff that helped accentuate the depression. Whether that argument is sound or not there is the fact that it was this tariff which provoked the Canadian government, in retaliation, to shove up its tariffs and throw on its arbitrary orders in council which played havoc with American manufacturers who were trying to sell goods in Canada.

Making this attack, Mr. Hoover has rushed in where his former chairman of the U. S. Tariff Commission, Henry P. Fletcher, who is now chairman of the Republican national committee, has feared to tread. Fletcher is studying the agreement to find out what is in it before he lets go his observations. In view of his intimate knowledge of how tariffs are made by log-rolling and of the trade considerations involved in tariff schedules, it is doubtful if he could conscientiously brand the whole job as mischievous. For political reasons he will be compelled eventually to select some aspects of the agreement for criticism.

But Mr. Hoover, who went into the White House with a reputation as an economist who had some understanding of foreign trade problems, does not hesitate over this monumental job. With a Presidential campaign coming on, it is all wrong.

One of the most stubborn obstacles in the way of New Deal spending policies has been Comptroller General McCarl. Time and again his office has stepped in to restrain the happy spenders. The legal opinions and interpretations upon which McCarl has based his anti-New Deal decisions have been prepared by his counsel, Col. O. R. McGuire.

Now there has been a curious development. McGuire has been cited as an authority to sustain the New Deal in some of its litigation. He wrote an article some time ago for the Georgetown University Law Journal entitled "The New Deal and the Public Money," in which he made the point that Congress has absolute authority to appropriate public money for any purpose.

The Department of Justice cited this article in its brief in the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals in the Louisville housing case. The article also was cited in an opinion by the Tenth Circuit Court as an authority for upholding the constitutionality of the PWA title of the original national recovery act. The Department of Justice also is supposed to be including citations from the article in the Hoosac mills case before the Supreme Court, which will test the AAA processing taxes.

When President Roosevelt launched the works relief program, he stressed the fact that he would take personal responsibility for its success and would personally approve all projects.

But the works program hasn't gone so well, so when the mayors of 100 cities called on him, in a not very happy frame of mind over the delays and confusion, Mr. Roosevelt explained that one trouble was that he had been compelled to sign thousands of allotment papers which never should have reached his desk. He said this was red tape, but that it was not his fault because Congress put it in the law.

When Harry Hopkins addressed the mayors' conference, the mayors were loaded with rough questions for him. But he fooled them. At the conclusion of his remarks, he explained that he must rush away because of an important engagement at the White House. The mayors didn't get to ask the questions. And neither could the reporters find anybody around the White House who saw Hopkins arrive there from the mayors' conference. He may have forgotten about the engagement in the rush out of the mayors' conference.

Business Urged To Wage United New Deal War

By the Associated Press.

A suggestion that industry "gang up" and join utilities in a fight against "radical socialists" is advanced by Edward F. Hutton, chairman of the board of General Foods Corporation, in the current issue of Public Utilities Fortnightly.

Noting what he calls a trend toward elimination of bigness in all corporate structures, Hutton remarks that "all industry, big and little, has a stake in this controversy between the Administration and the public utilities."

All industry, he asserts, will suffer if "the Government should succeed in carrying out the plans so carefully drafted by the radical socialists."

His article is titled, "Let Business Gang Up."

Recommends Lobby.

He also recommends the creation of "a great business and industrial lobby" to support legislation deemed fair to the business interests.

After reviewing recent legislative action against public utility companies, he writes:

"Why hasn't all business and industry joined the fight? . . . If the major industries of this country do not hang together, if they do not openly call their stockholders and employes to the colors of a 1935 declaration of independence, the radicals that now infest the executive and legislative departments of our Government will joyously hang them all separately.

"So I say, 'Let's gang up.'

Seeks Collective Action.

"The business men of the country, the owners of stocks and bonds or any other property, the holders of insurance policies, and the depositors in banks must realize that the only way to prevent regimentation, collectivism or any other ism is for all groups to join together in one great group which will come to the help of any individual group when it is attacked."

C. M. Chester, president of General Foods Corporation, said in New York the article represented Hutton's private views.

"General Foods Corporation has no political attitude on any subject," Chester said. "We had no knowledge in advance of the published statement by Mr. Hutton and it must be considered as an expression of Mr. Hutton's personal views."

Coal Body's Authority Challenged by Railroad

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 19 (AP).—The Louisville & Nashville Railroad, James B. Hill, president, announced today, will disregard the bituminous coal commission's recent order that mail-carrying railroads shall purchase only coal mined in accordance with the Guffey act.

Pending a conference between carrier representatives and Post-office Department officials, the railroad president said, his road denies authority of the commission to enforce the order. Hill explained his position was based on an opinion prepared at his request by R. V. Fletcher, general counsel for the Association of American Railroads, Washington. The opinon held that railroads, regardless of mail contracts, are exempt from the commission's ruling.

Roosevelt Is Silent On China, Italy, Farley

By the Associated Press.

Subjects on which President Roosevelt declined to comment yesterday at his press conference:

1. The China situation. Mr. Roosevelt explained that all he knew was what he had read in the papers.

2. A report that Italy planned reprisals if United States oil shipments were embargoed. Mr. Roosevelt said he hadn't heard of any representations being made to the State Department.

3. The report that Postmaster General Farley would resign in January. Mr. Roosevelt said that was the same old story.

increase in the number of aircraft assigned * * *

"There are insufficient regular officers in the G. H. Q. Air Force to properly staff, command, and train the units even at existing strength.

Criticizes Term.

"The term of active duty of the reserve officer pilot is insufficient in length.

"The flying cadet is not as efficient as he would be, if commissioned as a reserve officer."

Gen. Andrews asked more adequate funds for the field training of G. H. Q. air force units be allotted to the adjutant general, and requested more specific information on amounts available. Estimates of funds needed to carry the group through the last half of the fiscal year have been submitted to the War Department.

A War Department circular specifying hours and types of required flying was declared "detrimental in its effects upon training and should not apply to units of the air force."

It was further recommended that present policy be modified to permit the detail of reserve officers to extended active duty for a minimum period of five years, with Air Corps training center graduates given priority on air force details. Reserve commissions were recommended for all flying cadets now with the G. H. Q. air force, and to cadets completing courses at the center.

Urges Ranges.

Gen. Andrews not only asked that "an effort be made" to construct hard-surfaced runways at all Air Corps stations, but also that "gunnery and bombing ranges, adequate to the requirements of bases requiring such facilities, be provided."

Meanwhile, it was learned that a special board named to study Army Air Corps personnel has virtually completed its report. One of the matters touched on in the Andrews report—the relationship between the mobile service squadrons of the G. H. Q. air force and the station complements—is said to have been covered in the personnel study, under direction of Col. William S. Browning.

Recommendations in the Andrews report for increase in the plane strength of the mobile air striking force is in line with repeated War Department recommendations for more ships all along the line in the Army Air Corps. More than half of the Army's present plane equipment is claimed to be obsolescent. Total planes in Army service are in the neighborhood of 1,200, it was said yesterday at the War Department, while 2,320 ships is the department's goal.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former Army chief of staff, in his final annual report, recommended construction of 800 planes a year for the Army as a whole, as a necessary modernization move.

RooseveltNamesThomas As Appeals Court Judge

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday appointed Seth Thomas, of Iowa, to the Eighth Federal Court of Appeals, succeeding Judge Charles B. Faris, who is retiring.

Judge Faris will leave November 30. In his letter to the President asking retirement he said he was suffering physical disabilities.

Sanctions Halt Coal.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Nov. 19 (AP).—Coal shipments from Czechoslovakia to Italy were suspended today because the application of sanctions against Italy made payments through a clearing system impossible. The Italian coal monopoly was reluctant to pay cash.

30 More Firms Listed by Berry For NRA Clinic

Major Business Concerns to Attend Conference Here December 9.

George L. Berry, co-ordinator for industrial co-operation, yesterday made public a list of 30 concerns which have accepted his invitation to attend the conference December 9, at which plans for supplanting the NRA are expected to be discussed.

The list is in addition to a similar list made public several days ago. About 5,000 invitations have been sent to business concerns, trade associations and labor representatives. Hundreds of replies have been received, but Berry has as yet given no indication of the number of acceptances and rejections.

The list made public yesterday follows:

Libby-Owens Ford Glass Co., Toledo, Ohio; Johns-Manville, New York City; Perfect Circle Co., Hagerstown, Ind.; International Paper Co., New York City; Dennison Mfg. Co., Framingham, Mass.; Johnson & Johnson, New Brunswick, N. J.; Bristol-Myers Co., New York City; Morris Plan Bank, Baltimore, Md.; New Amsterdam Casualty Co., Baltimore, Md.; American Air Lines, Inc., Chicago, Ill.; American Gypsum Co., Port Clinton, Oho; American Smelting & Refining Co., New York City; Phelps Dodge Corp., New York City; Anaconda Copper Mining Co., Butte, Mont.; International Nickel Co., New York City.

B. F. Goodrich Co., Akron, Ohio; Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Akron, Ohio; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Culver City, Calif.; Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., Louisville, Ky.; Truscan Steel Co., Youngstown, Ohio; Bulova Watch Co., New York City.

Eberhard Faber Pencil Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.; General Electric Co., Schnectady, N. Y.; Westinghouse Electric Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Thomas A. Edison, Inc., Orange, N. J.; Underwood-Elliott Fisher Co., New York City; International Business Machines, New York City; Remington Rand, Inc., New York City; American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corporation, New York City; Timken Roller Bearing Co., Canton, Ohio.

Macaroni Maker Is Slain in Chicago

City Gets 5th Gang Fashion Killing in 6 Days.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Sam Incandella, head of a macaroni manufacturing company, was shot dead today by several gunmen who entered his office on West Chicago avenue.

It was the fifth slaying carried out in gangland fashion here in six days.

Incandella's slayers fled from the office and sped away in an automobile. Associates said he had recently expressed fears for his life.

The earlier victims believed to have been killed by gang guns were Vincent Cesare, 35, a contractor and member of a plasterer's union, who was found shot to death near suburban Elmhurst November 14; Frank Stypulkowski, a paroled convict, slain in his automobile on the Northwest Side the same night, and Joseph Scaffido, of Milwaukee, and Angelo Kleronomos, waylaid and killed in an automobile November 15.

Just previously, the President was in consultation with Peek. The latter, he said, promised to have a full report ready when the President returns from his Warm Springs, Ga., Thanksgiving trip. Mr. Roosevelt said his knowledge of public reaction to the treaty was confined to what he had read in the papers.

Hull's statement was made in a brief message to the National Foreign Trade Council, meeting at Houston, Tex. He reported a growing realization that trade barriers must be levelled and contended that reciprocal tariff concessions tended toward a general reduction of import levies. The secretary added:

"Our program is, therefore, to be considered as a trade restorative effort aimed not only at the rehabilitation of our own foreign trade, but at the restoration of the profitable volume of international trade the world over, which is essential for the restoration of prosperity in the United States on a sound basis."

Sayre Lauds Program.

"Our program is essentially an effort to substitute the instruments of peace for those of commercial warfare and thus to provide an important element in the maintenance of peace itself."

Speaking in New York, Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, praised the program and asserted that America must buy more foreign goods if it is to increase its sales abroad.

"An increase in both imports and exports," Sayre said, "offers the only practicable and safe pathway along which our country can proceed if it would avoid contributing to further world economic and financial dislocations which can bring our own economic structure down upon us like a house of cards."

At Houston the reciprocal tariff reduction policy was upheld as effective action toward the elimination of international trade deterrents by Henry F. Grady, chief of the State Department's Division of Trade Agreements.

He asserted a multiplicity of trade restrictions, imposed by Nations seeking to solve their depression problems individually, had reacted harmfully on other nations.

"I believe that the world is now beginning to realize that the only solution to its difficulties is a freer exchange of goods," he said.

Vandenberg declined to comment on specific details of the treaty until he could see "precisely to what extent American agriculture had been sold down the river for the sake of an international fiction." He added:

"We are bound to get the worst of it under our so-called 'most-favored nation' practice, because we must give all these Canadian benefits to 30 other nations from which we get nothing in return."

A protest against the treaty was taken to the White House by Mrs. Edith N. Rogers, Republican Representative from Massachusetts.

She complained to a Presidential secretary that in her opinion it would work to the disadvantage of New England.

Meanwhile, the Export-Import Bank announced yesterday it was prepared to give financial assistance to American exporters whose returns on sales to Brazil have been held up by currency restrictions imposed by that country.

Between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000 in balances due American business men has been "blocked" because Brazil is unable to raise sufficient foreign currency.

Measures adopted by the Export-Import Bank are:

1. An agreement to purchase, from creditors, Brazilian government refunding notes to a total of $17,000,000. The purchase will be limited to 60 per cent of the creditor's holdings.

2. An agreement to accept the remaining 40 per cent as partial security for cash advances for future exports sold on credit in Brazil or any other foreign country.

These measures are to become effective after the Brazilian-American reciprocal trade agreement has been ratified and after the Brazilian Legislature has enacted legislation enabling it to issue notes for funding blocked balances.

The trade pact was ratified by the Brazilian Senate last week and will become effective 30 days after exchange of ratifications by the two governments. President Roosevelt's proclamation is the only American ratification required.

Special Agent Of PWA Here Killed in N. J.

100th Traffic Death Victim Monday Identified as Baltimorean.

Eugene W. Golsen, of 2900 Connecticut avenue northwest, a special agent of the Public Works Administration, was struck by a truck and killed yesterday at Boundbrook, N. J., the Associated Press reported.

Washington's hundredth traffic death victim of the year yesterday was identified as Harry A. Baldwin, 50, of Baltimore. He was killed Monday night when struck by a street car at Pennsylvania avenue and John Marshall place.

Golsen, a former employe of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, had pulled his car off the road to fix a tire when he was struck. Lawrence Meyer, of Newark, driver of the truck, was held on a technical charge of manslaughter. Golsen was a former football star at Georgetown University.

Inquests into Baldwin's death and the death of William A. Brooks, a baker at the National Training School for Boys, who was killed Sunday at Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, will be held tomorrow at the District Morgue.

Held in Assault

Paul Sanford, 21, of the 400 block of G street northwest, is held at police headquarters in Alexandria on a charge of felonious assault on Policeman George W. Embry, and Carlyle C. Kirk, 30, of 30 New York avenue northwest, and Edward McGee, 23, of the 1700 block of H street northeast, are being held for investigation.

According to police, Officers Embrey and William Bayliss halted an automobile early yesterday, on the 400 block of Mount Vernon avenue, for investigation. The path of the car was blocked by the police car and Embrey got out of the police cruiser and was standing between that and the car occupied by the three men. The driver of the latter is said to have started his machine, jamming Embrey between the two cars, and then to have driven off in the direction of Washington. A radio call resulted in the arrest of the three men. Embrey suffered a crushed hand.

Lamson on Trial Again for Slaying

Court Refuses Appeal for Jurisdiction.

By the Associated Press.

San Jose, Calif., Nov. 19.—David A. Lamson's third trial on a charge of murdering his attractive wife, Allene Thorpe Lamson, opened here today with prosecution and defense maneuvering for a jury.

The former Stanford University press official, who spent months in San Quentin's condemned row before his original conviction was set aside, sought to delay the trial to appeal to the United States Supreme Court, but permission was denied.

His attorney, Leo Friedman, declared the defense wished to force the Federal District Court in San Francisco to consider jurisdiction of the case. The Ninth United States Circuit Court refused yesterday to intervene.

The defense in the former trials, the second of which ended in a jury deadlock, claimed Mrs. Lamson was killed in an accidental bathtub fall in her Stanford campus home Memorial Day, 1933. The prosecution charged Lamson killed his wife with an iron pipe.

Canada Game Fishing Is 'Hope' of Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

A visit to Canada—and possibly some game fishing there—is one of President Roosevelt's hopes for the future.

But he emphasized yesterday that he had made no plans for the trip and that as far as he knew now, it still was just a hope.

The President disclosed his ambition at his press conference when his attention was called to reports that he had accepted an invitation by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King to visit him in Canada. The Dominion leader was an overnight guest of the President at the White House during negotiations over the Canadian-American trade agreeement.

6,000 Lawyers in N. Y. Ask WPA for $36 Week

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—About 60 attorney members of the Lawyers' Security League demonstrated quietly in a corridor of the Works Progress Administration offices today. They said they represented 6,000 needy among the city's 16,000 lawyers and were attempting to obtain assurance of a $36 weekly minimum wage on WPA legal projects. They also wished permission to retain any private fees and to have provision made for office upkeep.

No lawyers had yet been employed on the 15 WPA projects set up for them, they said. They were not admitted to Administrator Victor Ridder's office.

By the Associated Press.

The contention that Lincoln L. McCandless, former delegate from Hawaii to the United States, wants more than $791,000 from the Government for land which he had valued at $15,162 for tax purposes was made yesterday in a brief filed with the Supreme Court by Stanley Reed, solicitor general.

The high court was urged not to review a ruling by lower courts awarding Mr. and Mrs. McCandless $220,863 for 4,080 acres in Hawaii to be used for a naval ammunition depot.

Tense Mountain Folk Hear Murder Story of Convicted Girl

Associated Press Photos.

The population of the small mountain village of Wise Va., (above) jammed the courthouse to hear testimony in the trial of Edith Maxwell, 21-year-old former school teacher, found guilty for the murder of her father. Edith Maxwell (below) listens intently as witnesses unfold their stories.

ask for as severe punishment as was given to Edith.

The Maxwell family remained calm until a member of their counsel, R. P. Bruce, had made a motion to set aside the verdict and asked several days in which to file a brief. It was granted.

Then Edith, shoulders shaking with grief, threw her arms around a woman standing near by and said: "For God's sake take care of my mother, I don't care about myself."

Earl Maxwell carried his mother out to an automobile.

"Oh my Lord, oh my Lord," the aged woman was muttering.

Edith was taken back to the red jail where she has been a prisoner since July.

Child Defends Her Sister.

The courtroom, filled to suffocation with hill people, was hushed for the first time in this trial when Edith, a brown hat on the right side of her head and wearing an attractive blue dress, climbed on to the witness stand to tell her own version of what happened last July 20, when her father tried to whip her for staying out too late with a boy.

Earlier a still stranger scene had been enacted.

Edith's sister, Mary Catherine, 11, with corn-colored hair and a bright smile, went bravely to the witness stand, and there, her legs dangling six inches above the floor, told how she had heard her father threaten to attack Edith with a butcher knife. The child began to sniffle in the midst of her testimony and toward the end broke down and sobbed into the sleeve of her blue coat while lawyers waited for her to recover. She told substantially the same story Edith related an hour later.

In the excitement of that ordeal on the stand, Edith forgot her outside schooling and the rules of grammar they teach there. She lapsed back into the mountain dialect, her words tumbling out so rapidly that the court stenographer had to ask her to go slower. First she told of the party that started all the trouble:

"I went up to Wise that night," she said, "along with my cousin and not meaning no harm. Along in the evening Raymond Meade came along and said he would give me a lift back to my house in the pound. There was some more people in the car with him but we let them out down the road a piece and Raymond Meade says to me 'let's go to the Little Ritz and get something to eat.' We did and Raymond says would I like something to drink. I don't drink so I ordered a bag of potato chips—I eat potato chips all the time."

Even the Judge Smiles.

Even 78-year-old Judge H. A. W. Skeen, a stiff, stand-up collar around his neck and a toothpick in the corner of his mouth, smiled at that, and Edith went racing on:

"I got a bottle of ginger ale, too. Raymond took some liquor and poured some into my glass, though Heaven knows I didn't want it. So while Raymond was out of the room I threw my liquor out the window and put some ginger ale in the glass. It was a-getting late and I says to Raymond I must be departing home because I was going black-berrying the next day. Raymond took me home and my sister, Mary Catherine, says to me 'Your bed covers is in pappy's room, but don't go in there. He's drunk and he's going to run ma out of the house tomorrow.'

"I had to have my bed covers so I went into his room and he says to me 'I'm going to whip you,' and I says 'Pappy, don't you do it.' I backed out to another room and he comes after me.

Seizes Butcher Knife.

"There was a butcher knife a-lying on the table and he grabbed it and I yelled, 'Pappy don't you cut me.' He grabbed me by the hair of the head and kept pulling me on toward the kitchen. It hurt.

"We knocked over some pans while we was racketing out there. I got away but he comes after me and says, 'I'll show you I can whip you.' He grabbed a-hold of my flesh near the shoulder and pushed me down against the wall. I was scared."

The girl sobbed and fished for a handkerchief. The tears made canals across the rouge and powder on her face.

"I felt something against my back and I reached around for it," she continued. "It was a shoe. It used to be my shoe, but I gave 'em to Mama. I had to do something, so I grabbed the shoe and hit him. I don't know how many times I hit him when I was coming up from the wall because it was so dark, but when I come up from the floor I come up striking like this."

Half out of her chair jumped the tall, black-haired girl and seized the brown, battered shoe. She flailed the air with it, her strong right arm rising and falling, the sharp heel swinging a vicious arc close to the jury. Then she sat down and cried some more.

"Pappy Was A-Yelling."

"I broke away," she went on, "and I knew I had to hide because Pappy was a-yelling now that he was going to kill me. Pappy had ripped most all the clothes off my upper body, so I grabbed up something and went out in the street. Pappy was a-yelling: 'Why can't a man whip his own child!' I made up my mind right then to leave home and I went back and told Pappy and Mama. Pappy says 'mind down now, Edith, you've got a good home here.' I says 'Yes, Pappy, but you fuss me even when I go to the neighbors' houses. You can whip me when you're sober and I'll take it when you're drunk you try to kill me.'"

Then she was turned over for cross-examination and the spectators came forward intensely in their seats, expecting fireworks. Nothing much hppened, because Edith stuck to her story and went back over every detail of it without any serious variations. Sometimes she was weeping, sometimes storming at Commonwealth's Attorney Fred S. Greear, but her brain called up answers quickly and she walked off the stand with her head high.

Mary Also a Fighter.

Little Mary Catherine, too, gave as good as she got from the prosecution. Pressed at one point because she could not remember the details of where the butcher knife was and what clothing her father wore, the child leaned forward in her chair and yelled at the prosecutor:

"And you wouldn't remember so good either if you had been so scared as I was that night, with Pappy a-yelling and a-cursing and Edith a-trying to outrun him."

"What did you father say when he found out Edith wasn't home?" asked O. M. Vicars, of the prosecution.

"He said, 'A man ought to break her damned neck,'" said the child, pausing a moment before getting out the profanity.

Mountaineers Show Maxwell Girl No Mercy

By the United Press.

Wise, Va., Nov. 19.—An old man and a boy, both born in the mountains, walked down the trail tonight talking about the verdict that had just been brought into "Gov'ment Court" against Edith Maxwell.

"It was a right fair verdict," the old man said. "It shows that your sins will trip you. Edith Maxwell hits her pappy and they gives her 25 years in prison. Many is the time my pappy whipped me and I never lifted a hand to strike back."

The old man plodded ahead, heedless of the automobiles that came skimming along the highway, but the boy—living in the present—thumbed at the cars for a ride.

18 Years Plenty, Says Boy.

"I'd a-thought 18 years would have been a-plenty," the boy said, but the old man cut him off short.

"It couldn't have been too much," he growled.

That voiced the opinion of the mountain elders who sat through two days of testimony. They are not interested in points of law and evidence, but in the fact that a 21-year-old girl had stayed out past 9 o'clock and had hit her "pappy" when he tried to whip her.

A long "ah" of approval came from the spectators when the jury said Edith Maxwell must spend 25 years in the State prison.

The law of the statute books can plead self defense for Edith Maxwell, but there is no plea she can make against the unwritten law of the trail of the lonesome pine.

These were some of the remarks overheard as the mountaineers left court and scattered back to their cabins:

"She's in for it now, and she brought it on her own back."

Ethiopian Offensive Reported Successful

Harar, Ethiopia, Nov. 19 (Reuters).—Fitaurara Eyle, Emperor Haile Selassie's chief huntsman, who is in charge of a part of the southern forces, launched a vigorous counter-attack upon the Italians today.

He was reported to have inflicted severe losses on the enemy between Anale and Gorrahei and to have recaptured Anale, taken recently by the Fascists.

Brown Reveals Plan to Better District Force

Superintendent Stresses Personnel Need in Five-Year Program.

Reiterating his conviction that the ultimate answer to Washington police efficiency is increased personnel, particularly in the uniformed branches of the department, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, yesterday embarked on a program for increased effectiveness of the present force.

Maj. Brown's program of improvement covers a period of five years and includes personnel, equipment and existing laws and, possibly, either changes in the boundaries of existing police precincts or the creation of new ones.

His first step, taken yesterday, was to ask his assistants to point out weaknesses in the existing setup. In a memorandum to commanding officers, Maj. Brown said:

"The department is preparing a five-year program for the activities of the police department, having as its objective improvement in police service to meet demands resulting from increased population, increased motor vehicle registration, and the increase in the number of out-of-town visitors, and changing social and economic conditions.

"You will submit, not later than December 15, 1935, suggestions for improvement in police service in the way of increased personnel, improvement in equipment, changes in the boundaries of the precincts, additional precincts, bureaus or units, additional laws or regulations, or modification or changes in the existing laws, also changes in the existing manual governing the force; having in mind the development of the highest degree of efficiency in the department."

Farm Chief Flays AAA, Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

Kankakee, Ill., Nov. 19.—President Roosevelt and his agricultural program were targets of attack in an address today by Milo Reno, Des Moines, Iowa, president of the National Farm Holiday Association.

Speaking before 4,000 delegates to the thirty-first annual convention of the National Farmers Educational and Co-operative Union, Reno branded the $4,800,000 relief appropriation as "the corruption fund."

He said that many of the Farm-Union sponsored measures were defeated during the last session of Congress "because of President Roosevelt's influence."

Reno offered his solution for the Nation's farm problem. "Let the Government consider farm land as the country's basic asset," he said, "and not permit any man to own more land than he or his famly needs for existence and livelihood."

He declared that "there is no overproduction in the United States; not when millions of people are crying for food. The fact that people have no money with which to buy is the real depression trouble, and not overproduction."

No Nobel Peace Prize To Be Given This Year

Oslo, Norway, Nov. 19 (AP).—No Nobel Peace Prize will be awarded this year, the committee announced today.

Presumably, the committee decided no individual merited the honor, a stand it has taken on previous occasions.

Among those suggested for the award was Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, but members of the committee explained recently his name had not been sent in prior to the deadline for nominations.

Men's Beauty Parlor.

New York, Nov. 19 (U.P.).—Gloria Bristol today opened the first men's beauty parlor. Facial treatment includes a mineral scrub, steaming, gland stimulation pack, color restoring treatment, gland oil massage, milk bath, skin tonic lotion and a treatment to remove wrinkles. With a haircut, shampoo and shave the cost is $15.

Soviet Subway Diggers Find Secret Hideaway

Moscow, Nov. 19 (AP).—An underground retreat built by Russia's czars 400 years ago, containing a supply of cannonballs, was discovered today by workers digging an extension of the Moscow subway.

The single chamber, large enough to accommodate 200 persons, was situated 65 feet beneath the site of the old Kitai wall, razed by the Bolsheviks. The wall surrounded inner Moscow, known as the Kitai Gorod, or fortified city.

The supply of cannonballs was taken as an indication the chamber was used partly as a secret ammunition dump.

Prof. Rtemi Arcechovsky, of the Academy of History, expressed the belief the room was built in 1535.

The remains of the walls and the outer fortress built in the sixteenth century by Czar Feodor and razed in the eighteenth century by the Empress Elizabeth were also discovered.

Parley Bids Accepted.

London, Nov. 19 (AP).—The Irish Free State and Italy accepted invitations today to the naval conference here next month, completing the list of acceptances from powers and dominions. The conference will begin December 6.

Doctor Admits 'Mercy Killing' 48 Years Ago

Bridgeport Man's Story Is Quoted by Paper; 'Never Regretted' Deed.

By the Associated Press.

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 19.—The Bridgeport Post says today that a Bridgeport physician committed a "mercy killing" in North Brookfield, Mass., 48 years ago.

The Post quotes the physician as saying he "never once regretted" the act and "if the occasion arose again today" he would "unhesitatingly commit another such mercy killing."

In describing the event, the newspaper says the doctor asserted:

"The man was hopelessly wounded. His face from chin to eyes was torn away. He had accidentally shot himself while hunting. Some of the pellets penetrated his brain. It didn't seem possible he could live, and if he had, he would have been a dangerous maniac."

The physician is quoted as saying he gave the man an extra dose of a sleeping potion after the man's family had told him "to do what I thought was right."

The Post reports the doctor said he had practiced under the influence of Yankee physicians whose first instruction was "save the life" and next, "ease the suffering."

Duce to Control All Italian Gold By Monopoly

Sweeping Order Given; Promises to Return Metal in Year.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Nov. 19.—Premier Mussolini declared a monopoly on all of Italy's gold tonight as the nation stood firm on a program of no compromise with countries applying sanctions against it because of the invasion of Ethiopia.

Il Duce authorized the National Institute for Foreign Exchange—with the co-operation of the ministry of finance and the supreme finance commission to control all gold transactions of Italians at home and abroad.

Italians will not be allowed to sell gold without first offering it to the government monopoly, which agrees to return "in not more than one year" the same amount of gold of the same fineness.

Offer 5 Per Cent.

The government offered 5 per cent interest on gold turned over to the monopoly.

All sellers of gold must declare all their holdings, and must record every transaction. Importation of gold will be licensed. The minister of finance was authorized to investigate past sales of the metal.

The program, seen as making possible the future requisition of private gold holdings, came after Fascism's highest authority, the grand council, was understood to have decided on continued resistance to penalties levied against it by the League of Nations, and to have planned further moves in the Ethiopian invasion.

Although a communique said only that the council heard and commented on Premier Mussolini's report of the political and military situation, informed foreign circles expressed the opinion Italy would "listen" for peace proposals, although not offering them.

These quarters said Italy would stand on a program of "watchful waiting" concerning non-sanctionist countries such as the United States and Germany.

An official spokesman declared the United States will not receive special consideration if it adopts further restrictive measures as part of its neutrality program.

Measure Undecided.

Asserting he could not say what specific measures Italy would take if the American Government embargoed oil and other commodities, exportation of which is not now restricted, this spokesman declared Italy would decide on any counter measures as the occasion arises.

At the same time, he made it clear there would be no exception to Italy's announced program of "an eye for an eye."

Fascists began developing a boycott of sanctionist countries, as the sanctions sector of Il Duce's corporative state system began to function.

A boycott of goods from those countries was voted by 130,000 grocers in 94 provincial syndicates.

Meetings with similar programs were being held throughout the country.

to the rights and obligations of other nations in China under the Nine-Power Treaty.

There was speculation, last night, as to whether the American Government might soon reiterate its attitude in a further formal communication to Japan or take other action calculated to invoke the nine-power pact, designed to guarantee the territorial and political integrity of China.

Note Considered.

That a step of such character had been considered, however, was virtually conceded by the Undersecretary of State when he said in response to a question that the State Department had made no decisions and had no plans of any kind on that line.

The American Embassy, raised only this year to that status from a legation, is situated in the historic north China city of Peiping, along with the diplomatic residences of other foreign nations. The city lies in one of the five provinces affected.

There was a possibility that the impending cleavage between north China and China proper might make it necessary for all foregn countries to move their embassies to Nanking, seat of the central Chinese government.

Phillips parried a question as to whether he thought the United States would withdraw its infantry regiment stationed in China.

Seven hundred officers and men of the Fifteenth Infantry are stationed at Tientsin, also in north China, to help military forces of other foreign nations guard the railroad from Peiping to the sea. A smaller detachment of Marines is at Peiping as an Embassy guard.

On Trial for Assassinating King

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Lawyer Ousted, Terrorists Start Hunger Strike

Desbons Says Nations Are Afraid of What He Could Reveal.

By the Associated Press.

Aix-en-Provence, France, Nov. 19. Three Croat terrorists, on trial for complicity in the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia, began a hunger strike tonight in protest against the disbarring of their lawyer.

As George Desbons, hired by Croats of the United States to defend the three men, was dragged from the courtroom by police, he shouted: "I was disbarred by French justice in order to prevent damaging revelations of responsibility of certain foreign nations in the assassination."

Desbons, in a statement, declared: "Six months ago a Balkan diplomat offered me 400,000 francs to insert three questions at the trial which he said would 'start the next war in Europe.'"

Refuse Substitute.

He asserted that Serbians who were jealous of King Alexander plotted his assassination at Paris in July, 1934. He said he had filed proofs of the plot in the Paris Court of Appeals, "knowing I would be disbarred here."

The trial, which opened yesterday, was suspended until tomorrow, when the defendants—Mio Kraj, Ivan Rajtich and Zvonimir Pospechil—refused to accept the service of Jacques Saudino, whom the court selected as their counsel to succeed Desbons.

Declaring they would have only Desbons, the Croats said through their spokesman:

"Our American brothers chose Desbons because they knew he alone was capable of getting us justice."

Desbons' removal resulted from his violent criticism of the presiding justice and his accusation that the prosecutor was a liar.

Holds Kraj Hypnotized.

The defendants' counsel had asserted he understood an envelope containing newspaper clippings, which the jury foreman said he destroyed as of "no importance," actually indicated the weapon of the murderer had come from Italy.

The assassin, Dmitrov Kerine Velitchko, alias Petrus Kalemen, was fatally shot after he fired from the running board of the royal car at Marseille, October 9, 1934, fatally wounding King Alexander and Louis Barthou, French foreign minister.

Desbons argued that if it could be shown the killer's weapon came from Italy, his clients would benefit. They are alleged to be members of the Ustachi terrorist band, whose headquarters have been reported to be in Hungary.

Desbons violently objected to destruction of the clippings, saying sarcastically the act showed "Republican justice."

Accused by the prosecutor of sending the clippings to the jury in a "shady" effort to implicate Italy, Desbons called the prosecutor a liar.

Earlier, the defendants' lawyer had moved unsuccessfully for acquital of Kraj, who he said was "irresponsible" because he was "under the hypnotic influence" of Dr. Ante Pavelich, reputed leader of the Ustachi Society.

U. S. Croats to Meet

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP).—Moved by recent events in Europe, leaders of the Croatian independence movement summoned today a national congress of their organization to meet here November 30.

"It has been called to push our fight for freedom," said Capt. Ante M. Doshen, supreme secretary of the national representation for the independence of Croatia.

This organization has financed the defense of the three Croats on trial at Aix-en-Province, France, on charges of complicity in the assassinating of King Alexander of Yugoslavia.

Doshen said the disbarment of Georges Desbons by a French court—reported in dispatches today—was a contributory cause for calling the meeting. Desbons was defense counsel for the accused men.

But European conditions, the belief that war was imminent there which is held by members of his organization, and the hope that opportunity might soon develop for Croatia, liberated from the Yugoslavian realm, were more impelling motives, he added.

"The purposes and aims of the congress cannot be fully discussed at this time," he said, "but we expect our members from all over the United States, Canada and Europe to attend."

Doshen said his group, which raised about $10,000 to defend the Croats on trial in France, still had confidence in French justice despite the action against Desbons.

Selassie Flies To Meet Italy's Invading Hosts

Destination Is Kept Secret to Prevent Attack on Him by Foes.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, Nov. 19.—Emperor Haile Selassie, his destination and route closely guarded, left his capital hurridly by airplane today, believed on his way to take personal command at the front.

Which front was problematical, as it was unofficially reported both that he left for Dessye, Ethiopian war base in the north, and for Harar, Ethiopia's second city and headquarters for operations on the southern front.

It was announced officially that for an indefinite time it is forbidden to report the Emperor's movements, lest the Italians attempt to bomb or capture him.

The Emperor left at dawn after prayers at St. George's, in which his entire family participated. Then the imperial cavalcade rolled seven miles to the airport on Akai plain.

Scout Plane Hunts Foes.

A reconnaissance plane went up and scouted in all directions to make sure the air was clear of Italian planes. Assured the horizon was clear, the Emperor entered a large cabin monoplane, escorted by two biplane fighting ships, and roared away into the morning haze.

Most of the war correspondents here guessed the Emperor went to Dessye, since a great battle is reported brewing in the north, and left by motor car for the northern city. Bumping and careening, strung out over a 50-mile stretch of terrible road, the correspondents' caravan, which left for Dessye, resembled the Rover Boys in East Africa.

Dessye is 155 miles north-northeast of Addis Ababa and 172 miles south of Makale, the new Italian northern front. It is an important caravan junction.

Harar is 206 miles east of Addis Ababa and about the same distance from Gorahai, the new Italian advance base in the south. It is the second largest city in Ethiopia.

Supreme Test Awaited.

The emperor is expected to direct the operation of all his forces—those in the north under Ras Seyoum, Ras Kassa and Ras Mulu Geta; those in the south and east under Dejazmatch Nassibu. The supreme test for the Ethiopian warriors, fighting largely with antiquated rifles and lances against Italy's modern armament, likely will come before the emperor returns to his capital.

In Haile Selassie's absence, the crown prince, Asfa Wosan, is in charge of the government here.

The Arks of the Covenant, calculated to inspire the Ethiopians to highest valor, were sent to the fronts November 7 ahead of the emperor.

A Red Cross unit, which includes Bruce Ostien, of Philadelphia, left for the front yesterday and another will depart tomorrow.

Peace Talk Held Futile.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Nov. 19.—Emperor Haile Selassie in a final public statement said:

"Any discussions of peace with Italy at the present moment would be futile.

"No one seeks it more urgently than I, but at this moment it is perfectly useless to start peace negotiations on any basis, under any conditions whatsoever.

"This subject cannot be discussed so long as the invaders stand on our soil."

Ethiopia, he said, "is not being approached nor has it been approached on any project for peace" by Italy or a neutral.

He insisted his troops have not yet suffered defeat, for they "have not yet arrived at the front in their full strength. Until they do, claims of victories can only be empty boasts."

Japan to Set Up Rule Today in Chinese State made by Chiang, in line with the idea of doing all possible to prevent a situation which might result in his overthrow in Nanking.

Sung would be authorized to settle all outstanding problems in North China with the Japanese.

Chiang will agree not to send any troops north—unless pressure of Chinese opinion in the Yangtse Valley forces him to do so—and will work quietly to effect a general program of Sino-Japanese co-operation in all parts of China.

The cabinet discussed the situation in Tokyo yesterday but War Minister Y. Kawashima was absent. Foreign Minister K. Hirota discussed the recent incidents in Shanghai, which resulted in the landing of more than 2,000 Blue Jackets following the killing of a Japanese sailor, and the general situation in north China.

It was understood Hirota indicated the foreign office and the army are in complete accord regarding the program to be followed.

Officials of the war, navy and foreign offices probably will confer in Tokyo as soon as Gen. Kawashima returns to the capital.

If the pressure of anti-Japanese elements becomes so acute that Chiang must act, it was said, he probably will throw some of the troops of Marshall Chang Hsueh-Liang, former Manchurian war lord, into a northern movement but will not risk any of his own well-trained Nanking divisions.

Tokyo (Wednesday), Nov. 20 (AP). The Japanese government denies responsibility for separatist tendencies in North China and insists the projected autonomy for five provinces will not mean their detachment from sovereignty of the Chinese government, a foreign office spokesman said today.

While reliable sources indicated Japan's army will control the proposed autonomous state of North China, the foreign office spokesman declared:

"North China will be no more separated from Nanking than the Canton government, ruling the southern provinces of Kwangtung and Kwangsi, has been for many years."

"Since Americans, British, Italians and persons of other nationalities are employed as advisers to the Nanking government or as officials of Chinese maritime and customs services, why should there be any objection to the employment of Japanese advisers in the North China regime?"

notes to me on bloody cards such as, 'they got me, but we got a huge number of them,' and 'long live the Disperata (Desperate) Squadron,' which he asked Ostini to give to me.

"Throughout the return flight, Ostini's relief pilot held a finger in a bullet hole in the gas tank.

"We found each plane of the 20 had 10 or 15 bullet holes."

A mechanic, Sergt. Birago, although shot in the leg while working a machine gun, which became jammed, climbed to the upper machine gun post and continued firing until Ostini ordered him to descend. He will be proposed for a medal of valor.

Ciano said his ship was struck by three anti-aircraft shells and 36 machine gun and rifle bullets.

An official communique praised Il Duce's two sons:

"Attention is called to the heroism and disdain of danger demonstrated by all the personnel," it said.

"Particular mention must be made of Vittorio and Bruno Mussolini who, when their machine gun ammunition was exhausted, continued to shoot with rifles carried in their plane."

Count Ciano said that when the enemy was sighted, "I gave the signal for the ground attack."

"We dove within 100 feet of the ground and dropped incendiary bombs on the camp," he said. "At the same time we machine-gunned them.

"We dove in Indian file. As each plane swooped down, it dropped bombs and simultaneously worked machine guns.

"We saw the Ethiopians scatter fast, but we got more than 1,000 of them. Incendiary bombs set fire to the encampment."

Big Battle Impends

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

With the Italian Northern Armies, via Asmara, Nov. 19.—The Italian advanced position around Makale was virtually surrounded tonight by large and small Ethiopitan detachments and the bloodiest battle of the Italo-Ethiopian war appeared imminent.

As native Askaris sent from Makale and Mount Gundi engaged outposts of Ras Seyoum's 30,000 shock troops camped in the mountains of eastern Tembien, northwest of Makale, native informers came panting into Makale with information that another strong Ethiopian force is marching north to attack.

Small, mobile bands of night-raiding pillagers are resisting efforts to "mop up" the Gheralta district behind Makale.

According to the informers, a well-armed force is moving toward Scelicot, about 10 miles south of Makale, preparatory to an attempt to drive a wedge into the Italian lines east of Makale toward Dolo.

Surrender of "leaders, notables and armed men" of the Sultanate of Biru gave the Italians title to a large strip of eastern Ethiopia extending from the Escarpment southeast of Makale to the French Somaliland border. This peaceful acquisition is important in the Italian campaign to connect Eritrea with Italian Somaliland.

Trial Board Weighing Cases of 2 Policemen

Decision on charges against two policemen were reserved after hearings yesterday by the Police Trial Board.

The officers were Private George J. Leahy, charged with being intoxicated while on duty at the Central High School Stadium, November 4, and First Precinct Detective Frank M. White, accused by Lillian Clawans, an attorney, of Newark, N. J., of false arrest, manhandling and causing her humiliation by locking her in the cell block at the First Precinct.

U. S. Army Man Visits Battle Front in Africa

Asmara, Eritrea, Nov. 19 (AP).—Lieut. Col. Pedro Del Valle, assistant United States naval attache at Rome, sailed from Massaua, Eritrea, today for Italian Somaliland, to visit the Italian lines there.

Col Del Valle arrived in Asmara a week ago—the first foreign military observer to visit the northern Italian front in Africa.

2 Things to Do
TO EASE COLD INSTANTLY
Discomfort and Aches Go Almost Instantly This Way

1. This 2 BAYER ASPIRIN Tablets and drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.
2. If throat is sore, crush and stir 2 BAYER ASPIRIN Tablets in ½ glass of water. Gargle twice. This eases throat rawness and soreness instantly.

THE pictured directions above show perhaps the quickest, simplest and most modern method yet discovered to combat cold and sore throat.

Your own doctor will approve this way. Millions of people have discarded "cold killers" and patent nostrums for this modern way. It relieves the average cold almost as fast as you caught it.

Note that all you do is this.

Two Bayer Aspirin tablets with a full glass of water.

Three Bayer Aspirin tablets, crushed and dissolved in ½ glass of water as a gargle. Gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back to permit this medicated gargle to reach the irritated membranes of the throat. The Bayer Aspirin you take internally acts to fight a cold almost instantly. AND — eases the aches and pains that accompany most colds.

The gargle acts instantly like a local anesthetic to soothe pains in the throat and to ease throat irritation.

Try this way. You will be amazed at how quickly you can ease a cold. Be sure, though, to get Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN tablets. They dissolve almost instantly in the stomach. Hence start working almost instantly. And also, dissolve thoroughly enough in water for use as a gargle.

Why BAYER Aspirin Works So Fast

Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water. By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating.

In 2 Seconds By Stop Watch

A Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work. What happens in your stomach — Genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

$465,000,000
TO HELP PEOPLE BUY and SELL

IF people couldn't buy on "time", what a terrific set-back business would get!

In the past year, Commercial Credit Company has placed more than $465,000,000 of credit assistance at the disposal of millions of families, merchants and manufacturers.

How American Home Life Has Benefited

On the domestic side, its range of operations has covered the purchase of automobiles, refrigerators, oil burners, air conditioning systems, electric ranges and many other desirable things which have contributed to the comfort and happiness of the American family. At least half of all such purchases are made by wage and salary earners of moderate means and thrifty habits. "Time" buying has been a boon to them.

Financing for Merchants and Manufacturers

Naturally all the family purchases referred to meant sales and profits to merchants and manufacturers. But there was an equally important phase of Commercial Credit service which extended them additional benefits on a vast scale. By the purchase of current open accounts and notes owing to them, millions of dollars of resources were released for new operations. By financing the purchase of motor trucks, Diesel engines, time and labor saving machinery, power plants, store and office fixtures, vital replacements of old or obsolete equipment were made immediately possible without drain on working capital or reserves. In many cases, the economies thus effected more than paid the entire cost.

Safety in Time Payment Financing

Reputable and experienced institutions like Commercial Credit have helped industry to expand physically and market-wise; have improved industrial economy and efficiency. They have aided mass production and created jobs for millions of workers. They have enabled American families to enjoy the highest standards of living any people have ever known.

Time payment financing is a highly specialized business involving problems not only of finance, but also of law, insurance, merchandising, credits and collections. The right kind of service is safe and economical. An inexpert, poorly administered credit or collection service can be troublesome and expensive. Before you conclude any time payment purchase, investigate carefully the reputation and experience of the proposed financing company.

Insist on Official Commercial Credit Plan

It took years to perfect the Official Commercial Credit Plan, with its safeguards for buyer and seller, and with cost reduced to the lowest level consistent with such safety. But results have proved the inherent soundness and economy of the planning. The wonderful growth of the company in twenty-three years and its national reputation for faithful and efficient service to millions are your guarantee of safety, reliability and low cost. In any time payment transaction, you will be wise to insist on the OFFICIAL COMMERCIAL CREDIT PLAN.

How Commercial Credit Company Serves Buyer and Seller

Commercial Credit Company purchases instalment lien obligations from responsible Manufacturers, Distributors and Dealers. Financing plans are provided to cover the time payment sale of automobiles, refrigerators, oil burners, engines, machinery and equipment, air conditioning units, heating plants, store and office fixtures, and a score of other such broad classifications, including hundreds of individual products.

Founded in 1912 with $300,000 capital, Commercial Credit Company is today one of the largest institutions of its kind. It operates through more than 2,200 employees in 154 local offices in the United States and Canada, and is owned by nearly 15,000 stockholders.

With more than $45,000,000 capital and surplus, and a volume of more than $465,000,000 for the last twelve months, it offers large resources to promote local industrial activity.

President Gets Birthday Ball Funds Report

National Committee Given $326,062; Rest Goes to Local Grants.

The President's Birthday Ball Commission for Infantile Paralysis Research yesterday reported on expenditures to date as members of the commission had lunch with Mr. Roosevelt at the White House.

Keith Morgan, treasurer of the national committee for the Birthday Ball, informed Henry L. Doherty, chairman, that approximately $1,071,000 was raised at the ball on the President's fifty-third birthday last January. The national committee received only 30 per cent of this, however, or $326,062.39, the remainder going into local funds.

Col. Doherty said that $110,000 had been allocated in grants to assist research projects. These grants went to Harvard, Long Island College of Medicine, New York University, University of Chicago, University of Pennsylvania, Stanford University, University of California, University of Southern California, Western Reserve University and Yale.

"The amount granted in each case," Doherty explained, "was determined after full consideration of all the circumstances surrounding the work so that there might be assurance that the grants would be genuinely helpful in the furtherance of the work under the best possible conditions."

Keith reported that $241,000 of the $326,062.39 had been turned over to the President for use of the Commission for Infantile Paralysis Research, the remainder being expended chiefly in administrative expenses. A bank balance of $826.02 is being held open pending minor adjustments with local committees.

Referring to the unallocated funds, Col. Doherty said:

"With the remaining funds at its disposal the commission is in a position to make grants to other projects and to consider further grants to those engaged in the present projects if the progress of any of these developments is sufficiently promising, and additional assistance is needed in order to continue the work with maximum effectiveness."

Luncheon guests of the President included, in addition to Doherty and Keith, Mrs. Nicholas F. Brady, of Philadelphia; John S. Burke, New York; Carl Byoir and Arthur Carpenter, New York; Edsel B. Ford, Detroit; Paul Dekruiff, Raymond B. Fosdick and Felix M. Warburg, all of New York; Jeremiah Milbank, New Jersey, and Drs. Donald B. Armstrong, Ross T. McIntire and Max M. Peet.

Mail Charge Bond Permitted Wright

Maryland Man Is Accused in Letter Tampering.

Calvin W. Wright, 27, of near Burtonsville, Md., yesterday waived preliminary hearing on charges of tampering with the mails before United States Commissioner James K. Cullen at Baltimore. He was released on bond of $1,000.

Wright was a clerk in the Silver Spring (Md.) postoffice. He was taken to Baltimore yesterday by two postal inspectors, who arrested him in a Silver Spring restaurant. He is alleged to have opened a number of letters and to have obtained between $125 and $150.

Postmaster Howard W. Griffith said that Wright had been under suspicion for several months and that he was apprehended after a "test" letter containing marked money had been opened. Wright is married and has had an excellent reputation.

Self-Paying Ball Machine Is Seized

Paid 10 Cents to $1.50; Owner Arrested.

The District vice squad last night seized the first self-paying pin ball machine they have yet found in Washington and arrested its alleged owner, Harry Schwartz, 28, of 1631 Euclid street, on a charge of permitting gambling.

Roy Blick and William DeGruett, members of the squad, discovered the contraption in the Valley Vista Pharmacy at Belmont road and Ashmead place northwest.

On examination, they charge that it used only one ball which players tried to drop into any one of a number of holes marked from 10 cents to $1.50. If the ball dropped in any of those holes, they said, the money would be automatically paid the lucky player.

Text of the President's Talk to Mayors

Following is the text as given out at the White House of President Roosevelt's talk to the United States Conference of Mayors yesterday:

I am very glad to see you here. Many of you I have known personally for a great many years. With some of you I have worked on many problems in the past.

I have not prepared any formal remarks for your gathering here. I wish, though, that I could have sat with you in your meetings to hear what has been said and to learn more about the problems of government.

We have, all of us, I think, learned a great deal about the problems of government, in the broad sense of the word, in the past few years. We have tried experiments—some of them have been very successful and some of them, like all experiments, have not been quite so successful. Through this process, we are building up, as Mayor Hoan has said, a new relationship—a perfectly sound relationship—between the different branches of government, municipal, State and national.

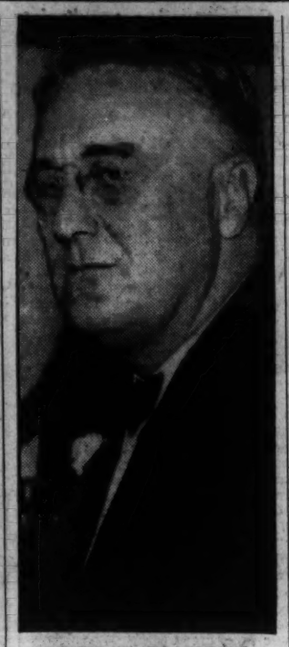
One of the newspapermen, a few moments ago in the press conference, asked the kind of question you are all asked and I am asked every week. Members of the press are present, I know, but I do not mind their hearing this. The particular question was this:

"Is the Government going to stop giving relief next July?"

That is the kind of thing—spreading the word around that everybody who is now on relief will be taken off relief rolls beginning the first of July—we have to combat.

My answer was that the Federal Government, and I am sure your answer will be the same for the city governments, does not propose to let people starve after the first of July any more than during the past few years.

We are learning also a greater efficiency. Certainly the new work this year, so far as lasting usefulness is concerned, has been infinitely more successful, better planned and better carried out than it was under the old CWA program of 1933. Think what a gain it has been in two years. Go over the lists of projects, both WPA and Public Works this year, and the percentage of them which will be of lasting benefit to the communities is very, very high. That is something I think the average citizen in all of your cities appreciates, in spite of various attacks which have been made on these projects.



PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Of course, in the last analysis, you people who run governments of the cities in this country—and in the country districts, the supervisors and county commissioners—are responsible for these projects. You people suggest them and, on the whole, your suggestions with respect to these projects have been extraordinarily good. I am delighted with the usefulness and permanence of these projects.

Well, all of this has come in the course of less than three years. All of us have learned a lot, but we still have much to learn. There are various processes of government that can be simplified and ought to be simplified.

For example, and this is not my fault because Congress put it in the bill, I have to sign all the allotments in person. I have signed hundreds, thousands of allotment papers for various projects. They ought never to come to my desk, but we have to go through what is called "red tape" because of the law. When applications come in here from the various localities, they have to go through a certain process. They have to go, in part, to the Director of the Budget. Then they come to me and then they go to the Comptroller General of the United States. There has been a lot of talk about projects being held up for a long time by the Comptroller General, but, after all, he is limited in the staff he has. The way he has done this work has been perfectly fine. His people are worn to the bone. They have been working day and night. Hence the projects have been coming through and I think some people are going to find in a few weeks that the program as a whole, is going to be carried out before the end of November, just as planned last spring.

I would like to say another word on a subject—an important subject—that you and I have in mind. That subject is taxation. Taxes have grown up like Topsy in this country. There have been a great many efforts to simplify taxation—to establish lines of demarcation between the different types of taxation, giving certain types to localities, others to the States and still others to the Federal Government.

We are stepping on each other's toes, especially in the past five, ten or fifteen years. In fact, virtually since the beginning of the World War the general tax situation in the United States has become not only more complicated but has called for revision. We haven't had a revision and I think the time is coming—not this coming session of Congress, because we hope that it will be a very short session—but by the following year, when all of us can get together and sit around a table and work out a better system of taxation, State, municipal and Federal.

Late this winter we are going to ask you to come down and talk about that subject around the table. I suppose this meeting will be dignified by the name of a tax conference, but, I would rather keep it informal and have it become a continuing study which will bring forth an intelligent report before the close of the year 1936.

Mayor Hoan has said that this is a nonpartisan gathering. We have to keep it so and, in the approaching conference, we will have to think of taxation in a nonpartisan way.

It has been fine to see you. I hope to see you again next spring. Many thanks for coming.

Mayors Cheer Roosevelt Hint Of More Relief

Nation Won't Let People Starve After July 1, 1936, He Says.

pared. At the conclusion of his speech, however, Hopkins left without even resuming his seat. Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago, who was presiding, informed the group that Hopkins "had an important appointment at the White House."

At his press conference the President said direct relief would be substantially ended by December 1, the date on which the Administration has promised to have 3,500,000 persons on work relief.

Blames Red Tape.

Talking to the mayors, the President contrasted the present works program with the old CWA, and added that the percentage of projects under the new plan "which will be of lasting benefit to the communities is very, very high."

"I am delighted with the usefulness and permanence of these projects," he said.

Answering criticism of "red tape" in the program, the President placed part of the blame on Congress.

"For example," he said, "and this is not my fault, because Congress put it in the bill, I have to sign all the allotments in person. I have signed hundreds, thousands of allotment papers for various projects. They ought never to have come to my desk, but we all have to go through what is called 'red tape' because of the law.

In answer to criticisms that many projects have been delayed by Comptroller General McCarl, the President pointed to the comptroller's limited staff.

Announcing his forthcoming tax conference, the President said:

"Taxes have grown up like Topsy in this country. * * * We are stepping on each other's toes in the past 5, 10 or 15 years. In fact, virtually since the beginning of the World War the general tax situation in the United States has become not only more complicated, but has called for revision. We haven't had a revision and I think the time is coming—not this coming session of Congress, because we hope it will be a very short session—but by the following year, when all of us can get together and sit around a table and work out a better system of taxation, State, municipal and Federal."

Incidentally, President Roosevelt's present term of office will expire at the beginning of the "following year" to which he referred.

Hopkins Hits Criticism.

In his talk to the mayors, Administrator Hopkins pointed to the high percentage of school, hospital, street and road construction in the works program. Answering four points of criticism, Hopkins denied emphatically that funds had been allotted for political purposes, that men on relief did not want to work, that projects were useless and that the program was inadequate.

Hopkins throughout his talk insisted that criticism of the program was really criticism of the people on relief.

Describing one group of his critics as "deliberately malicious," he added that "for reasons of their own they wish to deliberately discredit this program, to attack the very characters of the thousands and hundreds of thousands of men who are at work on it."

He defended his program vigorously against "boon-doggling" charges, pointing to projects for the deaf, for the blind and for crippled children.

Discussing the problem generally, he said:

"I believe we are never going back to the old way and the old days of caring for these people.

Sees Permanent Program.

"I am sure of one thing, that the Government of the United States and the States and cities have put their hand to the plow and that it is never going to be taken away, that in one form or another the method may change from year to year until we finally get into a permanent program that fits and suits this Nation."

In the general discussion which followed, Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston declared that "one grave defect in the present program has been its execution in a manner which threatens to defeat its purpose."

He asserted that if the present program goes through 12,000 employable persons in Boston will be without jobs and without relief.

Mansfield also pointed out that because of the uncertainty of the future of the Federal program, cities could not plan ahead for making financial contributions.

LaGuardia Asks Co-operation.

Concluding the general discussion and answering criticisms of various speakers, LaGuardia said that quotas had been fixed on the basis of employing in each community the proportion of relief workers, with the idea that the total should be 3,500,000. He asked that a resolution be adopted calling the attention of the States to the necessity of their co-operation in carrying the relief burden.

Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, speaking at the conference last night, said that a well-tempered housing program offered the sole way to solve the relief problem. He emphasized housing as a means of providing employment and insisted Government housing did not interfere with private business. He told the mayors he plans to introduce a housing bill in Congress.

'T. R.'s' Widow Much Better, Family at Side

Improvement Coincident With 18th Anniversary of Son's Death.

By the Associated Press.

Glen Cove, N. Y., Nov. 19.—As her children kept vigil near her hospital bedside, some improvement was noted tonight in the condition of Mrs. Edith Kermit Roosevelt, widow of President Theodore Roosevelt, who suffered a grave heart attack yesterday in the course of convalescence from a fractured hip.

Mrs. Roosevelt's showing for the better was coincident with the eighteenth anniversary of the death of her youngest son, Quentin, who was shot down in aerial combat on the French front. Today was his thirty-eighth birthday anniversary.

Mrs. Roosevelt's physicians, including her son-in-law, Richard Derby, chief surgeon of the North Country Community Hospital where she is a patient, expressed the opinion she would recover if there were no recurrence of the heart trouble. Mrs. Roosevelt was 74 in August.

During the night Mrs. Roosevelt's four children stayed at the bedside, although the family home is only 7 miles distant at Oyster Bay.

They were Col. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., Kermit and Archibald, and Mrs. Ethel Roosevelt Derby. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, the President's daughter by his first wife, kept in touch with the hospital by telephone from Washington.

Mrs. Roosevelt suffered a fractured hip last Wednesday in an accident at the Roosevelt home, Sagamore Hill. Yesterday she suffered a relapse and grave weakening of the heart.

As mistress of Sagamore Hill in Oyster Bay, Long Island, Mrs. Roosevelt has lived quietly alone in the big house built by "T. R." before he brought her there as a bride in 1886.

Her last public appearance was on September 16, when she spoke at the National Women's Republican Club in New York on Constitution Day.

Though Mrs. Roosevelt has spent part of each summer in recent years at her country home in Brooklyn, Conn., she always has returned to Sagamore Hill on August 6 for the annual celebratoin of her birthday.

John W. Leich Succumbs at 89

House Doorkeeper Was Soldier in the Union Army at Age of 14.

Taps will sound in Arlington National Cemetery Friday morning for John W. Leich, 89-year-old veteran of the War Between the States and doorkeeper at the Capitol, who died early yesterday at his residence, 1207 East Capitol street, after a brief illness.

Formal funeral services for Mr. Leich, who was well known to many Senators and Representatives, will be held at his home tomorrow at 8 p. m.

Mr. Leich enlisted in the Union Army as a 14-year-old boy, and saw action in 17 battles, being honorably discharged in June, 1865, while he was still a minor. A favorite among the older officers and men, he distinguished himself for his bravery under fire.

It was Gen. Catlin, whose leg was amputated on the battlefield at Frederick, Md., who gave him the title of "Handsome Jack," and praised him for his bravery in defying a rain of bullets to raise the flag aloft after it had been shot down from the staff.

After the war Mr. Leich returned to his home on Long Island and later removed to Brooklyn. For many years he was employed as a special investigator by the Pinkerton Detective Agency.

Mr. Leich came to Washington in 1928 to reside with his daughters, Miss Catherine A. Leich and Miss Harriet V. Leich, at the East Capital street address. He was among the Civil War Veterans honored with employment on the House side of the Capitol.

Besides his two daughters here, Mr. Leich is survived by his wife, Mrs. Susan Hamilton Leich; three sons, John, of Hollis, Long Island; Harry, of Belmore, Long Island, and George, of Allentown, Pa.; a sister, Miss Frances Leich, of Washington; six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Another Group Of Transients Is Sent to Camp

Move Solves Civilian Problem; 540 Veterans Still Cared for Here.

An undetermined number of transients, all civilians, will leave Washington this morning, bound by bus for the FERA work camp at Fort Eustis, Va., to join others who have been sent there over a period of several weeks.

This move, David G. Linden, director of the local Transient Bureau, said last night, "will practically clear up" the problem of civilian transients in the District.

The problem of the former service men who are being cared for by the Transient Bureau, despite that bureau's official demise, still remained unsolved last night.

At the central mess hall, at Third street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, 540 transient veterans were fed yesterday, an increase of 20 from the previous day.

Last night a handful of officials were again busy at Transient Bureau headquarters in the old brown stone church at John Marshall place and C street, making out requisitions and seeking lodgings for the homeless veterans.

About 200 went to bed in the Boys' Lodge, Third street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, and 50 more in the lodge at 318 Third street northwest, the last two lodges left of the dozen formerly operated by the Transient Bureau.

Thirty more were put up at the Soldiers and Sailors Temporary Home, 921 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, run by the District. The rest, approximately 260, were housed in private rooming houses, with the rent of 50 cents a night being paid by the District Government.

The cost of feeding the men in the central mess hall is estimated, by bureau officials, at 29 cents a day.

Most of the transient veterans, from a series of interviews, appeared anxious to be shipped to a civilian conservation or works project camp as soon as possible, and the District bureau officials were just as anxious to send them.

Admiral Nelson's Rites Announced

Commanded Submarine Force in World War.

Funeral services for Rear Admiral Charles Preston Nelson, commanding officer of the United States submarine force which participated in the destruction of the Austrian naval base at Durazzo in October of 1918, will be held at the Naval Academy chapel in Annapolis, Md., tomorrow at 3:30 p. m.

In recognition of his World War service Admiral Nelson received the Distinguished Service Medal and many foreign decorations.

He died Saturday at the Naval Hospital in Philadelphia. A daughter, Mrs. Carol Stewart, of Wynnewood, Pa., survives.

Admiral Nelson was born in Baltimore in 1877. He entered Annapolis in 1894.

Cairo Students Bury Comrade, Riot Victim

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 19 (A).—A tense Cairo watched a huge funeral that student Wafdists gave today to a fourth comrade who died from a revolver wound when British police attacked them outside the city last week.

It was estimated that 10,000 shouting, hostile students followed the body to the cemetery. They, in turn, were followed by a score of truckloads of heavily armed native police and soldiers.

British police remained at the barracks, a move which helped prevent new demonstrations against the empire's domination of Egypt.

Judge Assails Mooney Trial In Testimony

'Criminally' Convicted in 1916, Says Jurist Who Passed Sentence.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Nov. 19.—Thomas J. Mooney heard the judge who sentenced him to death testify today the internationally known prisoner had been unfairly convicted.

In a hushed courtroom the pair exchanged glances for a dramatic moment in their first meeting since the sentence was pronounced in 1917 after Mooney's trial for the 1916 Preparedness Day bombing here.

Mooney, apparently unaffected by the meeting, followed Superior Judge Franklin A. Griffin to the stand to identify certain correspondence presented at his habeas corpus hearing.

Judge Griffin also identified correspondence he had written in behalf of the convict.

The veteran jurist and the convict, whose sentence later was commuted to life imprisonment, looked intently into each other's eyes.

No word was spoken and the face of each was a mask, despite the tense undercurrent of feeling the meeting caused among spectators.

Mooney, whose testimony is expected to complete tomorrow his case for exoneration and freedom, gave none today other than the formal identification of the various documents.

Judge Griffin, who since the trial has repeatedly stated he believed Mooney was unfairly—"even criminally"—convicted, supported his contention under cross-examination by Assistant Attorney General William Cleary.

It was the suspicion of perjury cast on the trial testimony of Frank Oxman, prosecution witness, that caused him to reach his conclusion about the conviction, Judge Griffin said.

He stated that during the trial he considered Oxman's testimony "the whole case for the State" and did not doubt at the time that the witness was telling the truth.

Judge Griffin said that even during the trial he discounted the testimony of other principal prosecution witnesses who claimed to have seen Mooney and Warren K. Billings, also convicted, at the bombing scene.

The jurist said the testimony of the other witnesses were contrary to facts or, as in the case of Mrs. Nellie Edeau, subject to suspicion as to truthfulness.

Two Naval Planes Crack Up; 3 Hurt

Aircraft From Anacostia Crash in Alabama.

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 19.—Two naval planes from the Naval Air Station at Anacostia, Md., cracked up in Alabama early tonight, with the two pilots only slightly injured. A passenger of one was more seriously hurt.

Lieut. J. D. Greer, of Coronado Beach, pilot of the plane cracking up near here, escaped from the wreckage after his plane collided with a tree top, with cuts about the face.

The passenger in the plane, Sergt. O. M. Newsom, suffered a fracture of the arm and internal injuries.

The second plane cracked up near Lay Dam on the Cossa River, not far from Clanton. The pilot, Lieut. L. C. Simpler, escaped by bailing out. Spectators said his motor went dead.

Greer and Newsome were flying from Spartanburg, S. C., to Birmingham, and were lost due to low visibility and a misty rain.

Plans Completed For Power Parley

By the Associated Press.

Plans for a world power conference to be held here next September were virtually completed yesterday when Morris L. Cooke, executive committee chairman, outlined its program and named conference officers.

Cooke said he expected 50 nations to accept the invitations extended by President Roosevelt, honorary president, last September, with 1,000 foreign delegates and 3,000 American representatives.

Explaining that he hoped Congress would appropriate $75,000, already authorized, to help entertain the congress, Cooke said plans were drafted at a meeting yesterday of the American executive committee.

Fatal Plunge and Where It Ended

MRS. LAURA ARMISTEAD CARTER STITT.

Mrs. Stitt said she would go with her.

"I have something I want to do upstairs," the maid quoted her as saying.

Then, instead of taking the passenger elevator, Mrs. Stitt insisted on riding with the maid on the freight elevator. When the elevator operator opened the door at the fifth floor the maid walked into the hallway and Mrs. Stitt followed.

"I will walk up the other flight," the admiral's wife was reported to have said.

The maid turned and started down the hall. Suddenly, Mrs. Stitt called:

"Nellie!"

The maid wheeled about. Just as she did, Mrs. Stitt, pale and semi-hysterical, ran upstairs to a landing and dived through the open window. The maid saw her body strike a flight of wooden steps in the areaway below.

Homicide squad detectives searched the Stitt apartment for a clew to the woman's action. There was no note or other indication that she had planned to take her life.

Hardly had Mrs. Stitt's body hurtled from the window, when Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Little, the former a cousin of Admiral Stitt's, called from the apartment lobby to invite the admiral and his wife to dinner.

Gave Life to Science.

They were prostrated by the tragedy, but could assign no motive. They told Coroner MacDonald, however, that Mrs. Stitt had been in ill health recently and under a physician's care. The coroner issued a certificate of suicide.

It was several hours before Admiral Stitt could be reached and notified of his bride's death. Last night, he was in seclusion at the apartment and details were being handled by friends and relatives.

With husband and father, Mrs. Stitt had devoted her life to the study and treatment of tropical diseases. When her father died some years ago, he left an unfinished book on the cure and treatment of yellow fever. His daughter took up where he left off and finished the book.

Admiral Stitt is the author of numerous medical books and pamphlets on tropical diseases. To these, his wife contributed research and knowledge left by her father. The romance of Admiral and Mrs. Stitt blossomed through this joint work.

Last night preparations were being made for burial in the Virginia town where she became the admiral's bride.

Mrs. Stitt was the admiral's second wife. He has three children, a son and two daughters.

Admiral Stitt is 67. He retired from the Navy in 1931.

"We should impress on givers the thought that their gift is divided by 65 and thus bring to them the necessity for increases."

He stressed the need for private financing of direct relief.

"The relief situation," he insisted, "is serious. I don't believe we can handle it without the over-subscription that has been asked of you and which is so vitally necessary."

Noyes described the campaign as "the finest effort" the Chest ever made.

"The publicity element," he said, "will do more than ever in the next 24 hours to awaken Washington to the needs of the Chest agencies.

"Washington is prepared to give to as fine a cause as the Chest. The only thing that remains is to get your story across. I know you'll do it."

U. S. Agencies Over Top.

There was a roar of applause when Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, Governmental unit chairman, announced 158 Federal bureaus and agencies have subscribed more than their quota.

He particularly complimented employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the Bureau of Narcotics.

His unit turned in 82,750 pledges for $555,803, or 82.9 per cent of its quota.

The group solicitation unit obtained 32,512 contributions for $263,583.53, or 65.7 per cent of its allotment. One of its solicitors, Mrs. John J. O'Connor, told how the boys of St. Joseph's Home and School donated to the Chest $10.50 someone had given them with which to buy candy.

Bernard Wyckoff, metropolitan unit chairman, predicted today would turn out to be the "biggest report day in the history of the Chest."

The Wyckoff unit announced 8,720 gifts for $147,406.96, or 73.30 per cent.

Col. West A. Hamilton's Capitol unit was credited with 787 pledges for $4,232, or 42.74 per cent.

Coleman Jennings, special assignments unit chairman, reported 410 donations totaling $439,202, or 78.41 per cent.

The solicitors were praised on their showing by Gov. Blanton Winship, of Puerto Rico, a luncheon honor guest. He said a Community Chest patterned after the Washington organization will be formed shortly on the island.

Gifts Are Listed.

Gifts of $100 or more reported yesterday were:

$6,000, Mrs. Frederic A. Keep; $5,000, Peoples Drug Store, Inc., Frank R. Jelleff; $4,000, Theodore W. Noyes; $3,000, Mrs. Herbert J. Slocum, Miss Annie May Heremman; $2,000, Mrs. Willard H. The Inquiring Reporter

Knowlton Hails Chest as Opportunity to Assist Unfortunate; R. H. Davis and Oscar Dodek Back Charity Drive.

Washington's citizens in every walk of life yesterday commended the Community Chest.

Here are a few of the answers to an inquiring reporter's question, "What does the Community Chest mean to Washington?"

DR. KNOWLTON.

Dr. Don S. Knowlton, Columbia Medical Building:

"The Community Chest offers the citizens of Washington a golden opportunity to participate in assisting the unfortunate. In no other way is it possible for co-ordinated giving to be administered in the specialized manner in which the Chest operates.

"To those of us who are connected with the clinics in the Washington hospitals there are many tangible evidences of the Community Chest's benefits.

"Through the operation of the Chest it has been possible to extend medical care and hospitalization to those good folks who, in the trying times of the depression, would have been denied such aid.

"It would seem that now, more than ever, there should be a concerted effort by all to participate in this outstanding opportunity for the common good."

MR. DAVIS.

Robert H. Davis, maintenance engineer, radio Station WRC:

"I think the Community Chest is a godsend to Washington.

"It not only has decreased overhead in the administration of charity, but has so organized the various groups that efficiency has been much increased and we are assured that the best possible use is being made of every cent which we can spare for this great civic movement."

Oscar Dodek, general manager of D. J. Kaufman, Inc.:

"I see in the Community Chest an opportunity for all types of unfortunate people to obtain the necessities of life regardless of their race, creed or color.

MR. DODEK.

"I have always admired any movement which did not bar any types of people and enabled many to get considerably more out of a general fund than they actually put into it, which shows definitely there is no partiality.

"Every man, woman and child should contribute to the Chest drive."

German-Polish Pact Adopted by Danzig

Danzig, Nov. 19 (AP).—Danzig joined the recently concluded German-Polish trade agreement today.

The German-Polish trade agreement, effective tomorrow for one year, includes a "most favored nation" clause. Clearing offices will control payments so that exports will balance imports. German quarters have expressed the belief trade between the two nations will be greatly enlarged, as Germany desires to obtain farm products, of which Poland has a surplus, while Poland wants to buy chemicals and machinery obtainable in Germany.

German College Closed, Nazi Quarrel Rumored

Wurzburg, Germany, Nov. 19 (AP). President Johann Albert Reinmoeller of Wurzburg University closed the theology department of the institution today and ordered all lectures there canceled until further notice.

Although secrecy was maintained as to reasons for the unusual action, students generally agreed a conflict had broken out between Reinmoeller and a Catholic bishop, Mathias Ehrenfried, over the appointment of a student leader for the theological department. The appointee was a Protestant Nazi who, it was reported, was not acceptable to Catholic students and to the bishop.

Morgan Fears Taxes Will End Private Riches

Says Cut in U. S. Levies Is Necessary to Prevent End of Initiative.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 19.—Attacking the Administration's taxation program, J. P. Morgan, the financier, predicted tonight upon his arrival from Europe that all private fortunes would be wiped out in the United States within 30 years unless taxes and governmental expenditures were cut.

"Why even now anybody who makes any money in the United States actually is working eight months of the year for the Government," he said, "and who is going to be able to or will do that indefinitely?"

The financier emphasized that this condition could not continue. He said no one would take a partner in his business who insisted on having two-thirds of the money earned for his share.

Asked if he thought there would be a return to private banking and investment brokerage by one firm, now banned by the Government, he replied:

"It may be very possible at some future date, for everything is a possibility except that the United States nor anybody else can go on spending twice as much as is earned for an indefinite period."

Morgan added that present governmental taxation would stop initiative, as well as new and old enterprises. Insurance companies and savings banks would be the only holders of savings within a period of 30 years, he asserted.

All private fortunes, colleges, many schools and all libraries would disappear, he added.

After a glance at the financial page of a late paper, his first request, he was asked his opinion of the bullish market trend in relation to prosperity.

"I don't think a bullish market makes for prosperity," he answered. "It didn't a few years ago—at least it didn't for me and it didn't for a lot of people."

Inquiries as to what he thought of Presient Roosevelt's chances for re-election brought from Morgan:

"It is not time to worry about that. Really, you know more about it than I do."

Filing of Wills Last Chapter Of Partnership

The wills of two Washington attorneys were filed for probate yesterday in District Supreme Court, thus writing the last chapter to two lives that had long run closely together.

On October 31, G. Percy McGlue died. Four days later his long-time associate and friend, Charles H. Merrillat, jumped into the Potomac below Chain Bridge, ending his life.

McGlue left an estate valued at $400,000. By his will, his two sisters, Mrs. Carrie A. Fernandez and Miss Lottie V. McGlue, were given $5,000 each. A similar sum was left in trust for George H. Miller, a nephew, the income of which is to go to another sister, Mrs. Irene Howard. His widow was named executrix, and is to draw $500 monthly, the remainder to be divided between two children, G. Murray McGlue and Helen V. McGlue, although the mother is allowed to withdraw this income if she deems it to the children's best interest.

Merrillat, former city editor of The Post, left his entire estate, of an unestimated value, to his widow, Mrs. Louise M. Merrillat, who was named executrix. At her death the property is to go to his sisters, unnamed in the well.

Evasion of Taxes Charged to Songy

Testified to Alleged Plot to Kill Huey Long.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 19.—Sidney Songy, who unfolded an alleged conspiracy to kill the late Senator Huey P. Long at the Senator's "murder plot" investigation last January, was in jail today charged with conspiring to violate the Federal liquor tax act of 1934.

Songy, a dismissed Government prohibition informer, appeared in court with a badly bruised face, which officers said they were told was received at the hands of fellow prisoners who recognized him as the former Federal employe.

Taken into custody last night, Songy's arrest was not made public until he was brought before United States Commissioner R. H. Carter, jr., for arraignment. His bond was placed at $10,000.

His wife, charged jointly with Songy, was detained temporarily in the commissioner's office while arranging her bail, set at $3,000.

Federal agents charged that Songy and about 15 others, unidentified, had conspired to manufacture liquor illegally in the vicinity of Opelousas, La.

They charged that one shipment of about 300 gallons of liquor seized from a truck at McCombs, Miss., was involved in the alleged conspiracy.

Standley. On further consideration of the problem, the President and Secretary Hull yesterday decided to include Phillips as a delegate and attach to the delegation a staff of experts from the Navy and State Departments. The list of experts is expected to be announced today.

President Roosevelt explained Bingham would have no part in the Naval conference because, in view of the unsettled European situation, it was thought best to keep the Ambassador to London foot-loose.

Thus the United States is prepared for any turn that the conference may take. If the view now held that nothing substantial will come forth from the conference in the near future, the way has been left open for Phillips to return here. If the prospect of achieving an agreement develops, Phillips can stay on in London.

Silent on Stand.

The President, in making his announcement of the personnel of the delegation at his semiweekly press conference, declined to discuss details of the American position. Speaking generally, he said the American position, many times enunciated, remains unchanged. This position might be summed up, he added, by saying the United States is opposed to navies that would cost the people of the various nations more money than they cost today.

In other words, the American objective remains the maintenance of the naval power specified in the Washington and London treaties. Mr. Roosevelt's reiteration of that policy indicated his belief that there is no hope of achieving further reduction in naval armaments. Indeed, this country would be greatly pleased if naval armaments could be held at the present levels.

Virtually all American experts agree that this is a remote possibility. They point out Great Britain's demand for greater cruiser strength. They cite the victory of the Conservatives in the British election last week, fought on a promise to re-arm the empire. They point to Germany's increased naval position; French and Italian demands, as well as Japan's insistence on equality in armament with the United States and Great Britain.

Confers With Group.

Above all, the present uncertain, tense political situation in Europe and the Far East is cited as ground for the pessimism felt here over the general prospects of the Naval Conference. Seldom have so many adverse factors confronted an international meeting of any kind.

Yet the fact that Japan and France attach importance to the conference has intrigued United State experts. Apparently they have been unable to find out what is in the minds of the Japanese and French. But they have determined to be ready to deal with any situation that may arise.

The President conferred for several hours yesterday with the three delegates, Davis, Phillips and Admiral Standley; James Clement Dunn, of the Western European division of the State Department, and several technicians from the Navy Department. The meeting started before the 4 p. m. press conference, was adjourned to permit that event and the President's greeting to the conference of mayors, and was then resumed until almost 6 o'clock.

It was in the nature of last-minute instructions to the delegation, since President Rooveselt leaves tonight for Warm Springs, Ga., to be gone three weeks. By the time he returns to Washington it will be clear whether any immediate results can be expected from the London Conference.

Davis is a seasoned delegate at international conferences. He has had an extensive private business experience, and during the World War was an adviser to the Treasury on foreign loans. He was one of the experts attached to the American delegation to negotiate the Versailles Treaty and subsequently was an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Undersecretary of State.

He became American Ambassador at large during the Hoover Administration, when he represented this country at the Geneva arms conferences. President Roosevelt continued him in this capacity and he became this Government's foremost armaments expert. With Admiral Standley, he represented this Government at the informal naval conversations which took place at London a year ago.

Up From Ranks.

Admiral Standley is a graduate of the Naval Academy at Annapolis and has come up through the ranks. He was placed in command of the battle force of the United States fleet in 1927 and was made chief of naval operations, the highest rank in the Navy, in July, 1933.

Phillips is one of this country's most distinguished career diplomats. Leaving Harvard University in 1902, Phillips' first post was private secretary to the American Ambassador at London. Later he was named second secretary of Legation at Peiping. He subsequently served as chief of the division of Far Eastern Affairs; as third Assistant Secretary of State and as secretary of the Embassy at London.

He left the foreign service in 1912 to become regent of the college and secretary of the Harvard Corporation. But in 1914 he was reappointed third Assistant Secretary of State and since then, with several short absences from the service, has been Minister of The Netherlands and Minister to Canada, as well as serving as Undersecretary of State from 1922 to 1924 and again since March 4, 1933.

AAA Tax Lags; Revenue Still Ahead of 1934

October Internal Receipts Are $17,478,720 Over Month Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

Despite a third successive monthly decline, Federal internal revenue collections have maintained during the first third of the 1935 fiscal year a slight margin over the 1934 period.

Detailed Treasury figures showed yesterday that receipts from July 1 through October aggregated $1,037,689,000, to put this year $23,114,367 ahead of last.

For October, internal revenue brought in $192,218,490 or $17,478,720 more than a year ago.

The slump in current revenue was chargeable almost entirely to the agricultural adjustment taxes which, during the four months, were trailing 1934 by $127,000,000. In October they dropped $44,000,000 behind the same month last year.

Treasury officials said these taxes were lagging because of many court injunctions granted against their collection, pending determination of the act's constitutionality.

The majority of other internal revenue collection sources showed gains for the month, as well as for the cumulative period.

Liquor taxes continued to show gains, with $44,330,822 collected in October, for a $9,000,000 increase over last year. For the cumulative four-month period they were $14,000,000 ahead of last year.

The Treasury report showed that 12,710,887,310 small cigarettes were withdrawn from storehouses during October, compared with 10,718,132,697 a year ago.

Income and excess profit taxes showed an increase of $9,265,575 in October over last year, while the four-month figures ran $71,000,000 ahead to $307,569,643.

Tuberculosis Cases Increase Despite Drive

Gallinger Averages 131 More Patients Than for Last Year.

In the midst of a city-wide drive against tuberculosis, the number of tuberculosis sufferers at Gallinger Municipal Hospital was disclosed yesterday to have gone higher than in any other month this year.

This was reported to the Board of Public Welfare by Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, the hospital superintendent, who added that for all cases there was "increasing pressure upon the facilities" of the hospital. On October 1, he said, there were 847 patients in the hospital, as compared to 666 a year ago, and during the month the daily average of patients was 799, as compared with 668 a year ago.

The District Health Department was still seeking persons to apply for its free X-ray examinations to be given during a period starting November 26. About 5,770 Washingtonians had registered by yesterday for the tests. As the District Medical Society continued to send speakers out to publicize the examinations, some 120 employes of the United States Patent Office were urged to register for the X-rays yesterday afternoon, in a brief talk in the Commerce Auditorium by Dr. William P. Argy, professor of clinical medicine.

One medical leader, former member of the Board of Public Welfare, who was long prominent in the local fight against the white plague, was honored yesterday when the District Commissioners named the new adult tuberculosis sanitarium at Glenn Dale, Md., the Kober Building, for the late Dr. George M. Kober.

The News In Italy.

On October 26, the Secretary of State answered the League of Nations inquiry as to the attitude of the United States in the Italo-Ethiopian war. He emphasized the desire of this country "to contribute in every practicable way within the limitations of our foreign policy" to furthering the League's effort, but also reiterated the American purpose "not to be drawn into the war." Italy chose to regard this careful statement as an influence nullifying the alignment of League members for collective action against the aggressor.

Perhaps partly to offset this unwarranted reaction, the Secretary of State and President Roosevelt on October 30 issued strongly worded statements obviously intended to discourage American trade with Italy in "materials which would prolong the war." But dispatches from Rome indicated then and still indicate that Italians persist in viewing Uncle Sam as generally friendly to their outlaw enterprise.

The reason now becomes more clear. The Journal des Nations, at Geneva, publishes instructions from the Fascist government, said to have been handed to the Italian press for issues of October 31, the day following the forceful reaffirmation of American policy. The orders read:

> Regarding the answer of the United States Government to the League of Nations, it is judged opportune that comments by the Italian press point out that it is substantial confirmation of the neutrality of the United States and at the same time emphasize the illusions concerning peace that can arise from the United States Secretary of State's indirect encouragement to action. Be extremely reserved in commenting and say nothing to reveal the satisfaction caused by the American response to the League of Nations.

Eminent Achievement.

Mrs. Ogden Reid, vice president of the New York Herald Tribune, is the winner this year of the annual award for eminent achievement given by the American Woman's Association. This is probably one of the cases when the bestowal of such a distinction will meet with universal approval, especially among the women of the country.

Mrs. Reid has never been content to rely upon her distinguished name, nor upon the inheritance of one of America's leading newspapers, to establish her claim for consideration. From her early efforts in behalf of woman suffrage to her recent development of the Herald Tribune's Forum for the discussion of national and international problems, Helen Reid has always been thorough, tenacious and effective in her thinking and in that actual achievement which the award was designed to recognize.

She has shown herself capable not only of broad vision, but of a rare ability to translate that vision into tangible and vital results. Nor has she ever sacrificed, throughout years of public endeavor and of large business responsibilities, the prime duties of every woman to her family, her many friends, and let it not be overlooked, to the maintenance of her own personal charm.

Taxes, Doles And Jobs.

Although former Budget Director Douglas is sometimes hypercritical, his suggestion that there is a relationship between the existing income tax and the prevalence of unemployment in this country indicates a careful analysis of basic trends. His point, as outlined in a recent address before the Academy of Political Science, seems to be that our relatively exclusive income tax encourages—or at least fails to check—loose spending, and that consequent budgetary deficits undermine recovery efforts.

Great Britain, Mr. Douglas points out, has about 2,000,000 unemployed and from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 income tax payers. The inference is, of course, that the influence of taxpayers upon the budget is more cogent than that of jobless men. At any rate, the British government has followed a policy of thrift and economy without inflicting any undue hardship upon the unemployed.

In the United States the situation is quite the reverse. We have approximately 10,000,000 men out of work and fewer than 2,000,000 income tax payers contributing revenue to the Federal Treasury. The major difference lies in the exemption of moderate incomes in this country from taxation. Not only does that practice deny the Government much-needed revenue, but it also greatly reduces the pressure that would otherwise be brought to bear upon Congress to curtail its spending habits.

From the fiscal viewpoint a broadening of the income tax base seems to be imperative, for the most rigorous economies are not likely to bring the budget completely into balance. The fact that Congress has enacted extensive social security legislation implies collection of more revenue from moderate incomes. Large incomes have been taxed almost to the point of diminishing returns. As a matter of both social and fiscal policy, therefore, the coming Congress ought to consider broadening the income tax base to include several million citizens who now contribute little or nothing to the support of policies in which the entire population has an interest.

A Good Piece Of Work.

Prompt consideration by the Public Utilities Commission of the plan to reduce gas rates and adjust future charges on a sliding scale may be taken for granted. For this offer made by the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light companies, with the approval of People's Counsel Roberts, Corporation Counsel Prettyman and his special assistant in utility matters, Mr. Folsom, is likely to become a significant milepost in the history of local utility regulation.

Attention has naturally focused upon the proposed $850,000 rate reduction. It is evident that the gas companies have made some real concessions, for this cut goes considerably beyond the temporary orders of the P. U. C. From the long-time point of view, however, this prospective saving to gas consumers is not nearly so important as the sliding scale formula for determination of future rates. Under the proposed arrangements consumers would be automatically given benefits from increased company earnings, without waiting for the outcome of costly litigation. And the company would have a much greater incentive to increase its efficiency, and, therefore, its earnings.

Adjustment of utility rates on a sliding scale is already known as the "Washington Plan." Its advantages over interminable litigation have been clearly proved in the regulation of electricity charges. In the current plan that method has been extended, with more pronounced benefits for consumers. Mr. Roberts, a most aggressive champion of consumer interests, is convinced that an important step forward in the technique of utility regulation will be taken, if the gas rate compromise is accepted.

If the public is inclined to analyze the motives of the gas companies in thus offering to cut their rates substantially below the figures they have heretofore considered fair, nothing obscure will be found. Officials of the companies are obviously perturbed over the continued litigation in which little, if any, progress is being made. During the last four years it is estimated that this case has cost $750,000, not much less than the proposed reduction. If continued, it would probably cost $200,000 more before a settlement could be reached.

The uncertainty resulting from prolonged litigation over rates has hampered essential refinancing operations of the companies and to some extent disrupted their business. Moreover, good business judgment suggests that rates be reduced to the lowest practical basis with the object of increasing gas consumption during this period of the city's rapid growth. Aside from this enlightened business viewpoint, however, the public officials who helped to work out this tentative agreement give the companies' representatives credit for adopting a really scientific attitude toward the intricate problem of equitable rate making.

No doubt the P. U. C. will be as pleased as are the other parties concerned over this opportunity of settling the gas rates dispute on a mutually advantageous basis. Prompt acceptance of the new plan, already approved by the Commission's counsel, may be expected as a means of encouraging enlightened co-operation from utility companies as well as reducing rates on December 1.

Thanksgiving Deflation.

The truth will out and must be faced. Regardless of tradition and Thanksgiving appetites, the fact is that the old-fashioned 25-pound turkey and the modern kitchenette do not gibe. Since architects seem disinclined to design larger kitchens, that could be equipped with large ovens, the only thing left to do is change the size of the turkey. This the Department of Agriculture proposes to do. Breeding experiments will be carried on at the Government research center at Beltsville, Md., and the next 10 years will probably see the development of a turkey that will fit small, modern ovens.

What effect this shrinkage will have on the annual gargantuan gorging of the family group is unpredictable. Heretofore, the bird of birds has been borne in on a huge platter, set down ceremoniously before the head of the house, and carved into ample slabs of white and dark meat. There is usually more than enough of both kinds for everybody. But after the contemplated deflation of the Thanksgiving monarch from 25 to 12 pounds, portions of breast meat and second joints will be at a premium. The neck and tail will assume a new importance and even the gizzard will no longer be scorned.

Yet for all its dire outlook, this curtailing of a more abundant turkey has its bright side. It may relieve the Thanksgiving hangover, which is a sort of mental and physical stupor induced by overstuffing. Also it may completely abolish the obligation of eating turkey hash for a week after the celebration. All things considered, there is really no reason why this most American of fowls should not yield to the tempo of life as it is lived in these times. We have dinettes and kitchenettes—why not turkettes?

Not Facing The Issue.

The Conference of Mayors has furnished plenty of evidence that something is wrong with existing methods of administering relief. Administrator Hopkins, however, chooses to assume that critics of inefficiency and extravagance are attacking the unemployed, and evades the issue by referring to malicious or partisan outbursts. Thus the real problem is not being met.

Certainly relief must continue. The visiting mayors properly assume that sustenance of jobless men and women will be an immense problem for a number of years. Likewise they are right in contending that relief machinery should be decentralized so that cities will be able to look after their own jobless citizens in their own way. Centralization of work relief in Washington has not only resulted in delay and confusion; it has also undermined the stamina of local governments. Yet the mayors' cry for decentralization of relief has an empty sound when it is accompanied by bland assumption that the Federal Government will continue to furnish the lion's share of relief funds.

If local communities expect to take back the primary responsibility of alleviating hunger and want, they must be prepared to stand on their own feet financially. Every city can find reasons why the Federal Government should fill its relief coffers. But in the long run the consequences of bureaucracy and remote control may cost the taxpayers of that city far more than would a community relief system.

It must be recognized, of course, that some depressed areas are unable to supply adequate relief on a local basis. In these cases Federal aid is imperative. But they are the exception and not the rule. If the Conference of Mayors would squarely face the question of supplying more relief funds locally, as well as administering such expenditures locally, the outlook for a constructive solution would be greatly improved.

The weakness of Mr. Hopkins' policy is that he seems to fail to understand the significance of the careful local planning encouraged by the National Resources Committee. As aid for the unemployed passes from the emergency to the permanent phase it becomes the more important to draw the line of demarcation between subsidy from above and effort from below. The Government can render valuable aid to the States by coordination of many kinds; by developing an adequate system of employment exchanges, by financing depressed areas and perhaps by matching on a limited scale State and local allotments for relief. But this will require a complete reversal of Mr. Hopkins' attitude that local governments must help his bureau solve their problems.

It is especially unfortunate that the Relief Administration should try to hide difficulties arising out of Federal usurpation of local functions behind the natural public sympathy for the unemployed. Prevention of hunger and want is not an issue. But the manner in which it is handled is an extremely grave issue, calling for thoughtful planning based on the American political structure. The central government can not indefinitely continue to dole out funds on the assumption that a maximum of human sympathy will compensate for a minimum of intelligent method.

Advance In Fairfax.

In times marked by a decline of faith in democracy there is reassurance for those still loyal to its principles in a report from Fairfax County. Three colored men have there been named for jury duty in the circuit court, the first time for such recognition, it is asserted, since carpet bagger days.

Last May a special grand jury composed entirely of Negroes was called at the historic courthouse to hear charges brought against two colored persons, but applause had to be somewhat muffled for that step. Instead of eliminating racial lines in the operation of justice, it tended to accentuate them. Now Fairfax County can celebrate a real advance. And for all the other unsavoriness of the Scottsboro case, credit for this can be chalked up to its account. For it is understood that the Supreme Court's warning to the Alabama judiciary prompted the Fairfax judge also to include the names of Negroes on his jury lists.

The Californian who volunteered to lend himself for a freezing experiment is now engaged to be married. Is there no limit to this man's bravery?

"Exercise will minimize the chances of your becoming seasick," reports a physician. Mountain climbing is said to be a positive preventive.

In Union There Is Strength.

From the Omaha World-Herald.

Wherever and whenever employers and employes are found working harmoniously together on matters affecting their common interest, it is the evidence of a healthy condition.

"Nebraska industry and labor," says a Lincoln dispatch, "continued in accord tonight on an unemployment compensation bill after a three-hour conference on its details."

There were, inevitably, some minor differences, which were left in the hands of a committee to adjust. But industry and labor in Nebraska are apparently co-operating, in the friendliest spirit, to assist in getting through the Legislature an unemployment compensation bill that they believe will be workable, and fair not only to both sides but to the public at large.

With the recovery period approaching, in union will be found the State's greatest strength. In division and angry strife, both sides unreasonable and unyielding, there is only weakness and loss to both.

What Is Gerrymandering?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent New York election presented such an unusual problem that I have devoted some hours to its intricacies and have reached the conclusion that it is the boldest challenge to Democratic government that has appeared in 60 or 70 years.

It is conceded that the Republicans won the lower branch of the State Legislature by 14 seats. It is conceded that about 360,000 more Democrats voted at the election than the Republicans who succeeded in capturing the lower house of the Legislature, but more astonishing still is the fact that it is conceded that this extraordinary denial of the people's right to rule by majority government was accomplished by a gerrymander of the most unlawful and immoral proportions.

Now, if the people of the State of New York wished to disfranchise themselves, I suppose that might be assumed to be their own misfortune. But when that State assumes the leadership of the party in opposition, one has a right to ask what the leadership of that State really represents. Certainly it does not represent democracy and certainly it does not represent constitutional government.

The particular importance of this defiance of democracy and constitutional government is that at the present time New York State is offering to the country five candidates for the Republican nomination for the Presidency, every one of whom is not only a reactionary but has for years past aided and abetted the gerrymander by which the majority of the people of the State of New York are deprived of their rights. They are:

1. Theodore Roosevelt, son of the great Progressive, is a most aggressive reactionary. He has never protested against the gerrymander of New York.

2. James W. Wadsworth, leader of the reactionaries of New York, has been for years an ardent defender of the political coterie responsible for the New York gerrymander.

3. Ogden Mills is also an aggressive reactionary and defender of the New York gerrymander.

4. Bert Snell is closely identified with the public utilities and a defender of the gerrymander.

5. Hamilton Fish is extremely reactionary and since the election has upheld the gerrymander as a triumph of the people over the New Deal.

All of these men are loud proclaimers of the dangers to the Constitution under the New Deal and all of them are defenders of the iniquitous gerrymander by which the people of New York are deprived of their constitutional rights to representation.

If any of these men appear to speak on the Constitution I suggest that someone should arise in the audience and ask him how about the constitutional rights of the people of New York, who, by a majority of 360,000, are deprived of popular government and representation in the so-called "popular" branch of the State Legislature.

Character Building.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has always been considerable complaint about several organizations obtaining funds from the Community Chest. The one they complain about mostly is the fund for the character building organizations. They also think that the Chest raises funds only for charitable organizations. This is wrong. The several organizations before the Chest raised their funds by drives, so instead of several drives, the Chest was employed to make one drive for all.

As to character building organizations, before the police started their boy clubs throughout the country, training schools were filled with boys. At one time there were over 700 boys at the school on Bladensburg road, and most of these were white boys; while today the majority of the boys are colored because most of the clubs are for white boys.

I have been all my life in boy work, as field organizer for the Boy Scout movement for 21 years. I remember once talking to a bunch of boys about scouting, and ended my talk by requesting the boys to make buddies out of their fathers. A boy stood beside me whose face, hands and legs were black with dirt, but there were two streaks of white from his eyes to his chin caused by tears. I asked him if he cared to talk to me. "Yes, sir; if my father was a man like you I might make a buddy of him, but not my old man," he said.

I put this lad in scouting in a troop to which the President had presented an American flag for being the best troop in Washington. The scoutmaster had no children, so he took this boy and treated him like his own son. In six months the boy was one of the best in scouting. The father had also become the buddy of his own son. Is not this enough to prove that character building should be a part of the Chest?

Liberty League Support.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. C. W. Davie writes under the caption of "Legal Ethics" in the editorial section of Sunday's issue of The Post on activities of the National Lawyers Committee, sponsored by the American Liberty League, in which he cites Canon 28 of the Ethics, wherein the unprofessionality of the league's proffer of "free legal aid" is held unethical.

This writer, an inmate of Lorton Reformatory and now a petitioner in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, where the legality of certain practices of the local parole system is being contested, feels that in the instance of criminal cases in which an unconstitutionality exists the proffer of the league is of the highest order.

We, the inmates of Lorton Reformatory, are agreed with inmates of the United States Penitentiary at Atlanta that the American Liberty League is not prompted by political partisanship, but is an organization formed with an ultimate patriotic objective, and that is to safeguard the Constitution of the United States. Detachment Needed, Not Isolation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On Armistice Day the President indicated the direction in which America must look if it is to help in creating a lasting basis for world peace—toward removal of barriers to international trade. The root of modern war peril is the thwarted need of nations with normally growing populations for access to raw materials. Such nations, in three conspicuous instances at least, are left to the mercies of dictators and imperialists, who exploit that need with programs of invasion and conquest.

Meanwhile, nonmilitarist nations shudder at war behind high tariff walls, and look upon growing nations with a kind of fastidious fear. Now, mere indignation against aggressive war makers is a poor guide to peace policies. Without clear recognition of its cause, mere hatred of war can only feed the war spirit, and prepare the way for armed conflict between the land-hungry and land-satiated peoples.

The League of Nations inherited from the Versailles Conference this one-sided way of adjudicating "war guilt." From this bias the American people, after the heat of war, took considerable pains to dissociate themselves. We made our separate peace and declined to join the League. Now, we may sincerely hope that Europe's peace machinery may not be wrecked, but we dare not involve ourselves in the fundamental defect in it which endangers its moral prestige. Our detachment must be maintained, not in an isolationist sense, but in order that we may be free to aid the League as soon as it can correct that grave bias of judgment which it inherited from Versailles, and is ready to attack the real root of war menace.

Meanwhile, Secretary Hull's work in building up reciprocal trade agreements constitutes a positive beginning along the line of the right solution. Such policy, persistently followed up in accordance with definite and selective principles, will or can serve two purposes: First, it is an opportunity for the exercise of our bargaining power in favor of establishing genuinely friendly relations with governments which are fair to minority groups or to helpless majorities, and governments disposed to maintain good standards of working and living conditions in industry and agriculture. Thus, our State Department will be freed from much embarrassment in dealing with governments whose power rests upon abnormal internal situations, and we shall, with less fear of their enmity, be in a position to stipulate the terms upon which we can be "friendly" with such regimes.

The second or ulterior purpose that can be served is the creation of a nucleus of international trade agreements as will render raw materials accessible to the growing nations in need of them, unencumbered by fearful or greedy nationalist restrictions, the moment their governments in good faith renounce all aims involving aggressive warfare or violent dispossession.

Hence, if public opinion supports our Government in an open avowal of the aim of eliminating the real cause of war, our diplomacy and our influence in world affairs can be exercised with poise and self-control, without fear of our being stampeded into a general conflict.

The Post Impressionist

Magnificent Adventure.

Post Office, Wednesday.

EVERY seventh time, this column is not this Column. Each Sunday the space which the Post-Impressionist has been adorning upon the editorial mantlepiece is occupied by something else—and the latest something we found distinctly helpful. An article from the able typewriter of Karl Schriftgiesser, it gave us ground for a Column-quarrel today.

While putting the present African fracas in its proper place, Karl paused for a chuckle to look backward through the mists of his long life and recalled America's 1898 hazard. Said he:

"Not since Richard Harding Davis struggled so valiantly to make a magnificent adventure out of the invasion of Cuba by opera bouffe troops, so maliciously described by Mr. Walter Millis in 'The Martial Spirit,' have journalists set out for excitement as bravely as they set out for Ethiopia."

The Post-Impressionist said, a fortnight ago, that the press was overplaying Mussolini's men. Moreover, we aren't inordinately proud of everything our country did in its Spanish skirmish—though we doff our hat to "Old Man" Marshall dictating his dispatch to his paper five minutes after his legs had been shot off, and though we could never see much opera bouffe in the fever-funerals. Still, when it comes to Davis—well, we wonder if Brother Schriff's reading of R. H. D. hasn't been accomplished by reading Mr. Millis.

Anyhow, Davis himself was a magnificent adventure.

The new Encyclopedia Britannica runs true to form about him. It fails to say that his mother was the Rebecca Harding who first extracted literature from the American laborer—that R. H.'s father was editor of the old Philadelphia Public Ledger—that the son didn't finish his Lehigh course. It says: "In 1886, he became a reporter on the Philadelphia Record."

In 1886 he became a reporter on a vastly different kind of paper, the Philadelphia Press—and not immediately so much of a reporter, either. Sent to describe Fourth of July fireworks at Fairmount Park, he returned to report that there wasn't anything to his assignment, because there weren't any fireworks:

"The first set-piece blew up and killed some people and that stopped the exhibition."

But Davis grew up, as a reporter—which is to say that his newssense matured while he became, and remained, the boy with a passion for life. From the Greco-Turkish War through the early days of the World War, he missed not one major conflict. His account of the German Army's entry into Brussels is more than history: it is a journalistic classic. Long before he died at his Mount Kisco 'phone, preparing to shoulder pack again, he had become the greatest war-correspondent of his day.

The youth of the Nineties made Davis, fittingly illustrated by C. D. Gibson, their hero among writers of fiction. Some of his novels won't bear re-reading in '35: "Soldiers of Fortune," for instance. On the other hand, "The King's Jackal," despite its debt to Edmond About's "Rois en Exil," tops much modern romance: when we say it would make a first-rate motion-picture, we are not, in motion-picture language, "motivated" by the fact that R. H. D. once gave the Post-Impressionist all dramatic rights in it. As for the briefer bits, "Van Bibber" keeps his shirt immaculate to this day; "The Bar-Sinister" (yes, Mr. Terhune!) remains one of the world's best dog-stories—and Schriff isn't the newspaper-man we take him for if he won't applaud copy-boy "Gallegher."

Small wonder the envious R. H. D. legend attained proportions out of all proportion to truth: "What does it matter if the coat's not a good fit, Mr. Davis, when nobody can see it under your medals?" . . . "I am Mr. Davis." "Take a chair; I'll see you in a minute." "You don't understand—I am Richard Harding Davis" . . . "Take two chairs."

Nevertheless, the real Davis—at least as we knew him, in his later days—didn't at all invite such strictures. He was a handsome, well-poised man, yet an essentially simple one. Magnificent and adventurous, he was never his own hero: always magnificent modestly.

Our last talk with him occurred after a wartime meeting at Carnegie Hall, when socialist Mme. Vandervelde was the orator and he, Alexander Powell and the Post-Impressionist sat on the stage as living witnesses to what she had to tell of "Bleeding Belgium."

Conceited? Davis' play "The Trap" had recently "opened." We asked how it was doing. "'The Trap,'" he laughed, "snapped shut last night."

A man who glorified war? He was a romantic who never saw battle—real battle, battle at first hand—as anything save a horror: "I tingle to the notes of the first bugle sounding 'Assembly;' but I've heard 'Taps' and 'Last Post' too often not to know that Sherman was right: 'War is Hell.'"

Paths Of Glory.

Madrid, Nov. 19.

WHEN Humphrey Cobb, American writer, brought out his interesting little novel called "Paths of Glory," dealing with the execution of three French soldiers who were arbitrarily selected for this distinction, he released an American public estimate of this phase of the war to end war which was news in the United States 17 years after the war had ended.

"Paths of Glory" was a best seller. Not often does spot news of such dramatic power keep in pickle, so to speak, for 17 years. In the foreword of his book Mr. Cobb is careful to say that the story of the execution of the three soldiers was not based on actual incidents, but it has, nevertheless, been within the bounds of known facts.

Much less caution is shown by a team of French writers, Jean Balpier-Boisiere and Daniel de Ferbon, who publish an occasional magazine called Crapouillot, one volume of which deals exclusively with the summary shooting of French soldiers, officers and noncoms as well as simple poilus, and with the attempts after the war to clear their names and attain redress by their families.

Their work is not a job of authorship in the literary sense but of great reporting. They went to the records for their material and they are able to relate the actual happenings in many tragedies of the kind which Cobb mentioned by intimation. They give details of the final exoneration long after their death of men who died in disgrace, knowing they were innocent, and in some cases rested for years beneath black crosses which are conspicuous among white ones.

• • • •

AMONG the martyrs whose vindication they bring to the public attention of France was Francois Laurent, a Briton, who didn't speak French and who couldn't clearly understand the proceedings of his trail. Laurent was 29 years old and the father of two children when he went out in August, 1914. On the night of October 1 he was wounded in the little finger of his left hand by a rifle bullet and was ordered by his captain to report to the dressing station.

His name was written in the blank space on a form of accusation which had been prepared in manifold in advance on the assumption that many soldiers shot in the hand would have shot themselves to escape from the lines. He was tried one day and executed the next, with the formal charge not mutilation but desertion from his post. His captain didn't hear of this for several weeks. He then declared Laurent had been a brave soldier and had not deserted his post but had been ordered back to receive first aid.

So in December, 1933, a special court of review declared Laurent to be acquitted of the charge, his name cleared of disgrace and ordered payment of 5,000 francs to his widow and 2,500 francs each to his son and daughter.

• • • •

IN ANOTHER case a soldier named Bersot, wearing a pair of canvas pants, asked his sergeant for a pair of wool pants, which was what the rest of the command were wearing. The sergeant gave him an old pair of wool pants which were much too big, and soiled, moreover. Bersot refused to accept them, saying they looked as if they had been taken off a corpse.

When the lieutenant heard this he told Bersot that if he didn't accept the pants he'd be charged with refusing to do his duty and face the enemy. Bersot said it sounded funny that a citizen of France would be charged with refusal of obeying a military command when he only refused to accept a pair of dirty pants. For this he was given eight days in prison and his comrades began to grumble. This brought the colonel's attention as a collective protest or mutiny. The result was that Bersot was tried in court, held in a corner of a trench, and a few minutes later shot.

In 1922 the judgment was reversed on the ground that an order to accept a pair of pants was not a military command and on the further grounds that the officer who presided at the trial also made the charges.

Bersot's widow and an organization of wounded war veterans demanded that the presiding officer of the court himself be tried on charges, but the editors of Crapouillot report he was made an officer of the Legion of Honor instead.

• • • •

IN view of the tremendous interest which Americans showed in such tragedies of war in spontaneously promoting Cobb's book to the rank of best seller, it occurs to me a reprint of the magazine in English would find an even greater market in the United States.

I've only suggested the grisly reality which the French reporters imparted to their work and will only mention as another passibility in their collection the case of an infantry general who ordered his artillery to fire on his own trenches when his men failed to take a position in broad daylight after an improvident preparation.

This may have been the case Cobb had in his book. The French reporters give names, however, including the artillery officer who refused to shell the French lines without a written command.

The Anglo-Japanese Rivalry

Leith-Ross In China To Bulwark British Trade Interests.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Shanghai.

FEW events in China's eventful history since Lord Lytton's junket have excited as much comment and commotion as the arrival here late in September of Sir Frederick Leith-Ross. Ostensibly the chief economic adviser to the British government is visiting here to make a study of Chinese finances to aid in the economic rehabilitation of the country. His two-week stay in Japan was officially explained as an effort to "exchange opinions on China's monetary system." His significant failure to stop in Washington was innocently blamed on the lack of time at his disposal.

Yet, the almost unprecedented storm of official and editorial outburst and Sir Frederick's own remarks in his less guarded moments supply a hint that his aims here are not entirely academic.

The Japanese press version of the visit—significant because it so often finds its inspiration in the foreign office—suggests that Sir Frederick is intrusted with the task of finding how Great Britain can save her Oriental preserves without offending Japan.

The international struggle for domination in China—or at least its latest act—began immediately after last year's silver debacle. Out of this fray Japan emerged victorious, thanks largely to her army, which in a few weeks assured Nipponese domination in all of North China.

• • • •

BUT Albion did not remain inactive. Last December there were Anglo-Chinese conversations on the grant of an international loan to Nanking. These were followed by the visit of the British Industrial Federation's mission, headed by Lord Barnby, to Japan and the unrecognized Manchukuo. The trade missionaries sang peans of praise to Japan's enterprise and the Manchurian reconstruction, and incidentally secured some pleasing contracts.

The loan conversations lasted all through this year, with the mammoth Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, the British lion's financial paw in the Orient, reportedly playing a major role. The strategy of the loan move was astute. By drawing Japan into a consortium, London hoped to be able to control Japanese actions in China.

The Nipponese statesmen, however effectively spiked the move at its very inception by announcing their vehement and unalterable opposition to an international financial concert in the Orient. This opposition is growing in strength, as reports gain currency that Sir Frederick is offering Nanking a loan of between Ch. $500,000,000 and $800,000,000, with the revenues of Chinese railroads as the collateral.

The difficulty of trying to grant a loan to China was recognized by Sir Frederick himself, who in an interview with Japanese reporters intimated that Tokyo advanced "very stringent conditions which might be difficult for the Chinese authorities to meet."

• • • •

GREAT BRITAIN has thus found herself faced with two clear conclusions: 1. No loan could be granted to China without the consent of Japan. 2. If Great Britain wished to save her vast interests in China, roughly estimated at United States $600,000,000, she had to work out a compromise scheme acceptable to Tokyo.

Japan is well aware of John Bull's predicament. British goods cannot compete with Japanese in the Chinese market. Great Britain is unwilling and probably incapable of browbeating Japan into a "fair" division of the spoils. London's difficulties are further accentuated by the Italo-Ethiopian squabble.

Being in a position to call her own tune, Japan does it with abandon. A few days before Sir Frederick's arrival to the Japanese shores, a high official of the Tokyo foreign office told your correspondent that nothing less than a reconsideration of the whole gamut of Anglo-Japanese relations would suffice.

The Japanese press in the last month has been prominently displaying obviously inspired suggestions that London open the gates in the high empire tariff walls to Nippon-made goods. It was also reported, with tongue in cheek, that Sir Frederick offered to trade the messpot of Chinese commercial bliss for the recognition of Manchukuo. This report was later officially denied.

• • • •

MORE significant, however, was a meeting of foreign ministry officials early in October to formulate Japan's new commercial policy toward Great Britain. The conferees, including the foreign minister and the ambassadors to London, Berlin and Vienna, have reportedly agreed to seek a modification or complete abolition of the Ottawa Imperial Agreement, which keeps Nipponese goods out of Britain dominions and colonies. This question, as well as the emigration of Japanese to the British Empire, and the "redistribution" of colonies and League mandates, have reportedly been broached by Tokyo politicos in their conversations with Sir Frederick.

"Unless Great Britain understands our attitude on these questions," said the Tokyo Asahi, Japan's leading daily, "there will be no possibility of Anglo-Japanese cooperation on financial and economic assistance to China or upon other matters in the Far East."

The Japanese official stand on the questions is thus described by the Asahi: "Of more vital importance than Chinese finances is that Great Britain should understand the significance of the reawakening and development of all Asiatic races—Japanese, Chinese, Siamese and others. Japan is a growing nation and it would be natural for both her goods and her emigrants to find their way into British dominions. Australia, New Zealand and Canada are, however, closed to immigration, and these and other British possessions have adopted restrictions upon Japanese exports.

"Unavoidably Japan has turned to Manchukuo and China, but here Britain is also moving to limit Japan's activities in the name of the 'open door,' 'equal opportunity,' 'joint aid for China' and 'Anglo-Japanese cooperation in China.'

"As long as Great Britain maintains this policy, she will find herself in conflict with the reawakening and development of Asiatic races, and promotion of international peace will be difficult unless Britain is willing to give a free hand to the activities of these races."

• • • •

THIS succinct summary of the Japanese views clearly shows that Tokyo will fully utilize its advantageous bargaining position to gain further concessions from London, if not in the British Empire, then here at the expense of the British trader and investor.

But what of China, the third party to the complex Oriental political drama and the object of London's and Tokyo's touching attention? Seldom in the recent history of China has the editorial comment on any important subject reached the degree of dullness that has been achieved in the case of Sir Frederick's mission. Editorial remarks, although plentiful, have never concerned themselves with the current belief that the British expert came here to seek ways to split China asunder into spheres of influence.

The most vigorous comment came from the Ta Kung Pao in Tientsin, where the Japanese forces in North China have their headquarters. Said the daily:

"China welcomes friendly foreign assistance, but will not accept any commitments imposed on her by any foreign power by virtue of financial assistance. No foreign monopoly and no terms dictated to China will be accepted. She must have full liberty to see how any foreign financial assistance is applied. China welcomes financial aid from countries which observe the principle of equality and reciprocity, but will not accept any help which has a political background. She is willing to establish closer financial relations with friendly nations, but will not consider any proposition tending to give certain countries monopolies in this land.

"China and Great Britain have long been on friendly terms, and we realize that Britain has no special ambitions in this country. We regard the visit of Sir Frederick as a friendly gesture. Any suggestions made by him after his investigation will be carefully considered by the Chinese government ment. We have little doubt that his visit will produce a far-reaching effect on existing trade relations between the two countries."

• • • •

THE depression shaking China's economic structure is making the need for a large foreign loan imperative. Yet, China today is in no position either to challenge Japan by accepting a British loan, or to incur London's enmity and internal dissatisfaction by securing help in Tokyo. This precarious position, between the Japanese Scylla and the British Charybdis is probably responsible for the restraint demonstrated by the Chinese press.

Sir Frederick will remain here for a few more weeks or months, traveling, studying financial statements, conferring with bankers, merchants and officials. When his report is ready, it may result in a radical change in British policy in the Orient.

Tokyo Dismisses Plan For Joint Loan, Holding Whip.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"In Again."

(Or "It's a Matter of Altitude.")

I said I was through with the market—
"I'm finished!" my friends heard me cry;
Far back in the days when the panic
Hit me such a sock in the eye,
Adamant was I as Gibraltar
When issues stuck close to the floor—
But now I am back—and on margin!

They all look so good when they soar!
When A. T. & T. sold at eighty
I knowingly cried, "Not for mine!"
I passed up stocks now in the sixties
When they were all quoted at nine!
"They'll never get me for a sucker!"
I roared with a look very wise,
But now I am back, for they always
Look grand when they're hitting the skies!

I could have had "Big Steel" at twenty,
But I learned my lesson, quoth I;
When "Motors" was eighteen or nineteen
I said, "Why, that stock's not a buy;"
I sneeringly passed up the Blue Chips
When they could be had for a dime—
But, boy, am I anxious to get 'em
The higher and faster they climb!

When Chrysler was something like seven
I wouldn't have bought it at five;
When issues sold two for a nickel
I thought them all due for a dive;
"I'm through with the market forever!"
I cried, but they've got me again;
For stocks that were five or six dollars
Look hot at one hundred and ten!

"Now listen, I'm finished, I tell you,"
I said since the '29 bust;
To any suggestion from brokers
I turned right away in disgust;
The stock market just couldn't tempt me
When every damned thing was so low—
But gangway! I can't wait to get 'em—
I love 'em the higher they go!

Fooling the Pitcher.

Mussolini has taken Emile de Bono out of the box and put in a fresh pitcher. It isn't a matter of pitching. How can anybody get the ball over the plate when the enemy squats on the plate under a pink umbrella?

Mr. Hoover calls the Administration the "Follies." The big scene, as he sees it, comes when the taxpayers' march down the runway without any clothes on singing, "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?"

The depression will be over when we stop trying to control potatoes and let the vegetables arrive on a plate in the old-fashioned way.

No End Of Books

Fine Editions.

THE Heritage Press, a brand-new enterprise devoted to the production of fine editions of the classics at $5 each, has taken a good deal of thought over these first six volumes on its list, and it is only fair that we respond in kind. Nothing need be said about the literary content—1,500 booksellers voted on 150 titles, and I should fear to be tedious in assaying the merits of Dickens, the author of "The Song of Songs," the Abbe Prevost d'Exiles Hawthorne, Shakespeare and A. E. Housman. But the Heritage Press invites us to look at the various ambitiously wrought formats, the work of foremost designers and illustrators, intended to present these classics in permanent and distinguished guise. Well, when they are good, they are very, very good, and when they are bad, they are horrid.

Three of the volumes can be whole-heartedly admired. The prize, of course, is the "David Copperfield"—832 pages of fine, clear Baskerville (just about the nicest type in the world) bound in gold and brown-stamped light buff leather, and decorated abundantly in color and line by the chaste, delicate hand of John Austen. The full-page color illustrations verge on prettiness, and lack the Dickensian character—but that is about all to be said against this handsome volume. It rates a good, stanch A.

• • • •

And "The Story of Manon Lescaut," with half-leather back and marbled sides, and with spirited full-page illustrations in color by the Parisian artist, Pierre Brissaud, is equally deftly fitted to its text and is likewise a gem.

Toward W. A. Dwiggins' interpretation of "The Scarlet Letter" I feel somewhat lukewarm. The attempt to convey an 1850 air by the typography is successful, if you like it. But the illustrations are wooden and seem rather unnecessary.

• • • •

THERE can be little hesitancy, however, over this edition of "Romeo and Juliet." The text page, in Bembo type, would have been lovely if multitudinous browned rules had not been spread across it. They add nothing but confusion. And then why on earth do people think they have to illustrate Shakespeare? The angular drawing and the misty, watery colors of Sylvain Sauvage, mannered and Italianate, appear to be anything else but Shakespearean. If you would see how Shakespeare may be kept clean and shining in a printed book, look at the "Cymbeline," say, published by Ernest Benn at the Shakespeare Head Press. In contrast, the present edition seems merely pretty in the manner of a chromo.

If you like little vignettes in bright, rather harsh colors (they're drawn by Edward A. Wilson, who is best at posters) spread through the verses of "A Shropshire Lad," well and good. I don't. The mind's eye sees better color in the lines, and should not be distracted. And the applegreen end-papers and the binding in a substance like cork in color and texture are, to say the most, curious to look upon. All I could think of was a very de luxe customer's list of some Midwestern bond house, into which a job printer threw all the resources of his shop. (A word about that binding. The publishers describe it as "full leather," which to me means real leather. But I discovered a very remarkable fact about the pig or cow from which we are to suppose it came—the pores of the critter, every two inches, repeat an identical and identifiable pattern. Either science should take note of that phenomenon, or publishers shouldn't fib.)

But we must credit the designers of the Heritage Press with a lively ingenuity and with a courage to plunge into new fields. These volumes will be distinctive on any man's shelf. And if our tastes differ, we can give the old Latin proverb the lie—nothing is quite so much fun as disputing about them.

Lindbergh's License As Pilot Is Renewed

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh visited Roosevelt and Mitchel airports yesterday to have his pilot's license renewed, without more than a few persons at either place recognizing him.

Maj. W. M. Crandall, of the U. S. Army Medical Corps, examined him at Mitchel in accordance with semi-annual requirements of his flying permit and pronounced him "physically fit." Then he drove, alone in a small car, to Roosevelt field to have supervising inspector Sanford L. Willits, of the Bureau of Air Commerce, renew the license.

Toscanini to Return To U. S. in January

Paris, Nov. 19 (AP).—Arturo Toscanini announced tonight he will sail for New York January 8, "with no idea of retiring from work, quitting the philharmonic, or breaking engagements."

The director of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society, after leading an opera concert attended by a capacity crowd, denied New York reports he would retire next spring.

"On the contrary," he said, "I expect an active season."

Guffey Expects Control Laws In Other Fields

He Says If Supreme Court Upholds Coal Act, It Will Be Extended.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, forecast yesterday that if his coal control law is upheld by the Supreme Court the same kind of legislation will be applied to a number of other industries, particularly those involving natural resources.

Guffey said he had already been urged by anthracite miners and operators to apply similar control to their industry.

Some manufacturing industries, he added, also have asked for extension of the principle of the Guffey law to their fields. To all requests of that kind, he said, he had replied:

"I'll do nothing further until a decision is rendered by the Supreme Court, and I am confident that will be a favorable decision."

To Protect Consumer.

Meanwhile coal users were promised yesterday by C. F. Hosford, jr., chairman of the Bituminous coal commission, that they have no reason to fear excessive prices as a result of the Guffey law.

He said in a statement that the commission will make every effort to end the practice of "selling slack sizes of coal at prices far below the actual cost of production."

But no "fair-minded" customer can expect to buy coal at prices causing heavy loss to the producer, he contended, adding that the Guffey act contains far-reaching consumer safeguards.

"While it is not anticipated that the establishment of maximum prices will be necessary, the powers of the commission in this respect are specific," the statement said.

Railroads Held Exempt.

Regardless of their mail contracts, railroads were declared yesterday by the legal department of the Association of American Railroads to be exempt from a coal commission ruling that companies dealing with the Government must use coal mined in compliance with the Guffey act.

It was emphasized that the opinion did not undertake to define provisions of the Guffey act itself, but merely set out that the commission's regulation would not directly affect rail transportation of the mails.

Graziani's Forces Nearing Woraleh

Town Is Control Point of Southern Sector.

By the United Press.

Djibouti, French Somaliland, Nov. 19.—Gen. Rudolfo Graziani's forces in southern Ethiopia today advanced toward Woraleh, a control point of trails between the Fafan and Jerer Rivers leading to Harar and Jijiga.

Occupation of Woraleh would enable Italian motorized raiding columns to push forward and cut aff Harar and Jijiga communications.

According to usually well-informed native traders, Italian raiding parties already have reached outskirts of Jijiga.

Reliable information from Diredawa, Ethiopia, announced capture of 50 Ethiopian motor trucks during the advance. Trails and villages between Jijiga and the frontier of British Somaliland reportedly were bombed heavily from the air and several ammunition trunks from Berbera en route to Jijiga were blown up.

Wild Ethiopian warriors from the interior reportedly arrived at Diredawa and tried to trade cartridges for food. It was reported that previous undisciplined hordes plundered everything along their route.

2 Slayings Laid To Louis Capone

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 19.—Louis Capone, 37, a restaurant proprietor, surrendered to police in Brooklyn late today and was charged with the garage "line-up" murder of Joseph Amberg and Morris Kessler last September 30.

Capt. John J. McGowan said Capone had been arrested on minor charges before, but never convicted. Capone will be arraigned tomorrow. He is no relative of Alphonse Capone, Chicago gangster now in Alcatraz Island Prison.

Amberg and his chauffeur were stood against a wall in a Brooklyn garage and mowed down several days after the killing of two policy sellers.

A short time afterward Amberg's brother, "Pretty Louie," was killed and his body left in a blazing automobile.

That was followed by the mass slaughter of Arthur "Dutch Schultz" Flegenheimer and three of his followers at Newark, N. J.

Acting Rector

Harris & Ewing.

THE RIGHT REV. MGR. PATRICK J. McCORMICK, who yesterday was named acting rector of Catholic University, succeeding Bishop James H. Ryan.

Education Professor Is Made Acting Head by Archbishop.

The Right Rev. Mgr. Patrick J. McCormick, Ph. D., professor of education at the Catholic University, has been appointed acting rector, according to an announcement made last night to the staff of the university.

Upon the departure Monday of the Most Rev. James H. Ryan, Bishop of Omaha, and rector emeritus of the university, the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and chancellor of the university, informed Mgr. McCormick by telegram of his appointment.

In his confirming letter, the archbishop stated:

"By wire today I have appointed you acting rector of the Catholic University until such time as the Holy See shall have decided on the appointment of a rector."

Mgr. McCormick is an alumnus of Catholic University, having received the degree of doctor of philosophy in 1911. He has been identified with the department of education of the university and is now serving as its head. Since establishment of the Catholic Sisters College in 1911 he has been a member of its faculty and dean of the college since 1921.

The acting rector was born at Norwich, Conn., in 1880. Following his ordination in 1904 he became superintendent of Catholic schools in the Diocese of Hartford, Conn. He has been editor of the National Catholic Review, is a contributor to many periodicals and is one of the most widely known leaders in Catholic education in the United States.

Warsaw, Budapest Colleges Closed

Anti-Jewish Riots Bring Both Orders.

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, Hungary, Nov. 19.—Authorities ordered the closing for an indefinite period of Budapest University today because of anti-Jewish rioting in which 15 Jews were injured.

Minor rioting started yesterday in the Polytechnic Institute and spread to other divisions of the university today.

Warsaw, Nov. 19 (Jewish Telegraph Agency).—The Warsaw University and its agricultural school were closed for an indefinite period today after a renewal of anti-Jewish excesses by student adherents of both sexes of the Anti-Semitic Endek Party.

An authoritative survey reported order had been restored after anti-Jewish disorders at Lwow, with about 25 Jews injured. All are expected to recover.

Walsh Backed For Proposed Shipping 'Czar'

Georgetown U. Official Suggested for Such a Post at Convention.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 19.—In the face of a threatening rate war in the North Atlantic and shipping efforts to strengthen the merchant marine, a proposal was received by the American Merchant Marine Conference today to appoint a shipping "czar."

The suggestion was made to offer the post to the Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University in Washington, and regent of the School of Foreign Service.

Dr. Walsh addressed the concluding session of the conference on the need of consolidating the merchant marine, but had departed when the proposal was offered by Malcolm Stewart, of Cincinnati.

In his address, Dr. Walsh accused American shipping interests of "jockeying for special interests" in a way that "simply plays straight into the hands of powerful opponents."

Need for Unity Stressed.

"If you go before Congress for a subsidy bill," he said, "as I believe you ought, go to Washington with more unity than I have hitherto been able to discover.

"The national debt is already in excess of $32,000,000,000. To justify further appropriation on its behalf, shipping must come before the taxpayers with a more co-operative and less competitive attitude."

Dr. Walsh expressed strong conviction that the marine shipping industry must prepare itself for sacrifices in the form of consolidations and possible eliminations. This was witnessed abroad, he pointed out, by the consolidated Italian lines, the Cunard-White Star merger and the German combination.

Following these recommendations, which would require strong centralization of authority to become effective, Dr. Walsh's name was brought into the discussions.

A post comparable to a commissioner of American shipping is that of the executive head of the Transatlantic Passenger Conference, left vacant by the death last month of Emil Lederer. This conference, through co-operative action, dictates the international rules of transatlantic passenger service.

Rate War Threatens.

A threatening rate war among merchant lines has brought to the point of dissolution the North Atlantic-Continental Freight Conference, a similar organization for freight carriers.

The conference members are scheduled to disband Friday to take individual action for competitive protection as the result of the withdrawal of the Black Diamond Lines over alleged competitive rate cuts by German vessels. Conference officials hope to avert the rate war through negotiations.

A questionnaire circulated by the Merchant Marine Conference among chambers of commerce, trade bodies and newspapers disclosed, a report stated, that a privately owned and operated merchant marine is favored rather than Government ownership.

The conference also went on record for Federal aid to American shipping to overcome higher American costs of ship construction and operation.

McCarl Approves 10 Million for NYA

Research Projects to Get $502,000 of Funds.

By the Associated Press.

Approval by Comptroller General McCarl of an allotment of $10,000,000 for the National Youth Administration was announced yesterday by Aubrey W. Williams, executive director.

Williams said the fund will be distributed among the States, the District of Columbia and Alaska and Hawaii in accordance with requirements.

Expenditures were divided as follows: For youth community development and recreational leadership, $6,090,000; for rural youth development, $2,084,000; for public service training projects, $1,324,000, and for research projects, $502,000.

Jobs will be given to youths between the ages of 16 and 25, 90 per cent of whom must come from relief families.

Inter-County Phone Charges Hit in Fairfax

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

The movement against the inter-exchange telephone toll charges in Arlington and Fairfax Counties and Alexandria City is rapidly gaining strength among the citizens of those sections of northern Virginia.

Last night the Merrifield Improvement Association adopted a resolution protesting the toll rates and plans to present the question to the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce at its next meeting. The Merrifield group specifically urged that the telephone rate between Falls Church and Fairfax be reduced from 10 to 5 cents, as in former years. The association also adopted a resolution addressed to the telephone company asking that all pay station telephones again be listed.

Committees were appointed for the new year as follows: Entertainment, Mrs. Wilbur Tubaugh, chairman; Mrs. B. F. Salsbury, Mrs. C. R. Moran, Miss Corita Seoane, Mrs. Wirt Ferguson, Mrs. Edward D. Vosbury and Mrs. Walles A. Gray; finance, Dana P. Miller and Jesse B. Lunsford; membership, Mrs. C. H. Rogers, chairman; Mrs. Charles Kaiser, Mrs. D. N. Carlston and Mrs. Dana Miller. A schedule of meetings for the coming year was adopted. Arrangements were made for the annual Christmas tree and party for members and families at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Tubaugh.

The women of the Baptist Church of Herndon will hold a baked chicken and old ham supper in the dining room of the Herndon Congregational Church on Friday from 5 to 9 p. m. Fancy articles will be on sale.

The committee in charge includes Mrs. A. E. Steele, chairman; assisted by Mrs. Russell A. Lynn, Mrs. C. N. Florence, Mrs. E. M. Armfield and Mrs. William Kephart.

The Washington Junior League, under the direction of Mrs. H. L. Rust, jr., will present a marionette show for the benefit of the Falls Church Parent-Teacher Association in Madison School Auditorium Friday afternoon at 3:15, and Friday evening at 7:30 p. m. The program will include a variety show, the "Three Little Bears" and "Alice Through the Looking Glass." In the evening the Falls Church orchestra will play before and after the program. Vocal solos will be rendered by Falls Church talent.

The Herndon Parent-Teacher Association will sponsor a card party in the auditorium of Herndon High School on Thursday night at 8 p. m. A turkey will be given as door prize. The following committee is in charge of arrangements: Mrs. E. M. Armfield, Mrs. Frank Humme, Mrs. E. C. Shull and Mrs. Bently Harrison.

The Ladies Aid Society of Dranesville M. E. Church South will hold a chicken pie and oyster supper on Thursday at 5 p. m., in the old Dranesville Tavern. Mrs. Fannie Connor s chairman of arrangements.

The Herndon 4-H Club has reorganized with the following officers: President, Miss Muriel Wheeler; vice president, Miss Jane Hutchison; secretary-treasurer, Frances Sue Robinson; reporter, Katherine Harrison; cheer leader, Rowena Crippen; song leader, Helen Stouffer; program committee, Frances Sue Robinson, Doris Groves; refreshment committee, Jane Hutchison, Mary Lee Harrison and Margaret Lawrence. Mrs. G. R. Bready was elected senior leader for the year. The club has chosen sewing as their project for the year.

Lansdale Assails Fusionists, Throws Meeting Into Uproar

Democratic Commissioner Lays Nepotism, Waste to Coughlan, King, Fellow Board Members; Charges Platform Promises Are Not Kept.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
1111 Oak Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone, Shepherd 2363.

Launching a surprise attack on the administration of county affairs by the Fusion Party majority, County Commissioner Richard H. Lansdale, Democrat, yesterday threw the meeting of the Montgomery County commissioners into an uproar.

Lansdale charged nepotism to Commissioners Paul M. Coughlan and Charles E. King, and alleged that instead of reducing the number of boards and commissions as promised in the Fusion platform, the Fusion commissioners had insisted on creating two boards of public welfare. He said that in abolishing the post of supervisor of county aid the commissioners had created a new department which will do practically the same work but will cost taxpayers more.

Lansdale declared himself surprised by the statement that the Fusion Party will put a full ticket in the field next election with the aim "to completely destroy the Lee machine." He said this was particularly amusing to him since he had held two conferences at his home with "some of you in the interest of uniting the Democratic Party for the next county election."

He charged that the statement issued by the Fusion commissioners announcing the intent to continue the Fusion party did not mention any achievement you have attained or any better or cheaper county government you administered during your year (practically) of control of the affairs of the county. You do not give any account of your stewardship."

Asks Questions.

Lansdale said that a Fusion patronage committee which was to recommend suitable and efficient persons for the county positions had been formed after the election. "Have you followed the committee's recommendations or have you resorted to a scramble to get what you could for your individual friends?" he asked.

"If you think you have appointed the best men and women to office, let me call your attention to the man who has been shifted around to four places to find something that he could do and to the janitor of the Dinpensary Building at Silver Spring who recently damaged the building to the extent of $500 by his inefficient or careless handling of hte heating plant," Landsdale continued.

"What about economy?" he then asked. The commissioner said that practically every employe appointed at less than his Democratic predecessor had had his salary raised and that one stenographer, "and a good one," who had been working for $60 a month for a firm of lawyers in Rockville had been given $125 a month salary with the commissioners.

Hints Nepotism.

"Last Tuesday you raised the salaries of six or seven dispensary employes at a total increase of $95 a month. The reason given was that the dispensary is making money but it happens that one of those who got the raise is Mr. King's son-in-law and another is Mr. Coughlan's brother-in-law. And while we are still on the subject of economy will somebody please explain why it takes three men and two women clerks to help Mr. Coughlan, a full-time commissioner, run the Eastern Suburban District, while Mr. Hagner (Robert D.), a part-time commissioner, runs the Western Suburban District with one man and two women?" Lansdale asked.

Landsdale declared the Republican State roads commission had been in office six months but "can any of you tell me where we stand with them and what work we can expect in Montgomery County either from gasoline tax funds or from Federal money? Or where the improvements, if any, will be located?"

The report of the Montgomery County grand jury urging establishment of a county detective bureau and an assistant State's attorney, was presented to the Montgomery County Commissioners yesterday. Resolutions adopted by the Montgomery County Press Association which ask appointment of a qualified coroner and formation of a county detective bureau also were presented. The commissioners took the matter under advisement.

Mayor D. M. Blandford of Rockville appeared before the county commissioners to urge assignment of a county policeman to patrol Rockville streets. The mayor said the town could not afford to maintain its one man police force, Leslie Thompson, who was dismissed Monday. The commissioners promised to consider the request.

The county commissioners voted to raise the salary of Miss Marie Vanden Heuvel, clerk in the office of Commissioner Coughlan from $60 to $80 a month and accepted the resignation of Mrs. Helen Howard Jobes as secretary to the State's attorney.

One zoning application was approved and another denied this week by the mayor and town council of Takoma Park following hearings before the civic improvement committee. Property on Flower avenue owned by R. A. Lutes was recommended to the Maryland-National Capital Parks and Planning Commission for re-zoning from residential "A" to residential "B." Re-zoning of property on Saratoga, Philadelphia and Baltimore avenues owned by Frank J. Downey from residential "A" to commercial "D" was disapproved.

The council, at its monthly meeting Monday night, voted to request the State Roads Commission to assume entire jurisdiction over the East-West highway within the limits of the town, and proposed to grant easements giving the State full title to the highway.

The council also adopted ordinances providing for construction of sidewalks on the east side of Lee avenue between Carroll and Hancock avenues, and also on a portion of Heather avenue.

Richard Hamm, of the American Automobile Association, will be the speaker at a meeting of the Rockville Parent-Teacher Association tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the high school auditorium. Hamm will also show safety motion pictures.

As a feature of the meeting, the Rockville School Boy Patrol will present a play depicting safety measures. The play is under the direction of Mrs. L. Fletcher Schott.

Mrs. Josephine Stewart Haynes, 1519 Connecticut avenue, Washington, filed suit for an absolute divorce from Thaddeus Haynes, 411 High street, Friendship Heights, Md., in the Circuit Court for Montgomery County, at Rockville, Md., yesterday.

According to the petition, the couple was married at Ellicott City, Md., March 4, 1933, and have no children. The plaintiff charges infidelity and misconduct. Mrs. Haynes is represented by Attorney Bird H. Dolby, Mount Rainier, Md.

The annual turkey dinner sponsored by Miss Beulah Dove's class of the Rockville Methodist Church will be held tomorrow evening from 5 to 8 o'clock. The dinner will be served in the Sunday School assembly room.

A meeting of the Sligo Park Hills Auxiliary to the American Red Cross will be held today at 1 p. m. at the home of the chairman, Mrs. J. B. Mertie, jr., 110 Park Crest drive, Sligo Park Hills, Md.

Plans for a ladies' night to be held November 30 by the Takoma Park Lions Club were made yesterday at a meeting at the Masonic Temple. The affair will be at the home of Dr. William A. Shannon with Doran Platt, Dr. E. Clyde Shade, and Harold Stevens assisting as hosts.

It was voted to sponsor a performance of the three-act play "Three Wise Fools" by the Little Theater of Takoma Park, December 13, at the Presbyterian Church hall, Maple and Tulip avenues, for the charity fund. The club is supplying many poor families of Takoma Park with coal and milk during the winter. Dr. Shade was appointed by J. Milton Derrick, president in charge of the ticket committee.

"What the report card should mean to parents" is the subject of a talk whch Mrs. L. L. Powers, principal of the Takoma Park Grade School, Philadelphia avenue, will give at a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association tomorrow at 2 p. m. The meeting will be preceded by a luncheon at 1 p. m.

A new arrangement of cafeteria equipment will be discussed at the luncheon.

Plans for the annual Thanksgiving visit to Walter Reed Hospital will be made by the W. C. T. U. of Colesville, Md., at a meeting tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the home of Mrs. John Hamilton, Four Corners, Md.

Imposition of a 2-cent tax levy for the support of the Silver Spring public library was approved by the Parent-Teacher Association of the East Silver Spring Elementary School. The tax will be made on property in the area served by the library. The association also voted to appropriate $25 to the Silver Spring public health lay committee for the care of the teeth of certain children in the school. A motion picture on Coast Guard life was shown.

Charles S. Houck, of Frederick, commander of the Maryland American Legion, was the principal speaker at joint installation ceremonies of Cissel-Saxon Post and Cissel-Saxon unit, American Legion, of Silver Spring, Md. Houck urged the post to follow the example of many other posts in the State by organizing a disaster relief squad. Mrs. H. S. Giusta was installed as president of the auxiliary unit and Thurman C. Metcalf was installed as commander of the post.

Dr. Gallup to Speak On Magazine Polls

'America Speaks' Editor to Be Heard Tomorrow.

Dr. George Gallup, nationally known expert on newspaper and magazine polls and surveys, will be a speaker at the National Press Club luncheon at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow.

Dr. Gallup is editor of The Washington Post Sunday feature, "America Speaks," which has given reports of polls on Roosevelt's popularity, the United States Supreme Court, the wet-and-dry issue, and United States neutrality.

His speech will be on "Polls—How They Are Taken, How They Err, and What's Behind Them." After his talk Dr. Gallup will answer questions.

Fight to Limit Beer Sale Lost By Alexandria

Appeals Court Rules City Has No Authority Over Dealers.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The State supreme court of appeals, sitting in Richmond yesterday, refused a writ of error to the City of Alexandria, which sought a review of the judgment of the Arlington Circuit Court that the city is without authority to adopt an ordinance limiting the hours of sale of beer and wine.

The City Council of Alexandria several months ago adopted an ordinance limiting the hours of sale of beer and wine, setting the closing hour at midnight, and prohibiting sale on Sunday except between the hours of 1 and 9 p. m. and then only with regular meals. The Alexandria dealers appealed to the police court, which held the ordinance invalid; the city then appealed to the Circuit Court of Arlington County, and Judge Walter T. McCarthy upheld the ruling of the police justice, James Reese Duncan. The city then appealed to the supreme court of appeals.

Mayor E. C. Davison and City Attorney Carl L. Budwesky stated last night that the League of Virginia Municipalities plans to go before the State Legislature in January in an attempt to have the State ABC law amended so as to permit each municipality or community to enact regulations for the control of the beer and wine traffic. The present ruling is that Alexandria and Arlington County dealers may observe the same hours as those in effect in the District of Columbia—closing at 2 a. m. except Saturday night, when they must close at midnight.

A petition in voluntary bankruptcy was filed yesterday with Frederick L. Flynn, referee in bankruptcy, by Mayor E. C. Davison of Alexandria. Mayor Davison is represented by Attorney Harry F. Kennedy, and declined to make any statement, pending the hearing.

The Red Cross membership is in full swing, and today booths for receiving membership subscriptions will be opened in the four banks of the city, and in the city postoffice. Members of the Alexandria Woman's Club, under the leadership of Mrs. J. Cameron Wemyss and Mrs. Robert Heydenreich, will be in charge.

Members of the Alexandria Woman's Club who will serve at the banks today are: First National, Mrs. Robert Heydenreich and Mrs. George E. Schlosser; Burke & Herbert, Mrs. Oliver A. Ryder and Mrs. D. F. McGowan; Citizens National, Mrs. R. C. Brehaut and Mrs. Pierce S. Ellis; Alexandria National, Mrs. Howard Stark and Mrs. Walter DuB. Brookings; Postoffice, Mrs. B. Abraham and Mrs. T. Harvey Henshaw.

Other members who will assist later are Miss M. E. Slaymaker, Miss Clara Talbott, Mrs. Herbert B. Whitney, Mrs. Eugene H. Dooman, Mrs. Oscar B. Ryder, Mrs. Willard Parker, Mrs. J. Cameron Wemyss, Mrs. W. Cameron Roberts, Mrs. William M. King, Mrs. L. H. Dudley, Mrs. Arthur J. Mellott and Mrs. Clarence H. Strader.

The Fidelis Philathea Class of the First Baptist Church has elected these officers for the coming year: Miss Wilma Roland, president; Miss Bernine Smith, first vice president; Mrs. Lillian Milan, second vice president; Mrs. Katherine Thomas, third vice president; Miss Margaret Lane, secretary; Mrs. Viola Beck, assistant secretary; Miss Irma Sturdyine, treasurer; Miss Gladys Darling, secret service leader; Miss Edith Brown, assistant teacher. The new officers will be installed the first Sunday in January.

A district institute of the board of Christian education of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South will be held in the Methodist Episcopal Church South, beginning at 10 a. m. Saturday. The sessions will be presided over by the Rev. E. C. Berry, presiding elder of the Washington District.

The sessions will be attended by presiding elders, pastors, members of the conference board of Christian education, district officers of children's, young people's and adult's work; church school superintendents, officers and teachers, members of local church boards of Christian education, accredited instructors and many others interested in the work.

Advice has been received by Mayor E. C. Davison from Brig. Gen. S. Gardner Weller, adjutant general of Virginia, that the Works Progress Administration has approved the armory building projects for Virginia, including Alexandria.

An appropriation of $25,000 has been made by the WPA for each of these armories, and the City of Alexandria has agreed to furnish a site and appropriate $2,500 for the work. The site selected is between the municipal swimming pool and the old Alexandria High School tennis courts, facing on Cameron street.

The plans for the new building would make it available for community purposes as well as military.

Peery Gets Plan to Buy Rights of Way to Extend Parkway.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Cla. 509 Clarendon, Va.

Gov. George A. Peery yesterday had under consideration a proposal that the State appropriate $100,000 to purchase rights of way to extend the George Washington Memorial Parkway along the Potomac River to Great Falls, Va.

A. B. Cammerer, director of the National Park Service, told a conference of State and Arlington County officials with the Governor at Richmond yesterday that an extension of the parkway along the river would only be possible if the State or county provided the right of way.

The Arlington delegation included William D. Medley, of the House of Delegates; Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder, Christopher B. Garnett and William E. A. McShea, members of the county board, and Roy S. Braden, county manager. They urged that the State co-operate in the extension of the parkway to relieve traffic congestion.

State officials at the conference were Highway Commissioner H. G. Shirley and Col. R. A. Gilliam, of the conservation and development commission.

Contract for additional pipe for the county sewerage system was awarded to the Arlington Concrete Corporation by the county board at a special meeting last night. The accepted bid was $4,975.

In an effort to clarify an impression that there was no need for a drive for funds by the County Welfare Board, Hugh J. McGrath, chairman, appeared before the board. He said it was explained to the board at the time the budget was approved that a drive for additional funds would be necessary.

McGrath said that the welfare department has two accounts, one for funds appropriated by the county board to be expended in behalf of legal residents in distress and a second for emergency cases of persons not legal residents.

He also stated that efforts have been made to have funds contributed to the Community Chest in Washington by residents of the county made available for expenditure in the county. This has been unsuccessful.

The current drive is being carried on jointly with the Arlington Hospital Association. Persons contributing have the opportunity of stating to which organization their contribution should go.

County Manager Roy S. Braden was authorized in a resolution offered by Board Member C. B. Garnett to prepare specifications for repainting, furnishing shades, furniture and new lights for the Circuit Court room.

With the Christmas season rapidly approaching, George M. Yeatman, president of the Clarendon Business Men's Association, last night announced plans to convert the business section of the community into what is termed "A Santa Claus Lane."

The plans provide for setting huge Christmas trees, trimmed with colored lights, in boxes along Wilson boulevard from North Highland street to North Irving street.

The committee in charge of arrangements consists of H. W. Beattie, chairman; T. C. McDonough, I. C. Warner and Jack Cummins.

The home department of the Arlington Woman's Club will meet tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. George A. Collier on Columbia pike. The topic for discussion will be, "Home Planning for Convenience and Comfort."

Judge Walter T. McCarthy in circuit court yesterday appointed Odie R. Howell a member of the county police force. The appointment was made upon the recommendation of Sheriff Howard B. Fields. Howell took the oath of office before deputy clerk, Miss Teresa Williams.

The Edward Douglas White Council, No. 2473, Knights of Columbus, will meet tomorrow in its clubrooms at Clarendon at 9 p. m.

The Arlington County Library Association will meet tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. in the library room at Clarendon.

Dr. Ivan Booker, assistant director of research at the National Education Association, will speak to the Parent-Teachers Association of the Washington Lee High School tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the school auditorium. He will speak on "Failure Prevention."

Newly Formed Service Club Elects R. R. Reno as President

Organization of the Eighteenth District Service Club of Prince Georges County, Md., has been completed with the election of R. R. Reno, of Seat Pleasant, as president.

William D. Himes, principal of the Maryland Park High School, was named vice president. Other officers are Mrs. E. V. Millier, secretary; Mrs. Irene Connors, treasurer; Mrs. Edwin Fisher, publicity director, and Dr. William White, property custodian.

A collection and distribution committee was appointed, with Mrs. David W. Close, chairman, assisted by Mrs. Nellie Garner, Mrs. J. W. Beavers, Mrs. E. Clark, Mrs. Ethel Limerick and C. C. Carter.

The club will administer relief to needy children and others the coming winter. Clothing, shoes and other artciles will be collected through the schools and distributed from a central location. The project has the endorsement of Nicholas Orem, county superintendent of schools, and the county Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations.

Collection of articles will be made from the schools each Thursday with distribution scheduled on Tuesdays and Fridays. Orders for supplies will be filled upon presentation of an order form, signed by a teacher or Parent-Teacher Association representative. Children with orders must be accompanied by their parents.

Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles, former Ambassador to Cuba and a resident of Oxon Hill, Prince Georges County, will speak before the Young Men's Club of Prince Georges County at its monthly meeting Thursday, December 19, in the Masonic Hall at Hyattsville.

The club yesterday opened an intensive membership campaign. Egbert F. Tingley, of Hyattsville, a member of the Maryland House of Delegates and chairman of the club's membership committee, announced personnel of the committee, which includes at least one representative from each of the 21 election districts in the county.

Mr. Henry Barringer,
Classified Advertising Manager,
The Washington Post,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

Here is an interesting example of results from Washington Post advertising.

The attached advertisement appeared in The Post yesterday and brought 67 prospects to our new car showroom the same day the ad appeared. By the close of the business day we had taken orders for eleven 1935 Ford V-8's.

When you take into consideration the fact that yesterday was a cold rainy day the Washington Post is all the more worthy of applause for bringing us such a fine response to our advertisement.

Very truly yours,

C. Dick English

Ramon-Renita, Of Film Fame, At Shoreham

More Than 25 Girls Heard in Ambassador Room Audition.

By Chanticleer.

Ramon and Renita are highlighting the week in the after-dark spots—and if you don't think they're tops out there at the Shoreham, just have a look at the following—which gives a rough idea of what Shoreham itself thinks of this famous dance team:

"Direct from the swank Rainbow Room of Rockefeller Center Roof are Ramon and Renita, world-famous dancers of the stage and screen. 'Gold Diggers of 1935' and 'All the King's Horses' are recent pictures in which they have played important roles.

"Unquestionably the most famous, highest paid team to appear in a Washington ballroom or supper club, Ramon and Renita fulfill all that is expected of them in smooth, sophisticated dancing, and travel-wise Capitalians for once are getting the best entertainment from New York's exclusive offerings.

"A new tempo of single timing for the old-fashioned waltz makes one of their glamorous new dances. It is slower and more beautiful than the old waltz and is termed the 'Love Waltz.'

"Ramon and Renita appear twice nightly throughout this week at the Shoreham. Additional entertainment and Maxim Lowe's orchestra complete the evening's diversion."

The search is half over at the Ambassador Room. More than 25 girls were heard in everything from "Dinah" to "My Wild Irish Rose" as the first group of contestants in the search for a girl singer for Harry Albert's band appeared before the judges. Of this number, six were chosen and will have the opportunity to sing for patrons during the dinner hour this week. Later a second group will go through the same type of elimination—and finally, four finalists will be chosen for the grand elimination.

Buddy Harmon is specializing in "Mayflower Medleys" these days. A "Mayflower Medley" is comprised of old favorites as requested by the guests. All you have to do is ask for it—and Buddy plays it. Curiously enough, most of those old reliables are waltzes, too. In an effort to do away with stock arrangements as used by all other bands—Buddy is making special arrangers of all the boys. Johnny Schultz is the latest discovery at arranging bright things.

Jay Howard is being featured at the Childs Gingham Club this week. Jay doesn't sing, tap or play the saxophone. He's a talented individual who'll entertain you no end. He's a maker of masks—and has employed his skill in reproducing the likenesses of Joan Crawford, Greta Garbo, Marie Dressler, Lionel Barrymore and many famous stars of the films. He has about the longest fingers you've ever seen. Donald and Drema hold forth also on the floor in rhumbas and ballroom specialties.

About that theme Moe Baer and his boys use on the radio. It's called "Moody," and is a composition of Sammy Marks, the Habana's talented pianist. It's one of those little tunes that gets into your hide. Trust Guy Scott, the Habana's host, to do something new and different. This time it's a "cross-town" marble-shooting game in the Caribbean room.

Niles Garron and Edythe Bennett, dancing this week at Maryland Club Gardens, come direct from Phil Barr's 500 Club in Atlantic City. It wasn't so long ago that Chicago critics paid tribute to their artistry by reporting them as coming nearer to matching Veloz and Yolando than any other team in the city. Their featured number is done to Rachmaninoff's Prelude. The Ross Sisters are staying for a second week—and Marge and Bea, too, with new songs. Sid Allen and his orchestra for the dancing.

Lovely ladies and exposed anatomy give way at La Paree next Friday to a circus. Yes, sir, tumblers, acrobats, clowns and even a bear or tiger or some such. A lot of the folks at the Club Volga Boatman say they like Matt Windsor at the console of the organ even better when he's making his accordion talk—which is saying something of a man's size compliment to the Russian impresario. The Russian Troika brought out the fastest new show this week yet to appear in the new season. It's a revue expected to pack 'em in at Helen Hamilton's Connecticut avenue bailiwick. Featured is Basso Vladimir Diloff—with Karavieff, of course, aiding, with ladies of the company.

The "Gobs of Joy" revue continues to hold forth at the Lotus, and that means only one thing: it's a good show. It is featured by Scotty Weston, the dancing gob . . . and the Yeomanettes (gals who dance and sing, to you) . . . Chic Stanley and Lou Kaplan in a knockabout act . . . Maurice and Leona, who danced at a command performance for Queen Marie of Rumania . . . and many other acts from a company of 25. The Strickland Capitolians for dancing.

On the Air Today

YOU can be in Moscow, Addis Ababa or London today—or all of these widely separated points—by flipping the little knobs on the receiving set—first at 9 a. m. for the twenty-fifth anniversary of the death of Count Tolstoy, Russian author, when Katchalov, one of Russia's foremost actors reads an excerpt from "Ressurrection." His reading will be translated. Alexander Goldenweizer, favorite pianist of the great author, will play several of Tolstoy's favorite songs, WRC, at 9.

Then at 5 p. m., WJSV brings the voice of Crown Prince Asfao Woosen, of Ethiopia, direct from that country's capital. Woosen is the eldest son of the Emperor, and is official spokesman in the Ethiopian official ranks in his father's absence at the front.

To round out the short-wave day, WMAL presents 10 minutes of London's West End cabaret life at 6:05 p. m. It's a variety show, typical of London night life. Hildegarde, noted singer of the cafes in Europe, will be starred. The Yacht Club Boys, American entertainers now barnstorming Europe, also will be heard.

• • • •

Having initiated a new type of radio presentation in the interests of the Community Chest—that of going direct to the institutions to benefit from Chest contributions and making broadcasts from these "remote control" points, WJSV now offers its mid-afternoon audience a roundup of four of these six points for 45 minutes, beginning at 3. Those who are helped by Chest contributions form the performers in these airings. For example, from St. Joseph's Home and School, orphans; Children's Country Home, convalescents.

• • • •

They're giving Abe Lyman a dinner tonight in celebration of his fourth anniversary as maestro of "Waltz Time," heard from WRC, Fridays at 9. Lyman began his career as a taxi driver, but he had his eye on a job as drummer in a band—and his ambition and energy carried on to band leader, song writer and cafe owner. Jack Dempsey is behind the fete tonight, aided and abetted by Fred Waring. Both men are close friends of the California orchestra leader.

Featured today:

Crime: Warden Lawes dramatizes "Down to the Sea," story of the forced sinking of a ship, in his "Sing Sing" broadcast, WMAL, at 9:30.

Red Cross: The story of its founding and development in "Cavalcade," WJSV, at 8.

House of Glass: The hotel is reopened in tonight's chapter, WMAL, 8:30.

Juliet Romeo: That's really her name. A new amateur find for Fred Allen, to be heard in "Town Hall Tonight," WRC, at 9.

Crumit: "Log Cabin's" master of ceremonies sings his famous ditty, "The Spaniard Who Blighted My Life," WRC, at 10.

Connie Boswell: Gives her version of "Red Sails in the Sunset," with Noble Orchestra, WJSV, at 9:30.

The Morans Hold Tea For Chilean Counselor

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Two charming teas were held yesterday afternoon, both in honor of members of the newly married set. At the Rock Creek Park home of Mr. and Mrs. James O'Donnell Moran, whose attractive stone house stands high on a wooded hill overlooking the park, a large number of guests gathered to say "hail and farewell" to the retiring Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Cohen, who returned from their European wedding trip only ten days ago, and who will leave tomorrow for New York to sail Saturday for Chile, where Senor Cohen will assume his new duties as director of the diplomatic service in the foreign office at Santiago.

Mrs. Moran, who was formerly Senorita Cecelia Alfaro, came to Washington some years ago when her father was appointed Minister of Panama to succeed his brother, Senor Dr. Ricardo Alfaro, who at that time had been elected President of the Republic of Panama.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Moran wore a gown of deep mahogany-colored velvet fashioned with a long flowing skirt, fitted sleeves, and trimmed with two large flowers of deep wine color and purple at the neckline. The costume harmonized charmingly with the deep mulberry and wine colors used in the drawing room of her home. Senora de Cohen, who was formerly Senorita Chita Arguello, of Nicaragua, was in an afternoon gown of black satin, draped and made with long-fitted sleeves. She wore a tiny hat of black velvet with a nose veil.

Among the guests were the Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro, uncle and aunt of the hostess, and their debutante daughter, Senorita Amelita Alfaro. For a time Senora de Alfaro presided at the tea table, which was decorated with pink roses and snapdragons in a tall silver urn. Later, Senora de Arcaya, wife of the Minister of Venezuela; Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Ecuador; Senora de Chevalier, wife of the Secretary of the Panama Legation; Mrs. Frank Chevalier and Mrs. Joseph McCahill, wife of Dr. McCahill, alternated at the punch bowl and tea urn.

In the group which gathered in the dining room were the Minister of Guatemala, Senor Dr. Adrian Recinos; the Minister resident of Costa Rica and Senora de Gonzalez-Zeledon, Senora de Baron, wife of the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, accompanied by Senora de Gutieros, who is visiting at the Cuban Embassy; the director general of the Pan American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe; Dr. and Mrs. Victor Alfaro, Mr. and Mrs. Charles LeFevre, whose daughter, Miss Sally Mitchell LeFevre, will be presented to society on Thanksgiving Day; Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Senor Dr. Don Rafael Fuentes, First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy; Senor Villa, attache of the Argentine Embassy; Senor Don Luis Churion, Counselor of the Legation of Venezuela; Mr. Donald Downs, Miss Eleanor O'Donoghue, daughter of Justice and Mrs. Daniel W. O'Donoghue, and Miss Evelyn and Miss Helen Walker. Many other members of the younger set were present, enjoying the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Moran, but the next stop was in Georgetown, so on to the other side of town, where Miss Elizabeth Howry and Miss Mary Howry were entertaining at tea.

The Misses Howry are again in their house, which has been leased for the last two winters, and everybody was glad to see them installed there again. They spent the summer in California, where they were much entertained, and only returned to the Capital a few weeks ago. The house is charming with a high ceilinged drawing room which is almost entirely a huge bay window. It was learned today that the entire house had once been a library wing to the home now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, and which was formerly the old Waggaman home.

Yesterday afternoon the Misses Howry were entertaining in honor of Lieut. and Mrs. Scott Dickson, and the guests included members of the younger married set. Mrs. Dickson was formerly Miss Ann Sullens, of Jackson, Miss., and spent most of last winter in Washington as the guest of the Misses Howry.

Another guest of honor yesterday was Miss Alice Richardson, who will be presented to society this season, and for her a group of debutantes and their escorts were invited. Mme. Petroff, wife of the Minister of Bulgaria, wearing a black crepe frock and hat, with a bright red scarf around her neck, presided at the tea table, and a few of the friends of the Misses Howry gathered in the drawing room to chat while the young people made merry in the dining room.

Arriving late, there were still a group gathered around the table, among them Miss Laura Tuckerman, in dark red woolen, with a felt hat to match, and her sister, Miss Ruth Tuckerman, wearing black, chatting with Mr. Edward Kulikowski, second Secretary of the Polish Embassy; Mrs. Edgar Snow, also wearing black, with a coat trimmed with cross-fox; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Norment, Miss Eleanor LaMott, smart in an Oxford gray tailleur, and the Financial Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. T. K. Bewley.

McCloy—Broach Wedding Is Scheduled for Dec. 21

Miss Dorothy Elizabeth McCloy, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Thomas Shore McCloy, has selected December 21 as the date of her marriage to Lieut. John Cozine Broach, son of Mr. and Mrs. John May Broach, of Meridan, Miss. The ceremony will be performed in the chapel of the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md. A reception will follow in the red room of the Officers Club at Annapolis.

In compliment to Miss Anne Wyant, whose marriage to Mr. Philip Larner Gore will take place Saturday, and Miss Polly Cooke, whose marriage to Mr. George Lewis Jones will be an event of November 30, Mrs. Rudolph Max Kauffmann and Mrs. Samuel Kauffman entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Sulgrave Club. The 20 guests included members of the bridal parties for both weddings.

Mr. and Mrs. Armistead entertained late yesterday afternoon at their home in Alexandria at an informal cocktail party for both young couples, who have been extensively entertained during the past week. Mrs. Armistead will be one of Miss Wyant's attendants. Mrs. Stanton C. Peele entertained at luncheon Monday for Miss Wyant, who, with her fiance, was the guest in whose honor Miss Frances Carter entertained at a cocktail party Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Gore will entertain at a dinner party at the Washington Club tonight after the rehearsal for the marriage of Miss Wyant and Mr. Gore.

President Entertains Warm Springs Group

The guests included Dr. Donald Armstrong, Mrs. Nicholas F. Brady, Mr. John Burke, Col. Carl Byoir, Mr. Arthur Carpenter, Dr. Paul de Kruif, Col. Henry L. Doherty, Mr. Edsel B. Ford, Mr. Raymond B. Fosdick, Mr. Ross T. McIntire, Dr. George McCoy, Mr. Jeremiah Milbank, Mr. Keith Morgan, Dr. Max Peet and Mr. Felix M. Warburg.

The Perazics To Be Honored By Popovicis

Gen. and Mrs. Ashburn to Give Buffet Supper Saturday.

The Secretary of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Popovici will entertain at a cocktail party Friday afternoon in honor of the newly appointed secretary of the Yugoslavian Legation and Mme. Perazic.

Mr. and Mrs. Perazic are established in the house of Mrs. Rushmore Patterson on Massachusetts avenue. Mrs. Patterson is spending the winter at her apartment in New York.

Mr. and Mme. Perazic were married in New York last month, the former having been Yugoslavian Consul in Montreal since leaving Washington several years ago.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. T. Q. Ashburn will entertain at a buffet supper Saturday in honor of Capt. and Mrs. Henry Williams, who will come from the Philadelphia Navy Yard. Mrs. Williams will arrive today to be the guest of Gen. and Mrs. Ashburn, and Capt. Williams will arrive Saturday.

Gen. Ashburn has just received notice from the President of Mexico that he has been awarded the Military Merit Medal of the first class, which is the highest military decoration given by the Mexican government.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Be Honored

League of Coast Guard Women to Give Luncheon at the Mayflower.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be the honor guest at a luncheon which will be given this afternoon at the Mayflower Hotel by the League of the Coast Guard Women.

Other guests of honor will be the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Stephen B. Gibbons, and Rear Admiral H. G. Hamlet, commandant of the Coast Guard.

Speakers will include Mrs. Morgenthau, Mrs. F. C. Billiard, widow of Rear Admiral Billiard, the former commandant, and Mr. Frederick J. Haskins.

The luncheon will follow the annual meeting of the delegates at 10 o'clock in the board room of the Wilkins Building. Mrs. Hamlet will preside.

Artist Defends Her 'Thanksgiving' as Example of Modern Trend in American Art

Powder Made For All Types Of Complexion

Box Is Given Away With Every $1 Purchase of Cosmetics.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WOMEN have long since discarded the idea that "a powder is a powder for a' that." They have discovered—and some through bitter experience—that powder must blend with the skin to be flattering, that it must be fine grained and free from heavy ingredients if it is not to clog the pores. As a result they are constantly on the alert for powder they know will meet these specifications.

One outstanding beauty house has had a chemist at work for many years perfecting its powder formula. It believes its product has reached a state of perfection and it is eager for women to try it. It believes a trial is all that is needed to convince the "tryer-outers" that here at last is the answer to their earnest wishes.

The result—all this week you will be presented with a $1 size box of this powder free with any purchase of $1 or more in this beauty line.

You are sure to have the ideal shade, for the powder is blended right before your eyes to suit your complexion. Innumerable glass containers hold different colored powders ranging from pale purple to apple green. Then, of course, there are the basic neutral shades. Just as an artist mixes and blends paints for a specific and illusive shade, so are these mixed, stirred and blended for you.

You might be startled to find when the expert analyzes your skin tones that you've been using a pinkish powder when you should have used pale ivory. You are apt to be delighted when you see how wonderfully the new shade emphasizes your coloring and brings out beauty that you never dreamt you had.

Fragrant Bath Oil.

WOULD YOU LIKE to feel as though you were one of the airy sprites who clothe themselves in rainbows and dance on moonbeams? Who make their couch in a sweetheart rose and dine on dewdrops?

Is there some half-forgotten moment poignantly sweet that you'd like to call to mind and live again?

Is there a melody you'd like to turn into a fragrance?

You can, you know. You can pour a few drops, two, three or four, of a certain magic bath oil into your warm tub of water, and then wrinkle up your nose and inhale a scent that sends you off into the half world where you're a dream in the midst of dreams.

It's a bath oil called "Flowers of Rain," and it has about it a suggestion of all fragrances rolled into one.

Spacious Bags Are Displayed.

A LITTLE GEM of a bag! That's exactly what it is! You'll find it in a conveniently located F street shop.

It's made in white satin and in colorful brocades shot through with silver and gold threads. And inside there's everything but the kitchen stove. A glorious looking compact, a perfect lipstick, a handy little change purse, a mirror and a comb.

This is a bag you'll be bound to want. It has an air that suits it to glamour of the ballroom or to the romance of a late afternoon tete-a-tete.

Miss Doris Lee (left), whose much-criticized painting, "Thanksgiving," (above) recently won a $500 prize in Chicago. A collection of Miss Lee's pictures is now being exhibited at Studio House.

Says Painting Interprets Contemporary Life as She Sees It.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

THAT "Beauty is its own excuse for being" is a tattered truism long since in need of a two-way stretch—in the belief of Miss Doris Lee, personable young painter whose work is being exhibited at Studio House.

"I want my pictures to comment on contemporary American life, to say something original and vital. In what I've painted so far, I've tried to translate my comments into terms the average person, as well as the artist, can understand," she said yesterday, as she defended her painting, "Thanksgiving." This was the picture that recently won the Logan prize and medal in the Chicago Art Institute's Annual Exhibition of contemporary painting and sculpture, and subsequently called forth exceptional criticism—particularly from the donors.

Before that Miss Lee had been announced as one of the eight winners in the competition for the Post-office murals. And now, her first "one-man" show is in progress at Studio House.

Glad Donors Are Not Judges.

An attractive young woman, Miss Lee wore a dark tailored frock at her hotel yesterday. Her dark hair was pulled back of her ears and hung, Little Women fashion, in a fan to her shoulders. Dark brows arched high over merry brown eyes (that almost wrinkled shut when she smiled), a smooth olive complexion and a delicately curved mouth belie the 31 years Miss Lee admits. But when she begins talking about art, you realize she is more mature than her appearance indicates.

As she ate her breakfast, she was thankful that "persons who donate prizes are not the judges," and that her painting, of the 1,800 entries, won the $500 prize on the decision of "a jury that, in my opinion, knows a good deal more about art than Mrs. Logan."

The "jury" included Lloyd Garrison, widely-known art critic; Waldo Pierce, New York artist, and Henry Varnum Poore, the artist recently appointed to do the frescoes in the Department of Justice Building.

It was Mrs. Logan, society patron of painting, who with her husband donated the prize awarded to Miss Lee for "Thanksgiving." It was Mrs. Logan, too, who frankly admitted she was "incensed at the jury's decision;" that she felt Miss Lee's picture was "out of focus" and "atrocious," and that rather than leaving her uplifted (as a true work of art should) it gave her the "jitters."

The artist herself, however, thinks the work is neither out of focus nor atrocious; that it merely interprets her idea of a part of contemporary life; and that since her aim was to portray the hustle and bustle of a holiday-dinner preparation in a kitchen as American as doughtnuts, hominy and corn pone, she didn't do such a bad job.

Teacher Backs the Opinion Conventional Motifs Are Overdone.

"While I was never more surprised in my life than when I won the prize," she said, "I do think Thanksgiving is a fair representation of the new trend in American art. Mrs. Logan wanted the award to go to a conventional painting that was nothing more than a 'pretty scene.' That type of art has been done to death."

This opinion was borne out by Arnold Blanch, artist, who taught Miss Lee when she attended the California School of Fine Arts, and who sat across the table from her yesterday. Mr. Blanch also called attention to the fact that she was one of the few women artists ever to win a major prize in America.

Both pupil and teacher were obviously convinced that abstraction has reached the point of diminishing returns, and that modern art to be worthy of existing must have coherence, meaning and human interest.

Prefers Potency to Beauty.

"Most modern painters are coming down to earth, interpreting commonplace scenes and people, making clear, forceful comments on them," Miss Lee continued. "To paint beautiful pictures is not my aim at all; I want my work to be potent rather than pretty."

She further explained she tried to "give a fresh and vital interpretation to life as it is lived in this country. That's why I draw my inspiration directly from life. The much-discussed 'Thanksgiving' was based on what I actually saw in a New England kitchen some time ago. It, as has been suggested, some of the faces look like cartoons, so do some people."

Miss Lee's favorite picture is not "Thanksgiving," however. It is "The Fisherman," a canvas now hanging with her exhibition at Studio House and depicting men she has often seen fishing in the Catskills. No matter what her subject is, Miss Lee centers her interest on the 'human interest element.' A beautiful scene—for example, a stream drawing a silver thread through the mountains may be pretty, but in her opinion it is as unimaginative as an anagram.

As long as she can remember Miss Lee has wanted to be an artist. As a child while her playmates were deciding to be trained nurses, actresses and swimming champions, she was making marks on paper, calling them pictures, and planning her life around an easel. Attending college in her home town of Rockford, Ill., she eventually became student instructor in art. After graduation there was study abroad, then in Kansas City, abroad again, and later, in the California School of Fine Arts. For the last four years she has been a member of the art colony in Woodstock, N. Y., and has exhibited her work in a number of cities.

Who Orders and Who Pays Bill If Two or More Families Dine Together.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I would appreciate it if you would help me with this problem: If a party of one or more families of moderate means is eating at a restaurant or some wayside place, and only one man is in the group, what is the usual custom for ordering the meal and paying the bill? Also, what is correct in the case of a group of girls, or with a group of boys? READER.

* * * *

DEAR READER: Your phraseology is not quite clear. I take it you mean "more than one family" when you say "a party of one or more families." I should say that in such a party the one man might very naturally take it upon himself to order the meal, after consulting members of the group separately as to their preferences. And unless the party had come together at his specific invitation to be his guests, it seems to me each family group would very naturally insist upon paying its own bill. While the order is being given a spokesman for each family might quietly suggest, either to the waiter or to the man who is retailing the order to the waiter, that bills be rendered separately. This avoids confusion and embarrassment when the hour of reckoning arrives.

* * * *

In the case of a group of girls, each girl voices her order directly to the waiter or writes it on the order blank supplied for that purpose. Again, unless the party has been assembled by invitation of one girl who is playing hostess on this occasion, each girl is supposed to pay her own check. The same rule applies to a group of young men. M. H.

Game For "M. N. B."

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I saw in your column of November 7 a request for an interesting two-handed game. I think the best two-handed game is Russian Bank. My husband and I play it a great deal. Sincerely, MRS. J. N. B.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. J. N. B.: It is kind of you to offer this suggestion, and I hope it may be read by "M. N. B." who asked for "some interesting games requiring some mental ability, which two persons may play." M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Home Tutoring In Elementary Studies Is Easy

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

IT REQUIRES no special training and ability on the part of parents to help children over many of the hazards of elementary education.

Sam is having a bad time with his arithmetic and the school suggests special coaching. There is no money in the family for tutors, and neither parent feels competent to take on the job. "I was always poor in arithmetic," is the mother's comment, and the father insists, "the methods are all different now, and I'm rusty."

Perhaps, did these parents but realize it, their very shortcomings would make their help the more valuable. If the mother would think back she might be able, from her wider experience, to visualize her early difficulties and see where the trouble lies with her child. Perhaps his foundations are weak. Surely she can add, subtract, multiply and divide, and by giving him work in these elementary subjects, learn whether he is quick and accurate. She may even find pleasure in taking up again a subject which once seemed abstruse and now, after practical application has lost much of its terror.

As to new methods—the relation of numbers as the world uses them remains about the same. Methods which seem old to one person are new to another and may, by their very difference, throw sudden light on a dark corner. Many schools are too stereotyped and narrow in their use of methods, and do not allow for the fact that different ways suit different people.

The one pre-requisite of a parent teaching his children is that he keep his temper. He must not look on the child as his and show unwarranted annoyance at his dullness. If he can take an impersonal attitude such as an outsider would have, he may be quite as successful as a paid teacher.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THE LATE FALL sun streaked lazily through sheer curtains . . . outside the world was knee deep in autumn leaves and the tall bare old trees strode gallantly by the wide yards and down the narrow street that He and She had chosen as Home Street . . . How many years ago? It was such a nice big window—such a nice world going by.

That, thought She, ought to be the theme of the room—so when he came home that evening they rearranged the room around this idea and found it infinitely appealing. The sofa (1) they placed to face the wide windows . . . then they drew the easy chairs (3, 6 and 7) near with tables (2, 4 and 8) in reach and the radio (5) within this circle. The desk (12) went on the wall opposite the windows with a floor lamp beside it and a bookcase (9) on the same wall as the windows. The bridge table (11), the chairs and an indirect floor lamp, they placed in one secluded corner—a permanent ensemble since they loved to have friends in often for an evening of bridge. That was one of the best changes of all because it always before seemed to make such confusion and clutter to have to drag out folding table and chairs. Besides bringing in extra pieces on bridge evenings and superimposing them on the room always spoils the design of the room. So it was perfectly grand to have them already included in the ensemble. A chest (10) went on a nearby wall to hold bridge accessories as well as a collection of family photographs and keepsakes. And all in all the room turned out to be all that She had dreamed about and more . . . the sort of a room they'd rather be than anywhere else on winter evenings.

POT ROAST MENU for TODAY

Cut Should Be Large Enough to Provide Meat for Two Meals.

By Dorothea Duncan.

USE OF an inexpensive roast toward the middle of the week is an especially attractive thought for the busy housewife. A pot roast, for example, can be put in a kettle and after searing surrounded by an assortment of the cheaper root vegetables and cooked slowly until the meat is deliciously tender and the vegetables a luscious brown, steeped in the essence of the meat.

There is little work to the preparation of a pot roast. One pan will accommodate meat as well as vegetables, making the dish washing problem lighter than usual.

The roast should be large enough to provide meat for two meals. The leftover portion can be used the following day for an interesting stew, a shepherd's pie with mashed potato topping, a beef pie or a good hash made with finely cut potatoes and the leftover gravy.

Average of Ability In U. S. Declining

Intellience, Relief Linked In Eductor's Research.

The average of ability in America is declining with each generation, according to a study made by Dr. Donald Laird, professor of psychology at Colgate University. The study also shows there is a direct connection between the average intelligence of the population of the various States and the number of persons these States have on relief rolls.

In reporting his findings in the November Review of Reviews, Dr. Laird said that in 1934 the States listed as below average in general mental ability had 15.6 per cent of their population on relief lists while the other States had only 11.2 per cent.

Sulphur Salve Cures Scabies In Most Cases

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THE itch mite is with us the year round. She requires a warm, comfortable environment in which to thrive, hence the rather frequent appearance of mites that go into winter quarters, burrowing in the skin of human beings. Not only is the inflammation caused by mite infestation (scabies) annoying and unsightly, but it may lead to serious infection.

Not long ago mention was made in this column of the time-honored prescription—said to have originated with the Roman, Galen—of sulphur ointment. Sulphur will cure the itch, said Galen, and since his time physicians in all lands have rubbed itching humanity with sulphur.

For ease of administration powdered sulphur was added to a fat and the whole material made into an ointment. The treatment consists first of thoroughly scrubbing the skin with soap and water to open up the burrows made by the parasites, followed by the application of sulphur.

Now comes the suggestion of F. F. Kingston that a mixture of sulphur and turpentine (which dissolves sulphur) will prove much more effective than the use of sulphur ointment. To a definite quantity of melted sulphur, oil of turpentine is added until all the sulphur has been dissolved. It was found that approximately 6 ounces of turpentine were required to dissolve 30 grains of sulphur. Liquid paraffin was then added, the result being a perfectly clear, amber-colored fluid. Treatment then proceeded with the usual routine of first scrubbing the body in the vicinity of the burrows, followed by the application of the sulphur-turpentine-paraffin solution. Not only were the results prompt in the relief of symptoms, but fewer instances of relapse occurred. Some patients appeared free from the parasites after one treatment; others required three or more. Experiment showed that the parasites themselves would live in the sulphur-turpentine mixture for only six or eight hours.

Fading Sun Tan Spoils Formal Gown's Effect

By the United Press.

Paris. Nothing is more incongruous with dark winter clothes than fading sunburn, and marks left by bathing suit straps are decidedly unattractive with autumn evening gowns. The woman who spent long hours on the beach to attain a becoming summer tan now sets about bleaching her skin so that her black, dark green and the various brown and plum purple shades will be becoming.

Skin specialists say that sunburn, no matter how becoming, is really detrimental to the skin. There are numerous beauty products on the market which not only bleach the skin but relieve the dry condition, caused by too much sun baking. A bleaching milk lotion is used during the day as a powder base and at night a cream is used to remove the brown pigmentation and soften the dry skin.

Various fruits form a base for these products, chiefly lemon and strawberries, while another good lotion is made from the pulp of fresh cucumbers. This lotion is used instead of soap and water for the hands, arms and back.

The drastic bleaching with lemon juice which was popular several years ago has been discarded by beauty specialists who say that it dries the skin and frequently causes peeling. Instead they urge a diet of lemon juice internally every night and combined with orange juice in the morning. This, with a diet of plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables, insures a clear skin while the creams and lotions take care of the actual bleaching.

Traffic Head Orders Curb On U-Turns

Commissioners Extend One-Way Period on Six Streets.

Changes in Regulations Will Be Effective in 10 Days.

U-turns at light or police controled street intersections are forbidden and the morning rush-hour one-way period for traffic on six major streets extended to begin at 7 a. m. instead of the present 8 a. m. under amendments to the traffic regulations approved by the District Commissioners yesterday on recommendation of William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic.

The six streets on which the morning one-way period was made to begin at 7 a. m. and continue until the present expiration hour at 9:30 a. m. were: Sixth, from Florida avenue to Indiana; Thirteenth, from Kansas avenue to Logan circle; Twenty-second, from Massachusetts to Virginia avenue; Florida, from R to Massachusetts; Twentieth, from Massachusetts to N, and N, from Twentieth to Eighteenth.

The afternoon one-way period was left as at present from 4 p. m. until 6 p. m.

These changes and others making several streets one-way and modifying parking regulations governing others are to become effective in 10 days.

Other changes approved by the Commissioners were as follows:

P street northwest, Twentieth to Dupont Circle, no parking south side.

Fourth street northwest, from McMillan Park to College street, no parking at any time.

L street northwest, Eleventh to Twenty-fourth, no parking no north side between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m., and between Fourteenth and Fifteenth, no parking on south side between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m.

Cathedral avenue northwest, Woodley place to Connecticut avenue, no parking on south side at any time.

R street northwest, Twenty-eighth to Wisconsin, no parking on north side at any time.

Twentieth northwest, from Massachusetts to Virginia avenue, no parking on west side at any time; from Massachusetts to Connecticut, no parking west side from 8 a. m. to 9:30 a. m.; from Connecticut avenue to Virginia, no parking on east side, 4 p. m. to 6 p. m.

Reno road northwest, Rodman to Porter, no parking west side at any time.

I street northwest, Thirteenth to Twentieth, no parking south side at any time. Kalorama road northwest, Connecticut to Columbia road, no parking north saide at any time.

Indiana avenue northwest, from Fourth to Fifth, 30-minute parking, 8 a. m. until 6 p. m., on south side, and 1-hour parking, from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m., on both sides from Fifth to Sixth. Monroe, Fourteenth to New Hampshire, no parking south side at any time. C street, Sixth to liftle Seventh, no parking south side at any time.

Sixth northwest, C to Pennsylvania, no parking west side at any time. Seventeenth northwest, D to Constitution, 1-hour parking, 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. Nineteenth northwest, Sunderland place to Dupont circle, no parking east side at any time. First street northeast, Massachusetts avenue to City Postoffice driveway, 30-minute limit on parking on west side. Summit place northeast, T to Rhode Island, no parking east side at any time.

Riggs northwest, Eighteenth to Nineteenth, eastbound traffic only. Ninth northwest, Rock Creek Church road to Quincy, for northbound traffic only. Otis northwest, Georgia to New Hampshire, eastbound only. Belt road northwest, Firty-first to Western avenue, northbound only. P northwest, Wisconsin to Thirty-sixth, westbound only. Morton place northeast, Sixth to Seventh, eastbound only. Orleans place northeast, Sixth to Seventh, westbound only. Morris place northeast, Sixth to Seventh, westbound only.

Drivers Won't Get Alcohol Blood Tests

The District Commissioners yesterday rejected the plea of the United Dry Forces of the District that all auto drivers involved in accidents be immediately subjected to tests to determine the amount of alcohol in their blood.

In replying to a letter signed by Mrs. Nash M. Pollock, secretary of the dry organization, the Commissioners said they have no authority to require such tests. The tests were urged last March. The suggestion was renewed again recently.

The Commissioners had been told by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, that there is "some merit" in the tests, but even with legislation there would be a question of authority to compel persons to submit. Inspector B. A. Lamb said the regulation would protect those "not intoxicated."

Doctor Reports Discovery May Curb Leukemia

Experiments on Mice Here Give Hope of Help for Humans.

A young, bespectacled research scientist laid before a group of physicians in the Carnegie Institution of Washington last night the processes by which science ultimately may make man immune from the rare but invariably fatal disease of leukemia.

Dr. E. C. MacDowell, a geneticist of the Carnegie staff, declared in a special lecture in the institution's headquarters, Sixteenth and P streets northwest, that he has produced immunization to the disease in mice. Leukemia in mice and in humans, he said, has virtually identical manifestations.

The methods of immunization were developed by Dr. MacDowell and Carnegie associates in seven years of research and experimentation with mice at the institution's laboratories at Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island.

Leukemia is a disease in which the white corpuscles of the blood "run wild," producing themselves in numbers far in excess of the individual's needs and causing excessive enlargement of the spleen, liver and lymphatic glands. It is normally classed as a malignant tumor. Reported instances of its cure, Dr. MacDowell said, have later been shown to be erroneous, usually because of improper diagnosis.

Briefly, Dr. MacDowell's method of immunization was, first, to inoculate with disease cells in such small numbers that the mouse survived, and, second, to increase the inoculation dose until the animal was able to withstand leukemic cells in enormous quantities.

Unfortunately, leukemia may occur spontaneously, Dr. MacDowell said, and the method of inoculation he described is only a guarantee against occurrence of the disease in the precise form administered.

"In certain animals," Dr. MacDowell said in describing further the mice experiments, "the transplanted cells will continue their wild growth. Since normal cells could not do this, it is clear that leukemic cells are different from normal cells, and that a change in the cells, rather than a change in the regulatory mechanism, leads to the disease."

Aware of the drama of his discoveries, Dr. MacDowell put the exposition of them in dramatic form. The stage, he said, is the mouse, the actors, leukemic cells and the motivation the wild growth of those cells. But the denouement, or the play's finish, science has yet to write, he said.

Park Savings Affairs Sifted In 2 Actions

Benedict McNeil Goes on Trial, Accused of Embezzlement.

Wheat Rules Directors Are Not Responsible for Deposits.

The affairs of the defunct Park Savings Bank were aired in separate cases in District Supreme Court yesterday, a Government prosecutor outlining details of an alleged conspiracy in one and a court ruling relieving directors of financial responsibility for deposits in the other.

The names of Robert S. Stuntz, former executive officer and vice president of the bank; Alexander McNeill, a real estate man, and Benedict M. McNeil, his son, a former assistant cashier in the bank, figure in the conspiracy trial.

Stuntz committed suicide shortly after bank examiners refused to permit the Park Savings Bank to reopen after the March, 1933, bank holiday. The elder McNeil died soon after he was indicted. Benedict McNeil alone is standing trial on charges that the three of them conspired to embezzle $50,000 from the bank.

"Dummy" Accounts Charged.

"Dummy" accounts were set up to cover their transactions, John J. Wilson, assistant United States Attorney, declared in his opening statement to the jury. He charged Stuntz and the two McNeils withdrew sums of money from the bank over an eight-year period, the withdrawals ending when the younger McNeil resigned from the bank to enter his father's real estate business.

The prosecutor charged cards for the "dummy" accounts were found in the bank's vaults by Department of Justice investigators after the bank closed. They bore the name of McNeil, he charged.

In a suit brought by a large group of the bank's depositors, Chief Justice A. A. Wheat ruled against financial responsibility on the part of the directors for deposits in the bank before expiration of its charter in 1929.

Eighteen months ago, Justice Jesse C. Adkins ruled that directors were not responsible for deposits coming to the bank after expiration of its charter. Thus, in the two rulings, directors are cleared of deposit liability.

Attorneys for depositors claimed that with expiration of the charter, directors of the bank should have liquidated the institution and paid off deposit accruals. Chief Justice Wheat held that though without a charter, the bank was a "de facto" bank and that all those dealing with it did so on this theory and were thus compelled to abide by the rule that they should have known the charter expired.

The opinion disposed of the legal theory that the directors were merely liquidating trustees when the charter expired and should have closed up its accounts which, it was shown, the bank was then capable of doing.

Appeal Is Expected.

Yesterday's ruling is expected to be appealed to the United States Supreme Court, which already has upheld the District court's decision on the liability of directors for deposites going to the bank after expiration of the charter.

In selecting a jury for the conspiracy trial, James F. Reilly, counsel for the defense, asked all prospective jurors if they had lost money in local bank closings. Six replied they had, but four of these were allowed to remain on the panel.

George E. Walker, chairman of the board, was the only witness called yesterday. He described the bank's setup and the identification of its officers. The trial, before Justice F. Dickinson Letts, is expected to last a week because of the large amount of documentary evidence the Government proposes to offer.

Dr. Roland W. Brown, of the U. S. Geological Survey, with fossilized cones from giant cedar, fir and spruce trees that sheltered dinosaurs just outside the District in Maryland 120,000,000 years before the birth of the New Deal.

When dinosaurs and other giant mammals roamed the earth, the forests of this section and the northern area of what is now the United States were proportionally large—something like the giant trees that are now an attraction for tourists in California.

But that was some 120,000,000 years before the New Deal, and all that remains of them now are fossilized cones which have just been placed on display in the fossil plant collection of the Smithsonian Institution. They are labeled cones of the ancient forest of the Cretaceous era.

Some of the exhibits came from an ancient driftwood deposit, now turned lignite, in nearby Maryland, according to Dr. R. W. Brown, of the United States Geological Survey, who obtained them.

The Maryland driftwood deposit contains cones which Dr. Brown has identified as belonging to the cedar, fir and spruce families. No fossil sequoia—whose giant relatives now survive in California—were found, although Dr. Brown said it was likely that some of the lignitized driftwood was formed from logs of this family.

Sequoia cones, however, have been identified from the same geological formation, a few miles farther on in Maryland.

The sequoias, through a series of titanic events, were finally pushed back to the narrow corner of the world where they still persist—individual specimens constituting the oldest living things on earth.

First, toward the end of the Cretaceous, came the elevation of the Rocky Mountains. This shut off moisture from the Pacific and caused drought conditions over the middle of the continent, and the trees began to die of thirst.

Then, 20,000,000 or more years later, just before the current period, there were great advances of ice sheets. The sequoias in the East and those in the territory now covered by southern British Columbia, Washington and Oregon could not endure the Arctic conditions.

Six Survivors of Civil War Welcomed to Home of D.U.V.

The "Spirit of '65" flickered brightly last night in a reconditioned Victorian mansion at 1222 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Amidst pledges to the memory of those who gave their lives for the Union's cause, 200 members and guests of the Ellen Spencer Mussey Tent, No. 1, Daughters of Union Veterans, dedicated their new headquarters.

The ceremony centered around six survivors of the war who sat in old-fashioned curve-back chairs—the same chairs which served for 50 years in the Grand Army of the Republic Hall, which stood at Pennsylvania avenue and Fourteenth street.

The names of the six were inscribed on the back of the chairs they occupied. Sixty-four similar chairs hold the names of those who were once 64 comrades, now gone.

The six veterans who had strength to come were John M. Kline, commander of the Department of the Potomac, G. A. R.; William F. Dorsey, past commander; C. G. Godfrey, adjutant; John T. Ryan, Frederick W. Mixer and Albert M. Lathrop.

Mrs. Alice Mead, D. U. V. president told them the room with its 70 chairs was to be their home.

Mme. Julia Cantacuzene, granddaughter of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, and the honor guest, said:

"My grandfather would like to be here to see you all with the same spirit at the time of another crisis in our Nation's history."

Job Insuring May Require Earner Index

Federal Officials Study Plans Which May Be Tried Here.

Protest by Allen Due at Meeting Monday of Commission.

The most complete card index of wage earners proposed in the United States is under consideration by Federal officials charged with administering the old-age and other social security laws and the same plan may be adopted by District officials charged with administering the local unemployment compensation law.

This was disclosed yesterday in the course of consideration of tentative plans for carrying the District unemployment compensation law into operation at the beginning of the next calendar year.

Records Planned.

Although administrative procedure has not been definitely worked out in either case, officials point out that under the Federal old-age pension law, as well as under the District unemployment compensation act, amount of benefits depends upon the amount of wages or salary, length of employment, or both.

Confronted with the task of determining the amount to be paid individuals under the old-age pension law, Federal officials are at a loss to know how to do so unless they have a complete salary or wage record of every person employed in the entire country under pensionable age.

Each person would be given a number, which would represent his or her personnel card record in the proposed enormous Federal files, if the plan is carried out. The record of every individual, his number, age, address, employer, salary and perhaps other informatoin adequately to identify him, would be kept constantly up to date.

1,440,000 Cards.

Some have suggested that every person who might become eligible for old-age penisons should be fingerprinted and that records also be made a part of the Federal record system. Although Federal officials have denied they intended to adopt such a program, District officials at work on administrative details of the local unemployment compensation law admit they still have such a step under consideratoin and that it originated in Federal sources.

Under the tentative plan for the District unemployment law, every employe in the District would be given a number and his or her record would be kept on an individual card system. The cards would show his number, by whom employed, hours, wages or salary, character of work, address and such other information as might be necessary for positive identification.

It is estimated there are 60,000 employes in the District. Each employe would have 24 cards, one for each month of the two years immediately preceding.

Wisdom of such a plan is expected to be sharply challenged by Commissioner George E. Allen at the next meeting of the unemployment compensation commission Monday at 2 p. m.

Nancy Moore Discloses She Wed in August

Ex-Representative andMrs. Moore 'Surprised;' Max Harlin Is Husband.

Nineteen-year-od Nancy Helm Moore, daughter of former Representative and Mrs. John W. Moore, of Kentucky, admitted yesterday that she had been married for three months.

The confession was made as her youthful husband, Max B. Harlin, jr., son of a Kentucky judge, was preparing to come to Washington to claim her.

The bride's parents—Moore is now chief of the audit section of the Federal Housing Administration and the family lives at the Highlands Apartments—were among those surprised.

"We had no objections at all," Mrs. Moore smiled over it all.

Only, she mused, they might have waited. Nancy's only 19; the boy is 20.

They've been keeping company—well, it must be—more than two years now. They met when they were both going in high school in Bowling Green, Ky.

Last summer they were both going to Western Teachers College at Bowling Green, while the bride's family was in Washington. When school ended, they both came to the Capital. And August 24 they made a trip to Maryland's little town of altars, Ellicott City, and at the Presbyterian Church, they were married.

They kept the marriage secret, Nancy Moore Harlin explained, because they thought Harlin ought to finish law school first. He's going to the University of Louisville now. But then they decided to tell it all, and so he's coming here for the Thanksgiving holidays, and then they'll both go back to Bowling Green to make their home with the boy's parents, Judge and Mrs. Max B. Harlin, until he finishes the law course.

Lodge Spurs Fight Against Loan Houses

Asks Citizens' Group to Help Oust 'Robbers' Near District.

Virginia and Maryland Lending Agencies Are Targets.

Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, last night asked the aid of the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations in driving the "small-loan robber" out of nearby Virginia and Maryland.

Lodge told the council that the laws of these two States now permit small-loan companies to increase the principal of a loan many times before it is paid off.

He said the "organized backing" of all citizens' associations was needed to rid the nearby area of such companies.

The council reiterated its indorsement of Col. William L. Peak, now superintendent of Lorton Reformatory, for the post of general superintendent of District penal institutions. A special committee was named to advocate his appointment.

William A. Maio was re-elected chairman of the council. Other officers are Dr. E. E. Richardson, vice chairman; Orrin Davy, secretary, and C. A. Barker, treasurer.

Quinn Heard at Forum

Henry I. Quinn, member of the Board of Education, suggested that new school buildings include accommodations for community center activities last night when he talked before the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights.

Mr. Quinn said that the plan had received favorable comment from members of the Senate District committee to whom it had been suggested.

Officers elected by the association are H. C. Phillips, president; Lester T. Walker and Lyman F. Keebler, vice presidents; O. E. Foulk, secretary; Sparrel A. Wood, treasurer; Grove G. Johnson, chaplain, and Burd W. Payne and Alba M. Edwards, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

A motion opposing issuance of a liquor license to a store near the Hubbard School was adopted.

Ruhland Commended

Activities of Dr. George C. Ruhland since he became District health officer were commended by the Petworth Citizens Association last night as it indorsed the current X-ray campaign against tuberculosis.

Association action included election of William P. Kilgore, as corresponding secretary; a resolution opposing the granting of a liquor license to a store in the 4100 block of Georgia avenue northwest, and a discussion of possible forms of new taxation, without any recommendation.

Eleven new members were elected. They are M. J. Huntman, David Baum, Benjamin Blankens, Seymore Levy, Dr. C. R. Wallace, Dr. Paul Earnet, Thomas A. McDonald, A. L. Baker, Morton Steiner, Mrs. Ann Levenson and J. E. Deadmon.

Many Films Typical of Their Day Are Donated to Museum of Film Art's Library

Lasting Record Of Progress of Cinema Is Aim

Under Notable Patronage; Thoughts on Premiere; Amusement Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Pursuant to a purpose set down in this space last May, when a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation made such a thing possible, John Hay Whitney, chairman of the motion picture committee of the Museum of Modern Art, 11 West Fifty-third street, New York, has announced the acquisition of several groups of important motion picture films by the Museum of Modern Art Film Library.

Donors of these invaluable contributions to the permanent archives of the library include Mary Pickford, Samuel Goldwyn, Universal Pictures and Carl Laemmle, the company's founder, and Paramount Pictures Corporation.

From Miss Pickford has been received a selection of her early pictures, inclusive of "Her First Biscuits," "The Violin Maker of Cremona," "The New York Hat," "The Lonely Villa," "Kentucky Feud," "The Mender of the Nets," "Pueblo Legend," "Friends," "Willful Peggy" and "Lena of the Geese."

Many of these titles will be totally strange to the ears of the present generation of filmgoers. All will be remembered by oldtime screen-gazers as significant of the period in which they were produced.

Mr. Goldwyn Donates.

Mr. Goldwyn's gifts to the library, which has the circulatory benefits of similar institutions dealing with books, were "Stella Dallas," directed by Henry King in 1925, and "The Night of Love," co-starring Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky in 1927.

It was in "Stella Dallas," a faithful transcription of the novel to celluloid, that the late Belle Bennett achieved one of her outstanding successes in the title role, as mother of Lois Moran, just then coming into eminence as an ingenue of more than usual capability. Miss Moran later was seen at the National in "Of Thee I Sing" and "Let 'Em Eat Cake," both starring William Gaxton and Victor Moore, to occupy the same stage in "Anything Goes" the week of December 2. She is now the wife of Col. Clarence Young, former Undersecretary of Commerce in charge of Aeronautics. Jean Hersholt also had one of his best early assignments in "Stella Dallas."

From Universal the Museum's Film Library receives "The Dumb Girl of Portici," starring the dancer, Mme. Anna Pavlova, one of the ill-fated films of its year, 1915; "Blind Husbands" and "Foolish Wives," Eric von Stroheim productions of 1916 and 1921, respectively; Paul Leni's production of "The Cat and the Canary," in 1927, and "All Quiet on the Western Front," directed by Lewis Milestone, in 1930.

Was a "Hoodoo" Film.

After encountering an unprecedented stretch of rainy weather in attempting to film "The Dumb Girl of Portici" on the old Columbian Exposition of 1893 grounds in Jackson Park, Chicago—and losing a colossal sum of money in the process—Lois Weber, director, and her then husband, Phillips Smalley, now a screen character actor, moved their production unit, bag and baggage, and there was a good deal of both, to Universal City, on the outskirts of Los Angeles, where I was privileged to watch them complete the work.

It was one of those occasional "super" productions that look like a million dollars in script, and in the making, and like a plugged nickel in completed form on the screen. Harry Crandall played it here as a special booking at the old Garrick Theater, where Hecht's now stands, and Washington remained away in unheard of numbers!

The stage play of "The Cat and the Canary" was produced by Kilbourn Gordon, former Washingtonian and one-time theatrical reviewer under the dramatic editorship of this writer during an earlier incarnation on The Post.

"All Quiet on the Western Front," by an odd coincidence, is the current revival, through today only, at the Little Theater, on Ninth street, where Lew Ayres, "Slim" Summerville, the late Louis Wolheim, Ben Alexander and the rest may be seen in the poignant roles which they created in the picture awarded the medal for merit in its year of release.

"Epics" From Paramount.

The Paramount productions taking their places of honor in the Rockefeller records of the motion picture industry's development are "Queen Elizabeth," starring the late Sarah Bernhardt, in 1911; the epochal "Covered Wagon," with the late Ernest Torrence, Tully Marshall, Lois Wilson, Raymond Hatton, et al., in 1923; Rodolph Valentino in Tarkington's "Monsier Beaucaire," 1924; "Grass," 1925, and "Chang," 1927, both done by Merian C. Cooper and Ernest Schoedsack; "Underworld," 1927, and Emil Jannings in "The Last Command," 1928.

It was Merian C. Cooper who recently produced the mightily spectacular "Last Days of Pompeii." In "Underworld," the first of the gangster pictures, George Bancroft came to stardom and Josef von Sternberg, former cameraman, got his first chance at individual direction. Both did fairly well with their opportunities!

Von Sternberg also directed Jannings in "The Last Command," a picture that was criticized in certain quarters for revealing too much of the manner in which screen illusion is created.

At any rate, it is a representative and valuable list of acquisitions for any institution. Fortunately, under Rockefeller auspecies, it will be safeguarded with the punctilious and respectful care which it deserves.

Some of those old pictures would look funny today, but they were the leaders of the eras in which they were produced and mark what was then the high point in artistic and mechanical achievement.

The best of the current releases—not excepting the "Crusades" and "Midsummer Night's Dream"—will appear as ridiculously immature a few years hence.

That probably is one of the reasons they call them "movies."

These suggested reminiscences of an older day in the cinema give rise to the thought that even in so late a production as "Frisco Kid," starring Jimmy Cagney and coming to the Earle screen on Friday, are former stars whose names bring back memories of the past.

All are determined to stage a "comeback" in pictures and each has chosen service as an "extra" to bring about the desired end. The group includes such almost forgotten great as Vera Stedman—and what ever became of her big, good-looking son, Lincoln? Helene Chadwick, Alice Lake, Jane Tallent, Bill Dale and Dick Kerr.

The Misses Stedman, Chadwick, Lake and Tallent are belles of a history of the Barbary Coast gambling resort in the picture—which, by the way, is more or less a history of the Barbary Coast of San Francisco and the way it brought about the formation of the Vigilantes and the coming of law and order to a wild community—and Dale and Kerr, similarly, are "atmosphere" of a muddy, murky and murderous era.

Fun For Variety.

Under the direction of Arthur A. De Titta, local generalissimo of the Fox Movietone News organization, a special motion-picture subject will be made for exhibition at the second annual dinner-dance and entertainment of the Variety Club of Washington, Tent No. 11, to be celebrated in the Willard Hotel on Saturday night.

Last year Mr. De Titta and his crew made a film of the guests entering the hotel and a few hours later presented it as a part of the program in the great ballroom. The same idea is being carried out this year on a slightly more elaborate scale.

According to announcement last night by Joseph P. Morgan, chairman of the ticket committee, there are still a limited number of tickets available for Saturday night. They are priced at $7.50 each, a reasonable tariff for one of the most pretentious programs offered the National Capital throughout the course of the year.

Quick action will be necessary on this ticket business, since the seating list is practically on its way to the printers now. Mr. Morgan may be reached at the Arcade, Fourteenth street and Park road northwest. But once again the admonition is, "HURRY!"

And if you go, you might as well keep Sunday open, too!

Adrienne, the psychic who has been attracting so much favorable attention at her three personal appearances daily at Loew's Columbia Theater, will be held for a second week on F street. This decision was reached last night by Division Manager Carter Barron of Loew's, Inc., when he surveyed the extraordinary record compiled by this exceptional mentalist during her first week. Adrienne, considered one of the foremost telepathists of the day, has predicted many important events that subsequently have come to pass. At every appearance at the Columbia she answers all questions propounded by members of the audience that permit of public discussion without embarrassment.

A Toughie Without His High Hat

In "Frisco Kid," another of the cinema's excursions into the early history of the metropolis of the Golden Gate, James Cagney, the recent Bottom of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," has opportunity practically to span the social scale of a picturesque and growing city. In one interval of his "drawing-room" development he is resplendent in beaver hat, ruffled shirts, silken cravats, fancy vests and tailed coats, even sporting a gold-headed walking-stick. This portrait slightly antedates such a period of opulence. "Frisco Kid" comes to the Earle's screen for the week beginning Friday.

That Disputed Decision.

Washington football fans interested in the argument over the play in the Army-Notre Dame game—played last Saturday in the Yankee Stadium, New York, before a crowd of 80,000 people—in which the Cadets were penalized for pass interference on the 2-yard line and the Irish thereby given the chance to score in the final minute of play, will be enabled to see the entire play in slow motion on the screen at Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theater today and tomorrow.

The pictures, made by Paramount News, show full details of the much discussed play. Other highlights of the game also are presented.

In view of the heated controversy precipitated by the officials' ruling this is expected to be one of the most eagerly viewed short reels dealing with the leading contests of the fall gridiron season.

An enthusiastic and genial voice calls up to convey personal greetings from the far reaches of the Pacific Coast from Leneta Lane, Romaine Callender, Raymond Bramley and Roy Roberts, all, during the course of the years, prominent members of Fanjandrum Stephen E. Cochran's National Theater Players.

Miss Lane, one is happy to know, has been playing with eminent success on the Pacific Coast stage, having recently scored a pronounced personal triumph in the stellar role of one of Mae West's earlier dramatic works, "Common Flesh." Miss Lane's fortunes are so in the ascendant that it is being planned for her soon to "invade" the East as a dramatic actress! As if that was not where she came from in the first place! Her most recent work on the screen has been at Fox Movietone City.

The jovial gentlemen who send their "helloes" are swell persons—as everyone in Washington already is aware.

Afterthoughts on an Opening.

The suggestion that there are serious defects in the treatment of a bizarre comedy idea does not necessarily mean that there is not a wealth of intrinsic worth in the fundamental dramatic situation upon which "Swing Your Lady," at the National, purports to be founded. The principal trouble is that it is only partially founded on that fundamental dramatic situation.

That is to say, for the early part of its length, this latest Kenyon Nicholson-Charles Robinson collaboration operates on the assumption that there is to be a wrestling match between Sadie Horn, the Ozarkian lady blacksmith, and Joe Skopapoulos, "The Greek Hercules," in search of an honest or dishonest dollar in an out-of-the-way neck of the woods. There is what the boys in the locker room term a considerable "build-up" to this potential grappling match between an Amazonian behemoth and a love-struck heavyweight.

Then of a sudden the whole trend of the story is changed and there is substituted for our bizarre situation the comparatively commonplace spectacle of two large gentlemen at what may be referred to as loggerheads over a dame they both covet. Now, I ask you . . . .

Many Fine Portrayals.

A great deal of the dialogue and by-play is trivial and not especially funny. A great many of the lines rather overstep the boundaries of even a lax and lenient propriety. There is a great deal about the structure of the comedy that muffs its greatest humorous potentialities, but I still contend that there is not much the matter with the quality of the performances contributed by Marian Warring-Mansley, an actress who numbers many distinguished engagements among her earlier triumphs—including the lead, if memory serves, with Otis Skinner in "Mr. Antonio" and in "Genius and the Crowd"—John Alexander, whose study of the dumbbell "rassler" is a gem of arrested development, and the numerous others whose individual accomplishments were celebrated in yesterday morning's remarks concerning the play.

The role of Sadie Horn, of course, would have been a made-to-order part for the rugged talents of the late Marie Dressler. She was made for it and vice versa. Among contemporary actresses I can think of no one who could do the part with such visual and auricular perfection as Miss Manley—making allowances, of course, for the inevitable perplexities of the first few nights a play is put on.

And, while we are on the topic, I can think of no actor who could do Joe Skopapoulos so well as John Alexander. Under-development mentally is a difficult thing to simulate. Outside of Mr. Alexander the best member of the cast, in this regard, Monday night was the bloodhound!

There are ample possibilities in the basic idea of "Swing Your Lady." I hope its co-authors will take another whirl at them and come out on top with a toe-hold on every scene.

"Nuts-to-You" Note.

Those Mad Marxes, through the continued proxy of the loewcal Loew executives, since Sunday night have continued to bombard the drama desks with packages of most enticing nuts, of one kind and another—first English walnuts, then Brazil nuts and, last night, soft-shelled almonds.

This is all very gay, indigestible and symbolic of the usual designation of their antics—as revealed pre-eminently in "A Night At the Opera," opening Friday at Loew's Fox (Advt.)—but what do they think I am, a cannibal?

Players Club

"THE POOR NUT." The Players Club of Central Community Center presents the comedy in three acts and four scenes by S. C. and Elliott Nugent, directed by Lucy Ann Rogers, with settings by Robert Reynolds and Frank Stewart. At Roosevelt High School. Reviewed Tuesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE CAST.

Col. Small.....Robert Moray
Marjorie Blake.....Katherine Kammerer
Julia Winters.....Alice Louise Hunter
John Miller.....John Mann
"Spike" Hoyt.....Terry McPhearson

Essaying a role foreign to those in which he already has made a local name for himself, John Mann led the Players Club through the antics of S. C. and Elliott Nugent's comedy-drama of scholasticism and intramural athletics, "The Poor Nut," last evening at the Roosevelt High School.

Another "experiment noble in purpose," this particular production of a riotous comedy lacked vitality of movement and spontaneity of playing, with the audience laughing not so much at the performers and their actions as at the devastating Nugent lines.

Only Mr. Mann, of the major performers, and Charles Grunwell, among the supporting players, attained any degree of smoothness of performance, the other members of the cast of 19 merely reading a series of speeches by rote.

Lacks Clean-Cut Definition.

Even Mr. Mann was not always at ease in this role of a botanical grind who has fraternal and athletic aspirations. Sometimes distinctly amused at his own lines, at other times indecisive as to the fitting representation of the bewildered scholar, he was, nevertheless, the outstanding performer of the evening.

The others in the case included Katherine Kammerer, Robert Moray, Alice Luise Hunter, William Austin Davis, Terry McPhearson, William Hill, Roy Bateman, Richard Roberts (who at the last minute was forced to double, vice Harold Tracy Martin), Kirby Ayres, Kenneth Peterson, Mary Elizabeth Holt, Fillis Speich, Marjorie McCann, Gertrude Elmendorf, Arthur Branscombe, Frederic Cole and Lloyd Edwards.

The play was directed by Lucy Ann Rogers, with stage settings and properties by Robert Reynolds and Frank Stewart. Harold Snyder's efficient lighting added to the effect of the drape-settings.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

Song recital by Lucrezia Bori in Constitution Hall Tuesday night; Frederick Bristol, assistant artist and accompanist. Program: Aria from "Romeo e Giuletta" (Bellini), "Se Florindo e fedele" (Scarlatti), "Un certo non so che" (Vivaldi), "Convien partir" and "Ciascum lo dice" from "La Figlia del Reggimento" (Donizetti), "Eastern Romance" (Rimski-Korsakov), "Mandoline" and "Clair de lune" (Debussy), "Depuis le jour" from "Louise" (Charpentier), "La Pavane" (De Leva), "Caro, il mio bambin'" (Guarnieri), "Invito a la danza" (Respighi), "La nieta de Carmen" (Font), "La gitana de rumbo" (Puella), "Cantares" (Turina). Piano soli: Prelude from "Pour le piano" suite and "Ondine" (Debussy), Capriccio (Bortkievicz), "Espana cani" (arr. Copeland), "Jeunes filles au jardin" (Mompou), "The Voice of Lir" (Cowell), "Animated Conversation" (King).

What with a program of such ample length, the generosity of both singer and pianist in the matter of extra numbers, and a quarter of an hour's delay in starting the recital, the auditors were unusually late last night in taking departure from Constitution Hall. Not that they seemed to feel this a hardship, for their interest was sustained to the final song, and there was no decrescendo in the hearty applause that manifested their enjoyment. When admirable artistry is in question, time does not crawl.

Mme. Bori was in excellent voice and in the best of moods for the exercise of her finesse in phrasing and her charm in interpretation. The range of her selections from Vivaldi to Respighi, the variety of the styles and the picturesque histrionism in the two costumed groups of songs kept her audience continually alert. Those subtleties of accent and those nuances of intonation which are her own did not allow a single song to pass unemphasized by her ingratiating reading.

In the Italian arias of bygone days, when composers expected the voice to have the agility of a violin, the flexibility of her vocalizing was fully adequate to every demand, and when it came to Debussy, her mellisonant tones suited perfectly the gracile lines of that crepuscular music. In the guise of the Venetian donna of 1700 and the contemporary gitana of Spain, she was piquant with the artful aid of miming.

The allure of personality and the ease of a mastered technique are combined in Mme. Bori to a high degree. Not all operatic divas, taken from the setting of the theater, are as adaptable as she to the recital platform. She has the ability to evoke the atmosphere of song and to summon the illusions of time and space.

Frederick Bristol, an accompanist sensitive and sympathetic, ever closely attentive in molding his dynamics to the voice instead of supporting or overwhelming it, is an enjoyable pianist in his own right. He is the first in my experience to have the courage to play Henry Cowell's tone-clusters. I say courage, because Mr. Cowell's forearm technique, so necessary for the effects he wishes to produce, is as yet unfamiliar to the public.

Hollywood

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, Nov. 19.

JAN KIEPURA seems to be going Hollywood—and with him that's another way of saying that he's becoming pleasant. Al Hall, who is directing the flicker, "Give Us This Night," says that Kiepura is not temperamental when you understand him and he understands you; that Kiepura is a hard worker. And Director Hall went on to tell how Kiepura labored on a beach location, walking up and down on the sands for hours, singing a song until it was recorded and photographed perfectly.

"Yes," comments the script girl, "he's all right. One night, while we were having dinner on location, his secretary lit a cigarette at the table, smoked it, and Kiepura didn't say a word."

There seems to be a campaign on to prove that Kiepura—"He's a jolly good fellow"—and they'd like you to know that he's gone Hollywood.

• • • •

All I can tell you is from watching him on the set. He is confident, likes to believe he has something to do with giving the orders. Is eager to work and makes the effort to be pleasant.

For this particular sequence, Kiepura was in jail, singing. He acted to the playback of the song he had recorded already. After several takes, Director Hall was satisfied. Kiepura wanted to make another. "It's okay," said Director Hall. "But I still say sink for sing," Kiepura said.

"You'll be teaching us all English soon," answered Director Hall. "You're good enough."

PHILIP MERIVALE is in this flicker making his movie debut. Merivale was under contract to Fox for almost a year, collected a big salary every week and never appeared in a picture. He used to make a screen test practically every week, but they couldn't find a role for this fine stage actor in a picture.

He always asked to be released from the contract, and they refused. Then, one day after a screen test, he was given his release. He was puzzled by this and asked his agent, "Why is it that they gave me my release after this screen test and wouldn't with the others?"

"For the first time," answered the agent, "you looked like something on the screen." "Yes!" said Merivale, surprised. "What did I look like?"

"You filmed exactly like Boris Karloff," added the agent. Merivale has since told this yarn to Karloff and they are both fast friends.

• • • •

Harry Richman, on the set of "Rolling Along," is more interested in photography than in acting. He has a camera and is always taking pictures. Cameraman Joe Walker says that Richman has taken more pictures of him than he has of Richman.

Director Victor Schertzinger goes about his job in his same calm manner. He tries to be nice to everyone. Before a scene, he says to Richman or Rochelle Hudson, "All right, baby. We'll do it." There is a black horse in the flicker called Nellie and half of it is painted white. Nellie doubles for herself and plays a dual role. Before Nellie does a scene, Director Schertzinger says, "All right, baby. We'll do it." He treats every one the same.

• • • •

GEORGE RAFT is playing a sequence in an Italian restaurant in the flicker, "It Had to Happen." Roy Del Ruth stands near his camera, quietly directing. Raft is an immigrant, who has recently come to this country, and he's attired to look the role. An immigrant, according to flickers, is a person whose clothes look peculiar.

Raft is standing against the bar trying to impress Astrid Allwyn, and he pulls out a bank book to show her the progress he has made. Among the players in this flicker is Rosalind Russell, who is the leading lady. Miss Russell is sometimes called the second varsity team of Myrna Loy.

On the set of "Ceiling Zero" Director Howard Hawks is filming a dramatic sequence. Far in the rear of the set, away from the camera, Stuart Erwin is talking into a microphone. He is supposed to be in an airplane, broadcasting to the Newark Airport, and at the airport are James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, who have a big scene.

• • • •

Erwin speaks into the microphone: "Calling Newark—Calling Newark . . . Why don't you answer? . . ." Cagney and O'Brien are supposed to continue their dialogue and then Cagney is to hear Erwin's plea and answer it.

The sequence is played again and again. Cagney and O'Brien take turns fumbling lines. Erwin keeps repeating his call.

Director Hawks says: "Come on, play it again." Now it is Erwin who amazes every one on the set by shouting into the microphone: "Calling Rochester . . . Calling Rochester . . . Send more film . . ."

Move Made to Aid Needy Users of Coal

District Commissioners will seek an amendment to the weights law requiring that packaged coal and coke be sold only in packages of 15, 25 and 50 pounds.

They approved a recommendation to this effect yesterday by George M. Roberts, superintendent of weights and measures. Roberts said it would benefit consumers at the rate of $5 a ton.

"Some concerns," he said, "have undertaken from time to time to reduce the weight in order to undersell competitors. Another result is that in purchasing very small packages of coal at retail, poor people are often charged at the rate of about $27 or $28 per ton for coal."

Nats Reported Involved in 3-Cornered Deal Shifting 9 Players

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

IF IT IS any consolation to the athletic treasurers of Georgetown and Maryland University, this department is pleased to report that their game at Griffith Stadium next Saturday will be a whopping financial success. By the unfailing barometer of the sports department, the season's largest local crowd will sit in on the battle. The instrument we use is the line that forms on the right, each outstretched hand requesting, demanding, hinting or otherwise indicating the need for "a coupla ducats."

POVICH.

"A coupla ducats," translated into moochers' [illegible] means a pair of Annie Oakleys, tax free, perhaps, but, in any event, complimentary passes of which the newspapers get a [illegible] supply which seems to be common knowledge. The line that has been forming on the right since the Georgetown-Maryland game has been looming in the immediate future has set a new season's record for concentrated mooching. And by that token, the Georgetown-Maryland game is the greatest football attraction to come to the city this season.

These people know their football attractions, and thus it is a distinct compliment to the Georgetown-Maryland affair that seekers of Annie Oakleys have singled out the game for their most concerted attack of the season on the sports department. Among the lot there is, of course, the casual pass seeker who knows simply that there is going to be a football game, but the great bulk of the moochers are the football-wise folks who have been storing their talents for this one supreme assault against the barriers of the box office.

The Annie Oakley did not come by its name innocently. Annie Oakley, you may remember, was the great woman trapshot artist whose skill with a scatter gun was a household word in the dim past. In recent years her name has become synonymous with complimentary tickets, generously punched with holes by the donators to mark them at the check-up as passes. The punched tickets look, for all the world, as if Miss Oakley had drawn a bead on 'em with her 12-guage double-barreled musket and pulled both triggers.

FOR sports writers, suspected of having access to the supply of free ducats sent to the newspapers by the two universities, this is the Week of the Big Wind, the weather to the contrary notwithstanding. They have learned to beware of such salutations as "Hello, Joe, been readin' your stuff, never miss it," usually accompanied by a terrific wringing of the hand in an over-warm greeting, despite the fact that Joe's acquaintance with the guy started and ended with an introduction by a mutual friend eight months ago.

These pass-seekers have their own particular methods of approach that ranges from a demand to a gentle hint or a piteous plea. There's the guy who begins: "Y'know, I haven't seen a good football game this year, etc." And there's the fellow who opens with: "I haven't bothered you all season, but this is one game, etc, etc." And there's the chap who, feigning ignorance, asks blandly: "Who's playing here in town this week-end," knowing full well that Georgetown and Maryland have the field to themselves.

And then there are the folks who make you wonder; people who could easily afford to buy a pair of seats, even an entire box, at no discomfort to their pocketbook, but they are the folks who brook no refusal, threatening to take the matter to the higher-ups and intimating not gently that they are entitled to "a coupla ducats." They, of course, are the hardest to shake off, these people who deem it little short of an insult if "a coupla ducats" are not forthcoming.

They are the folks who, by some strange manner of reasoning, deem it a feather in their caps to procure a pair of passes to the outstanding events. To be seen entering through the pass gate is something of a triumph for them, I suppose. To be one of the common herd, buying a ticket, established him as a nobody, I guess. Anyway, they are the folks who are out in full force when the choice attractions roll around. But their presence is a compliment to any game. They don't trifle with the unimportant ones.

In Short—

Passes are plentiful for the pigeon races and the Sylvan Theater . . . Washington fans will be able to draw their own conclusions on the Army-Notre Dame game foul from the films of the game to be shown at the Metropolitan today and tomorrow . . . Coaches opposed to the lateral pass will use among their arguments at the rules meeting this winter the theory that the play contributes toward injuries . . . It is no secret among Maryland scouts that Georgetown depends on its laterals as its scoring play in scoring territory . . . no member of the Georgetown line which played in the Maryland game last year will be in action against Maryland on Saturday . . . because, for the last several years no Duke team which he has seen play has ever won a game, R. K. Courtney, of Durham, N. C., failed to attend the Duke-Carolina upset last Saturday . . . at the request of Duke students and alumni who deluged him with telegrams pleading with him to remain away from the game . . . Calvin Griffith, vice president of the Chattanooga club, a post to which he was appointed by his uncle, Clark Griffith, is at the minor league meeting in Dayton attending a school for baseball secretaries which deals with box-office routine . . . young Griffith, obviously, is being groomed to succeed his uncle as president of the Washington club.

Boston, Yanks Also Angling For Talent

Stone, Manush, Hadley May Leave Nats in Wholesale Swap.

Chapman, Murphy and Deshong Seen Due to Come Here.

By Shirley Povich.

MANAGER BUCKY HARRIS last night was dispatched by Owner Clark Cliffith to the baseball meeting ground at Dayton, Ohio, to lay the groundwork for assorted trades designed to bring new faces to the Nats next spring in exchange for a parcel of Washington veterans.

Word emanating from Dayton, where big league owners and managers are fringing the annual meeting of the minor leagues, is to the effect that officials of the Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees, already on the scene, are outlining a three-cornered trade that would involve Outfielders Heinie Manush and Johnny Stone and Pitcher Irving Hadley, of Washington.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees, interviewed at Dayton on the proposed deal, declared that "there is nothing doing yet," but the report of a Washington-New York Boston trade involving nine players is the prime topic among baseball men.

Deal's Phases Outlined.

The deal, as outlined by supentail the following conditions:

Washington to send Outfielder Heinie Manush and Pitcher Jack Russell to Boston; and Outfielder Johnny Stone and Pitcher Irving Hadley to New York.

New York to send Outfielder Ben Chapman and Pitchers Johnny Murphy and Jimmy Deshong to Washington.

Clark Griffith lacked his usual emphasis last night in denying that the trade had been proposed, but declared that Harris was in Dayton for the express purpose of sounding out rival clubs with a view to deals that might materialize in early December when the big leagues hold their annual meeting in Chicago.

Admits Deal "Logical."

Advised of the nature of the reported trade, Griffith admitted that it assumed logical proportions and reiterated his determination to procure at least one pitcher for the Nats. Murphy he regards as a valuable addition to any club and Chapman, he admitted, long has been an object of his proposed trades.

At Boston Manager Joe Cronin has been looking longingly at Heinie Manush, who he remembers as the big punch of the Washington teams which he piloted in 1933 and 1934. A deep personal friendship between Cronin and Manush is also seen as inspiring the deal.

Hagerty Sees One-Score Battle

Breaks to Decide G. U. Game With Maryland, Coach Believes.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A ONE-TOUCHDOWN game, with the breaks deciding which team gets them, was forecast yesterday by Coach Jack Hagerty, of Georgetown, as his men launched intensive preparations for their second annual grid battle with Maryland Saturday at Griffith Stadium.

Georgetown's intensive preparations, incidentally, consisted of light calisthenics and a brief game of touch football, but Hagerty scouted the idea that he regards Maryland with a regal disdain.

"It just happens that the boys are so badly battered from the Manhattan game we can't do anything else. I wanted to get going with the real work Monday, but if the squad isn't in good physical condition it would be suicidal to give it any tough assignment. I don't want to throw away what little chance we have of winning."

'34 Game Won on Break.

The Hoya chief is satisfied that one touchdown will be the winning margin, and he hopes his men do the scoring. He pointed out that a break—a bad pass thrown by Parcells and intercepted by "South" Sothoron—arranged the trappings for Maryland's victory last year, and indicated that he expects a similar mishap Saturday.

"It may be a fumbled punt, a bad pass from center, an intercepted forward or lateral, or almost anything, for that matter, that will de-

Briggs to Take Full Control Of Tigers

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Nov. 19.—Full ownership of the world's champion Detroit Tigers, it was announced today, will be acquired by Walter O. Briggs, Detroit industrialist and sportsman, who for 15 years was the silent partner of the late Frank J. Navin in control of the club.

The 58-year-old manufacturer, whose career carried him from benchworker in a factory to millions as head of the automobile body concern that bears his name, disclosed his plans in a statement issued through Charles F. Navin, club secretary and nephew of Frank Navin.

Briggs' decision to place himself at the helm of one of the most valuable properties in the American League was based on an option agreement with "Uncle Frank" Navin, whose frictionless conduct of the front office during his three decades as club president was the envy of other owners.

Held Half Interest.

"For some years Mr. Navin and I have been partners in the Detroit baseball club," said the statement, "each of us owning one-half interest in it. According to an agreement of long standing between us, it was agreed that in the event of the death of one, the remaining partner would have an option on the other's interest."

No announcement was made of the value of the Navin holdings, which were estimated at far over $1,000,000 before the whirlwind pennant campaigns of the last two seasons were climaxed by the winning of the World Series. Navin left the use of his estate to his widow, Mrs. Grace S. Navin, with provision for a distribution after her death.

Cochran to Stay.

Mickey Cochrane, fiery player-manager whose purchase for $100,000 two years ago Briggs strongly advocated, apparently is certain to remain in active charge of the team. Briggs said today in Miami Beach, Fla., where he is spending the winter, that he regarded Cochrane as "the greatest manager" in baseball. But he did not discuss his plans regarding the presidency of the club.

Cochrane and Charles Navin said they would go to Miami Beach to confer with Briggs.

"There will be no trades or purchases of ball players until after our conference," Conchrane said.

Southwest, West, South Offer Most All-American Candidates

By Alan Gould,

Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—With the tests of fitness for All-America football rating now approaching the semi-final stage, it seems well established that the chief sources of all-star supply are the Southwest, Big Ten and Southeastern conferences.

By and large, the teams in these three groups have been meeting more rugged opposition and the leaders have been turning in more impressive performances than the squads in any other conference.

Minnesota and Ohio State from the Big Ten; Southern Methodist, Texas Christian and Rice from the Southwest, Louisiana State and Alabama in the Southeastern sector represent what Yale, Harvard, Pennsylvania and Princeton meant to the game in the gay nineties. These seven power houses of the Middle West and South, combined, have lost only four games all season.

Berwanger Outstanding.

Since there must be some good individual reasons for this, let's scan the latest sectional reports.

Big Ten—Canvass of coaches and officials unanimous that Jay Berwanger, Chicago, outstanding back in every department of the game. Iowa's Ozzie Simmons best ball-carrier in conference. Two best fullbacks and blockers are Sheldon Beise, Minnesota, and Dick Crayne, Iowa. Merle Wendt, end, and Gomer Jones, captain and center, most consistent performers of Ohio State squad. Minnesota's tackles, Dick Smith and Earl Widseth, head and shoulders above any other pair, with Widseth having slight edge. Northwestern's Paul Tangora best running guard in conference.

Southwest—Bobby Wilson, 150-pound Southern Methodist star, best of unusual array of backfield talent. List also includes John McCauley, Rice quarterback; Sammy Baugh, Texas Christian quarterback; Bill Wallace, Rice, and a 1934 All-America back; Jim Lawrence, Texas Christian halfback. Darrell Lester, Texas Christian's 1934 All-America center, a standout on defense, especially against passes, but has rival in Nicholls, of Rice. Tackles of All-Star caliber include Truman Spain, Southern Methodist, best in the conference. Southern Methodist offers best pair of guards in "Iron Man" Wetsel and Maurice Orr. Howell, of Arkansas; Sylvester, of Rice, and Wray, of Baylor, leading ends.

King Levinsky Humbled by Wrestler

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 19.—In 35 whirlwind seconds, Ray Steele, Glendale, Calif., wrestler, pinned King Levinsky, Chicago fighter, in their mixed match featuring a combined boxing and wrestling show tonight.

Levinsky swung only one solid blow before he was clamped to the mat with a body block, but it was a right-handed haymaker to Steele's momentarily stun the wrestler.

It was the blow with which the King said he would knock Steele from the ring, but all it did was mometnarily stun the wrestler.

Wearing the regulation 6 ounce gloves, Levinsky came out from his corner with a rush and, almost before he realized it, was on his back against the ropes.

Looses Haymaker.

He threw a round-house right at Steele and the wrestler, ducking, tackled Levinsky with a jarring plunge, throwing him against the ropes.

With a cat-like rush, Steele jumped on Levinsky's back and was forcing his shoulders to the mat as the King, groping for the lower strand of rope with his left hand, swung vainly backward in an attempt to punch his opponent.

Separated by the referee, Levinsky swung from his heels with the punch he said would win. It landed, stopped Steele short and the King followed with a weak left.

Steele dove in again with a tackle and Levinsky went down to the canvas hard. The wrestler was on him in a split-second and, with the body block, held his arms tight while bearing his shoulders to the mat.

Federal Funds Help Gridmen At 24 Colleges, Survey Shows

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—When those Moleskin heroes go galloping down the Nation's gridirons Saturday after Saturday, striding over goal lines for glorious touchdowns and screaming headlines, too little credit is given the blockers who made those thrilling runs possible. Take good old Uncle Sam for example.

Uncle Sam, Golden Gaffer of the National Youth Administration, is the guy who blocked out the big bad wolf from the paths of a lot of football players this season, according to a United Press survey completed tonight.

This survey of 45 colleges and universities in all sections revealed that at 24 of the schools some members of the football squads were receiving financial assistance from the N. Y. A., which will spend about $37,000,000 aiding college and high school students during the nine months ended June 30, 1936. At 16 of the schools no squad members were receiving N. Y. A. assistance, and at five others the officials were uncertain or evaded the question. At other institutions, Columbia University, for instance, some of the squad receive N. Y. A. aid—but after the football season ends.

The schools replied unanimously that there were no rules or barriers preventing needy football players from receiving Federal aid. The fact that a student played football did not ban him from getting the $15 to $25 monthly. His application was considered just the same as those of other needy students.

Virtually all schools in the country have their own N. Y. A. administrator. This official usually is a faculty member. He passes upon the applications, assigns the work to be done and the payment therefor. Although the Government puts up the money, the students work for the university at about 50 cents an hour. They work in the libraries, laboratories, about the grounds, etc.

At the University of Southern California, 11 of the 48 Trojan varsity members are receiving N. Y. A. assistance. Also eight of the 53 freshmen players. At the University of Iowa 15 of the squad of 45 are on "student relief employment" working mostly as equipment men in the athletic department. It was not clarified whether this relief employment is the same as N. Y. A.

Stoefen Will Forsake Tennis And Become a Prize Fighter

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 19.—Six-foot 4-inch Lester Rollo Stoefen, former Davis Cup player who can whap a tennis ball harder than any man in the world, tonight decided to hang up his tennis racquet—possibly for keeps—and throw his chips into the heavyweight prize fight pot.

The long-limbed Californian will begin training January 11—at the start of the winter tours of Bill O'Brien's professional tennis troupe, in which Stoefen is enrolled—and at the end of six months will be ready to tackle the prize-fighting racket.

Little Rollo made his startling announcement from the depths of an overstuffed chair in the lobby of the Los Angeles Tennis Club's spacious Hollywood home.

"It was Bill O'Brien's idea," he explained, wrapping up a set of knuckles as big as ham hocks and wiggling them under his nose. "I've never boxed in a ring in my life—

Cue Championship Won by Cochran

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, tonight defeated Willie Hoppe, of New York, 50 to 46, for the world's three-cushion billiard championship. The match went 45 innings.

Cochran, in succeeding Johnny Layton as champion, regained the title which he won in 1933. Cochran and Hoppe went into tonight's play-offs with records of seven victories and one defeat each.

In a dramatic finish to the exciting game, Cochran came to the table in the forty-fifth inning trailing, 46 to 43. The San Francisco artist called on all his wizardry to run out the match with an unfinished string of seven.

Manslaughter Is Laid To Joe Louis' Trainer

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP).—Jack Blackburn, trainer for the Negro heavyweight boxer Joe Louis, and William A. Parnell, were charged with manslaughter by the State today in connection with the recent fatal shooting of Enoch Houser, a Negro. Previously Blackburn and Parnell, both Negroes, were charged with assault to murder. Judge Matthew D. Hartigan set the case for December 5.

Blackburn was named defendant yesterday in a $100,000 damage suit filed for Lucy Cannon, 9, wounded in the shooting.

Dodgers Upset Cards.

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—Scoring a touchdown in the last two minutes of play, the Brooklyn Dodgers upset the Chicago Cardinals, 14-12, in a National Professional League football game tonight at Ebbets Field before 20,000.

Reds Show a Profit.

Cincinnati, Nov. 19 (AP).—For the first time in nine years, the Cincinnati Reds concluded their baseball season with a profit, President Powel Crosley reported. He placed the figure at $50,000.

Mrs. Somerville's Transporter Takes Bowie Purse by Neck

Captain Jinks Starts Drive Too Late

9,000 See Wagner Give Virginia Colt a Winning Ride.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

BOWIE RACE TRACK, Nov. 19.—Transporter, owned by Mrs. M. du P. Somerville, Virginia and Delaware sportswoman, scored a neck decision over Captain Jinks, owned by H. W. Jackson, to win the Notley, feature race of an interesting program at this turf establishment today. Some 9,000 regular and occasional racing enthusiasts watched the pair battle down to the wire after a trip of a mile and 70 yards. Third in the field of nine came Ashen, a representative of the Shandon Farm.

Transporter was only luke warm with the majority of bettors and supplied a mutuel of $14.

The victory was another for the Burch brothers, of Washington, who have had unusual success in Maryland during the past month. Selby Burch is trainer of the son of The Porter and he saddled a mighty fit juvenile. Transporter had gained the lead before the field was a dozen yards from the starting gates and from that point to the finish it was a case of "catch me if you can."

Rides "Winging" Race.

Joe Wagner had the mount on Transporter and he rode what the horsemen refer to as a "winging race." He hustled the juvenile every inch of the way. Some Good was closest to the leader during the early running but after challenging several times gave up the chase as the stretch was reached. Then Captain Jinks developed the momentum that made him such a factor at the finish, but he was held safe. Ashen came with a rush in the straightaway but it was productive of only third money.

In contrast to the powerful performance by Selby Burch's representative, Brother Preston's pair—Giant Killer and Thirteen Stars—failed to figure in the important running at any stage. Giant Killer went into the air at the break and lost all chance, while Thirteen Stars, which defeated today's winner earlier in the meeting, ran in dull fashion.

The sixth race provided much excitement. High Flag finished on the rail and Playmore came up on the outside of the track. The judges ruled High Flag the winner by a nose and brought a terrific booing which probably would have been more terrific had they called it the other way. From the pressbox, Playmore, going much the fastest, appeared to be bearing to the outside. High Flag paid $42.50.

Those who played the combination of Indomitable and Sassaby in the daily double went down under the stands to collect a $71.90 mutuel.

Indomitable, a son of Man o' War, with Jockey Alfred Robertson in the saddle took a nose decision from Saracen in the first race. The winner, trained for Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords by Preston Burch, of Washington, wrested the lead from Must Be on the back stretch, but had to be ridden out to withstand the closing rush of Saracen. Indomitable rewarded the faithful with a $10.20 mutuel.

Stoefen to Give Up Tennis for Boxing amateur or professional. 'Obie' thinks I can make the grade, so I'm giving it a try on his say-so."

This seemed to be borne out by a memo from O'Brien, written on vivid pink stationery, which described an exodus of "broad-shouldered young men" from other lines of athletic activity into heavyweight ranks, lured by "the phenomenal success of Young Joe Louis, Detroit Negro, in the prize ring."

Stoefen, the memo continued, was planning, after close of the winter circuit, to "lay aside his racquet for good, eschew white lights and their attendant temptations, and hie himself into the solitude of deep woods."

Stoefen will be the first top-flight tenniser to switch to boxing. George Lott, his Davis Cup doubles mate, has been a sparring mate in gymnasiums and is what Stoefen described as "pretty good." Lott is about 15 pounds lighter than Stoefen.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INDOMITABLE, $10.20, $4.70, $3.70; SARACEN, $4.60, $3.30; MUST BE $10.30.

INDOMITABLE away in the first flight and in the thick of contention from the start, withstood a hard drive after reaching the home stretch and was up in the last few strides. SARACEN stoutly handled from the beginning, swung to the outside and closed in determined fashion. MUST BE was rushed hard to gain command, was kept under vigorous pressure, but failed to rally in the closing stages. NED WINTER bettered his position gradually but could not menace nearing the finish. TWICE could not gain a forward position. BOGERTIN broke slowly. BROCKTON was in tight quarters after the break. PEERLESS PAL suffered early interference. GOLD CLIP was away poorly. BLACK BRIGADE was badly sloughed when leaving the back stretch and had to be taken up sharply. RONFALON and KIDINADI were away poorly.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 1:36. Off at 1:40. Winner, L. Leipman's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAMINO REAL, $3.20, $2.80, $2.40; HAPPY FIND, $12.20, $6.10; BREAD KING, $4.50.

CAMINO REAL moved into the lead midway of the turn after racing in close pursuit of BREAD KING, swung wide into the home stretch, but continued stronly and drew out nearing the finish. HAPPY FIND moved up fast leaving the back stretch, responded readily and came stronsly at end. BREAD KING saved a great deal of ground when the winner swerved out entering the home stretch, but weakened nearing the finish. MINTON closed with good speed during the stretch drive. WAR SAINT could not improve his position under stout urging. SLAVE was held safe. MARSON was outrun. RED BADGE stopped badly.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:08. Off at 2:10. Winner, M. Hirsch's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SASSABY, $13.80, $6.60, $4.40; SINGING HEART, $4.60, $2.90; MAD BETH, $3.80.

SASSABY, kept under stout urging after losing command at the turn, rallied strongly in the final drive and was up in the closing sixteenth. SINGING HEART, rated within striking distance of the leaders, saved ground and closed full of run during the last three-sixteenths. MAD BETH, forced to race on the outside early, assumed a brief lead midway of the curve but could not withstand the first two when approaching the finish. SUNNED was hustled along all the way and finished willingly. GOLD THORN weakened early.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:38. Off at 2:41. Winner, L. M. Reuter's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS DIGNITY, $7.10, $3.90, $3.30; SWAMP ANGEL, $11.90, $6.90; CANPRA, $13.10.

MISS DIGNITY, taken under slight restraint after moving into a forward position at the first turn, moved to the front with good speed at the last turn and, holding on strongly under a stout drive, outstayed SWAMP ANGEL. Latter, slow to get into his best stride, went into contention when nearing final turn, went to the inside of the winner after challenging strongly midway of the home stretch and finished gamely. CANPRA, slow to get going, circled his field and closed full of run. WEDGE LAD came with a belated effort approaching the finish. STILL ALARM lacked early speed and was unable to enter contention.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRANSPORTER, $14.00, $6.90, $7.00; CAPTAIN JINKS, $6.00, $3.60; ASHEN, $13.10.

TRANSPORTER, racing with blinkers and hurried to the front going to the first turn, went along under restraint while withstanding SOME GOOD, drew clear entering the home stretch, but had to be aroused sharply to withstand CAPTAIN JINKS. Latter, placed fourth early, moved up fast nearing the home stretch, came through on the inside and closed with a rush. ASHEN, rated for the first six furlongs, responded when shaken up and came determinedly at the close. HUT closed with a rush in the last half mile. GIANT KILLER, a distance trailer after breaking slowly, finished with a bold rush. SOME GOOD, under slight reserve early, flattened out when put to a drive. JINNEE tired under his weight.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:42½. Winner, Mrs. A. J. Abel's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH FLAG, $42.50, $14.40, $5.50; PLAYMORE, $15.60, $6.00; JIM JOHN, $2.70.

HIGH FLAG, eased out of tight quarters after reaching the back stretch, swung to the outside after racing close up, then closing in game fashion, was up in the conluding strides. PLAYMORE worked his way up steadily from a slow beginning, finished very wide after reaching the home stretch, and just failed to get up. JIM JOHN was hustled into the lead when straightened into the back stretch, shook off repeated efforts from CELEBRANT, saved a lot of ground, but weakened badly under severe punishment. APATHY, prominent all during the running, held on strongly in the closing test. MOUSE TRAP went evenly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:11. Off at 4:13. Winner, M. B. Singleton's b. g. (7), by Mad Hatter—Paint Brush. Trained by D. J. McAuliffe. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25, 0:51, 1:17, 1:43 3-5, 1:50 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SMEAR, $8.60, $5.20, $3.00; IDLE FLIRT, $6.20, $5.80; HOMEWORK, $8.20.

SMEAR, keen in close pursuit of REPEAL for the first seven furlongs, assumed command after being straightened into the home stretch, held on strongly under tenacious drive and barely lasted to stall off IDLE FLIRT. Latter secured racing room on the inside in the last five-sixteenths, responded readily, and was wearing the winner down at every stride. HOMEWORK worked his way up steadily when in full stride, came through on the inside at the stretch turn and finished full of run. REPEAL was rushed hard to reach the front, set a good pace and held on well. MUSLET raced forwardly and had no excuses. DUNAIR closed gamely after a slow beginning. FAIR ROCHESTER was never a factor after lacking early speed.

exceptional pass receiver. Best tackles are Whatley, Alabama; Rukas, Louisiana State, and Paterson, Auburn. Gilbert of Auburn an outstanding center.

Meyer One of Best.

Other parts of the South, as well as the East, Mid-west and Far West have plenty of first-class talent to offer for the annual debate.

Army's Charles (Monk) Meyer, by his all-around performances against Notre Dame, stamped himself as one of the best backs in the East. The Cadet captain, Bill Shuler, at end, was another standout who played the full 60 minutes against the Irish "22." All-star candidates in two fine lines, among them Ray and Camp, of Dartmouth; Ritter, Weller and Cullinan, of Princeton, will collide this week in the leading test of unbeaten teams. New York University's stellar back, Ed Smith, and Colgate's captain and tackle, Charles Wasicek, are others.

North Carolina State's center, Steve Sabol, is rated by most observers as the best in the Southern Conference and a particular star on pass defense. Babe Daniel, of North Carolina, also has a fine record in the pivot spot. Ace Parker, Duke quarterback, rates high.

Reports from the Big Six this week again emphasize the candidacy of Bernie Scherer, Nebraska's end. The leading conferenec backs are Lloyd Cardwell, of Nebraska; Sam Francis, of Nebraska, and Bill Breeden, of Oklahoma.

Gallico

Says Films Fail To Clear Up Row Over Irish Pass

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—You would have been interested and perhaps slightly amused had you seen the experts gathered in the projection room over at Pathe News yesterday, watching the negative of the fatal Army-Notre dame pass play unreel on the sound screen in an effort to see whether Grove actually did interfere with Wayne Millner, of Notre Dame, on the pass that Field Judge Palmer awarded to Notre Dame on the Army 2-yard line and which was subsequently converted into a touchdown.

The white on black figures on the screen showed Shakespeare fading back to throw the long pass to Millner. The camera whirls dizzily, following the ball in flight; there is a swirl of figures leaping into the air at the goal line. And none of us was wiser than when we came in.

A little later, we all gathered like a lot of solemn owls, or perhaps even more like the learned professors of Padua who met to discuss how many angels could be gathered on the point of a needle and squinted through a machine called a movieola, a complicated sort of self-contained projector in which you look through a small glass bulls-eye and see the moving picture there in the form of very tiny figures. But it has the advantage of being able to stop at any desired point on the film so that the picture may be examined, frame by frame.

And so we dissected the movements of the little men on the goal line during that pregnant moment, frame by frame—there are 16 frames to a foot of film—and everyone peered into the machine, and there were cries of "There look, see?" And "No, No. He's trying to bat the ball. See his arm is away from his body."

AND "Why, he's got his arm hooked," or "He isn't within three feet of him." Net result, all those who thought there was interference on Saturday still think so and the pictures prove, and those who will swear that there was no interference are more firmly convinced than ever, because the pictures show it.

During the discussion I ventured to suggest that there seemed to have been interference on the pass before the fatal one, and that perhaps, as seemed to have happened in the Ohio State game, the officials having failed to call it then, but feeling this failure to have been an injustice, to the team, called it on the next one where there was slightly less suspicion of it.

At this juncture a pleasant-looking gray-haired gentleman spoke up and said, "Nothing of the sort. I have never known that to happen on any football field. Football officials call the plays then and there as they see them, and they call them immediately. Half of the time they do not even know what team they are calling the penalty on. The infraction registers itself on their minds, and they jump in and call the penalty."

THIS turned out to be Bill Crowley, the umpire of the Army-Notre Dame game who said that if Judge Palmer hadn't called the interference he would have done so. Mr. Crowley peered into the movieola as solemnly as any of us, and then gave us a little lecture on interference and what constitutes such a breach, which I am sure did us all good, and clarified a good deal.

The whole situation last Saturday revolves around who touched the ball first, or rather whether the Army man touched Millner or the ball first. Crowley maintains that the Army defender ran over to make a play for the ball, but as he did so, bumped Millner's shoulder, and then dragged his arm down so that it was Millner who batted the ball to the ground. If that is true it was a plain case of interference. You may go for the ball, but you must not bump the receiver, or disturb him on his leap for the ball, beyond a clean leap for it yourself.

Hatch Pairs With Snead To Star

Beamer Grabs Pass for Rough Riders' Score in Second Period.

By John R. Vosburgh.

IT TOOK Western High all season to make a touchdown, but when the Georgetowners finally set about making one yesterday, they added another for good measure, thereby winning their annual game with Roosevelt, 13 to 6, and clinching fourth place in the inter-high standings. A spirited crowd of 2,500 lined Roosevelt Stadium to watch Western score twice in the last half to overcome the 6-point lead taken by the Rough Riders in the second period.

Roosevelt seemed well on its way out of its perennial last place confinement until a couple of Western boys named John Hatch and Morris Snead began tripping all over the field to lead the Red team's belated but victorious drives. Hatch varied his performance by tossing several well-aimed passes which figured prominently in bringing about the winning touchdowns.

Beamer Scores.

Francis Beamer, Roosevelt's punting and passing wingman, stepped out of his customary role on the second play of the second period to take a short pass from Quarterback Dick Grant for Roosevelt's touchdown.

It was Hatch, the star tennis player who never played football before this year, who engineered the advance which broke what appeared to be an inevitable 6-6 deadlock in the last quarter. With about 5 minutes to play, Hatch, who has been unable to practice since he received a deep gash in his knee in the Eastern game two weeks ago, cut loose on a 22-yard run which belied the five stitches which have been taken to close the wound.

Hatch's jaunt, snakily pursued down the sideline, put the ball on the 23-yard line, from which point Hatch flipped a pass to Bill Johnson, substitute end, who was downed on the 7-yard marker. Hatch picked up 3 yards and then catapulted the next 4 for the touchdown and the winning points.

Many Fumbles.

Western was virtually as much outplayed in the first half as it was superior in the second. Beamer and bare-headed Frank Witt were playing smashing football to lead the Rough Riders' assault. Witt recovered three fumbles in the first quarter alone, the second of which, committed by Brud Saum, of Western, gave Roosevelt the ball at midfield.

On the initial play of the second quarter, Beamer lying almost flat on his stomach took Grant's short toss for the score. Beamer's place-kick attempt was blocked by Price.

Western hit back swiftly with the start of the second half after taking the kick-off on its own 30. Hatch passed to Snead for a first down on the 42. Hatch and Snead made it a first down on the Roosevelt 45 and then Snead shook loose off right tackle, reversed his field and was finally hauled down on the 14-yard line. Hatch picked up 4 yards and Saum plunged to the goal-line only to fumble, Beamer recovering on the 1-yard line.

Beamer kicked short outside on the 18-yard line and Snead, Saum and Hatch alternated to lug the leather to the 9-yard line. Hatch made it a first down on the 6-yard line and Saum added 3 yards. A penalty against Roosevelt put the ball on the 1½-yard line, from which point Snead took it over.

Greatest Secrecy Surrounds Middies

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 19.—The Naval Academy football squad began its final preparations for the Army game today behind a wall of secrecy.

Tom Hamilton, head coach, had his players report to the Thompson Stadium, from which Marines and watchmen barred everyone except managers and members of the coaching staff. Even naval officers were kept from the field.

For about two weeks a "B" squad eleven has been trained in Army plays to use against the Navy Varsity groups. With the approach of the game, other teams are being given the Cadet plays.

Two Maryland Regulars in Hospital

WHILE preparations for Saturday's important game continued with unusual alacrity at College Park yesterday, three University of Maryland gridmen, two of them regulars, languished in the infirmary with a slight attack of grippe.

Vic Willis, gangling end around whom the Terrapins' passing attack is built; Johnny Gormely, fullback and one of the squad's most valuable defensive players, and Blair Smith, reserve end, are the patients. All hope to recover sufficiently to play in the game, biggest of the year, but a decided improvement will have to be shown before Friday to permit this.

Bernie Buscher, whose nose was broken in the Indiana game and is not completely well, was sent to Willis' post yesterday, while George Sachs and Ed Daly, both of whom have been idle because of injuries, alternated at fullback. While not a regular, Smith had been counted on for service against the Hoyas after exhibiting a flash of genuine talent against Indiana and Washington and Lee.

Roosevelt Cagers To Play 30 Games

One of the longest and most difficult basketball schedules the school has ever arranged was announced yesterday by Roosevelt High. Calling for 30 games, 5 more than the Rough Riders played last year, the slate includes several new and formidable opponents, including the George Washington Freshmen, the Temple University Freshmen, the University of Maryland Freshmen, Takoma-Silver Spring High, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, Forrest Park High of Baltimore, Cambridge (Md.) High, Georgetown Prep and Augusta Military Academy.

Coach Herman Littman, former New York University court star, who recently took over the basketball leadership under the direction of Lynn Woodworth, director of athletics, will send his team into action for the first time December 3, against the fast Bethesda-Chevy Chase five, suburban champions last year.

Schedule.

December 3, Chevy Chase at Roosevelt; 6, Silver Spring at Roosevelt; 10, Mt. St. Joseph's at Roosevelt; 13, Forrest Park at Baltimore; 17, Washington-Lee at Clarendon; 18, George Washington Freshmen at Roosevelt; 19, George Washington High at Alexandria; 20, Forrest Park at Roosevelt; 27, Cambridge (Md.) High at Cambridge. January 3, Temple University Freshmen at Philadelphia; 7, Mt. St. Joseph's at Baltimore; 8, Maryland Freshmen at College Park; 9, George Washington Freshmen at G. W.; 10, Western; 15, Georgetown Prep at Roosevelt; 16, George Washington High at Roosevelt; 17, Central at Tech; 20, Gonzaga, at Roosevelt; 21, Eastern at Roosevelt; 24, Tech at Tech; 27, Chevy Chase at Bethesda; 28, Western; 29, Episcopal at Alexandria. February 4, Central at Roosevelt; 5, Silver Spring at Silver Spring; 7, Eastern at Tech; 10, Gonzaga at Gonzaga; 11, Tech at Roosevelt; 13, Augusta Military at Augusta; 14, V. M. I. Freshmen at Lexington, Va. (pending).

Marmion, Orme Lost To Y Swimming Team

The Washington Y. M. C. A. swimming team has lost two of its mainstays of last season, Bill Marmion, District back stroke champion, and Jim Orme, perennial runner-up. Orme has been relegated to inaction by an operation for appendicitis. New men on the squad, which will be coached by Dallas Shirley, former George Washington athlete, are Paul Dunleavy, Annapolis; Dee Sheppard, Utah University; Albert McCabe, Uniontown, Pa., and Justin Farrell, Washington-Lee.

Gaithersburg's Team Sweeps To Crown

GAITHERSBURG HIGH SCHOOL is coveting its second successive Montgomery County high school soccer crown today after sweeping a six-game schedule without a defeat and running its winning streak to 15 games over a three-year period, under Coach Harry Bertschey, of New Haven, Conn.

The upper countians were easily the class of the county schools. Sherwood, with whom they played two games, was the only team to score on them, the Sandy Springers making a goal in each game to blot the victors' defensive record. Offensively they rang up 25 points, with Kilby scoring 12, Hardy 9 and Devilbiss 4. Only ten points have been scored against them in two years.

The remainder of the county schools finished in the order of 1934, with the exception of Damascus and Poolesville, who traded fourth and sixth places. Rockville High lost its only game to Gaithersburg, but was tied twice.

Only One Sub.

The winners gained the reputation of iron men by using but one substitution in the six-game schedule. Gardner went in for Perrell in three of the games. The long booting of the fullbacks, Hammon and Perrell, again featured, these double stars making the work of Goalie Beall a snap. In the Blair game Beall only handled the ball once. Six of the seven players will graduate, forcing Coach Bertschey to build a new team for next year.

Due to the 1934 ruling, Gaithersburg will not compete for the State crown with the other county champions. Sherwood was the last county school to compete, setting a new record by playing seven overtime periods in losing, 1-0, to Brunswick High of Frederick, Md. It was mainly because of the long overtime play in this game that county schools no longer enter.

Hopkins Coach Drank, Struck Her, Wife Says

Baltimore, Nov. 19 (AP).—George L. Darley, football and basketball coach at Johns Hopkins University, "drank constantly and heavily," his wife testified today as trial of their cross-actions for divorce opened in circuit court here.

Mrs. Frances H. Darley asserted Darley struck her on several occasions and that eight months ago, when she separated from him, he hit her so hard she suffered a "black eye and a bloody nose." She described herself as "desperately lonely" during their seven years of married life.

Catholic Freshmen Whip Bullis, 26-0

Catholic University's newest consignment of football players, a crew bearing the name of the C. U. Freshmen, yesterday justified their attendance at classes by quickly routing a Bullis Prep eleven, 26 to 0, at Brookland Stadium. The Cardinals varied the performance by allowing four different players to make the touchdowns by assorted methods.

Butch Kincaid, an Oregon importation, plunged over from the 2-yard line for the first score in the opening period after the yearlings had come through with a sustained march. Krawzell, left half, contributed another score in the third period on a 13-yard line after a lateral and reverse. A 28-yard pass, Pembrook to Bunsax, accounted for another and Pembrook the fourth in the last period.

Bullis outplayed the collegians in the second period, advancing to the 10-yard line, where their advance was halted.

W.-L. High Denies Plan to Quit Loop

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Ballston, Va., Nov. 18.—Washington-Lee High School authorities today denied reports published in a Washington paper yesterday that the school is considering its withdrawal from the Virginia Literary and Athletic League. Principal S. P. Vanderslice and Director of Athletics W. A. Richardson joined in the denial.

It was reported that the school was incensed over decisions made against it in its football game with Newport News at Newport News last week and therefore intends to terminate relations with Newport News. This, the reports said, would automatically drop Washington-Lee from the league.

School officials, however, pointed out that relations with Newport News could be terminated without affecting Washington-Lee's good standing in the league. They added, moreover, that they do not intend to break off relations with Newport News if it can be prevented. Although no game for 1936 has been scheduled, it is possible one will be.

Negotiations between the schools are now in progress to bring about what was termed "a better understanding on the part of the athletic authorities of the two schools."

Bicycle Instruction.

Marjorie Ward, Canadian bicycle champion, and her sister, Joan, who finished third in the Canadian title races, will instruct the 20 entrants in the playground event of next Sunday's National Capital Bicycle Sweepstakes tomorrow at the Potomac Park track between 4 p. m. and 5 p. m.

Maryland A. C. Faces Palace Tonight

RAINED out in their scheduled game last Sunday, Maryland A. C. and Palace, the pride of Southwest, will renew their age-old rivalry tonight at 8:15 o'clock at Griffith Stadium. It will be the second meeting of the teams this season.

Palace, though bowing 13 to 6 a month ago, has proved to be the only team able to score against Maryland in seven games. Thus far Maryland has defeated the Marians, Palace, the Norfolk Clancys, the Richmond Arrows, the Fredericksburg Corsairs and the Frankford Pros and held the Richmond Arrows to a scoreless tie, piling up 124 points to their opponents' 6.

Against Maryland's highly-touted backfield of Benner, Augusterfer, Nelson and Cumberland, the Southwest outfit will offer Mike and Johnny Scanlon, Bumps Hudson and Snail DeLabre, the last-named being generally known as "the greatest sandlot fullback ever developed in Washington."

Quintets to Open Heurich Cup Play

Amateur basketball will come into its own Saturday night when six District quintets clash in the Heurich gym in the opening of the Heurich Cup amateur series.

Fourteen of the strongest unlimited clubs in Washington and vicinity have entered the league. They are Delaware & Hudson, Olmsted Grill, Bovello Plumbers, Agriculture, Renrocs, Resettlement Administration, Little Tavern, P. W. A., Acacia, St. Mary's Celtics, of Alexandria; Fort Myer, Bolling Field and Coffey Sales.

In the opening contest, at 7:30 o'clock, Delaware & Hudson engage Fort Myer. Heurich's Flashes, 145-pound champions a season ago, will meet Coffey Sales, while Little Tavern and Acacia will grapple in the final contest.

Pin Loop Lead Assumed by Shamrocks

Vee Bees Are Swamped; Lorraine Gulli Adds to Her Average.

THE Shamrocks, displaying an offensive which swamped the Vee Bee three games, climbed into undisputed possession of the leadership of the Washington Ladies' League last night at the Recreation, breaking last week's deadlock for the top with the Columbians when the latter was stopped once by the Colonials.

Although Lorraine Gulli boosted her average well above the 116 mark with a 357 set and Polly Shugrue pulled down the high individual game with 133, the El Gees took the rap twice from the Beequees. The Nomads took the measure of the Cardinals, gaining an odd-game decision.

One of the greatest aggregations of duckpin stars ever assembled in the South is the present outlook of the fifth annual Dixie Sweepstakes, which is scheduled to get under way at the Convention Hall alleys. With the entry of practically every man in the Southern Men's Inter-City League, the winners of numerous preliminary sweepstakes and a large delegation from Connecticut, this year's event will afford the keenest of opposition.

George L. Isemann, secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, will receive entries up to 11 a. m. Saturday. The entry fee of $25 per man includes cost of games.

Washington Centennial and Milan each gained an odd game victory last night in the Eastern Star Ladies League at Lucky Strike to remain deadlocked for the top position.

All the honors in the Government League last night at Lucky Strike went to the War team. Harry Penfold, shooting a 143 game and 390 set, and the team chalking up a 597 game and total pinfall of 1,670.

Court Season Opened By Southeast Center

The Southeast Community Center Basketball League opened its season last night at Hine Junior High School with five games played. The first game, won by American Stone Co. over Northeast Business Men, 24 to 22, was so closely contested that two extra periods were necessary.

Congress Heights A. C. defeated Sigma Mu Sigma, 42 to 26; Marvin Methodists won from Epworth Church, 25 to 16; O'Donnell's Restaurant overpowered Chi Nu Gamma, 20 to 13, and Anacostia Business Men were licked by the Trojans, 36 to 26.

California's 1920 Team First to Bring U. S. Title to Coast.

By George Trevor.

Nationally Known Football Authority.

OLD California was the first of the Pacific Coast football powers to earn Nation-wide recognition as national champions, when the Golden Bears of 1920 swept through all opposition on Sundown Slope like the hordes of Attila and massacred Ohio State's Big Ten champions, 28 to 0 in the Rose Bowl. This steam-roller engineered by Andy Smith initiated a span of five years without a defeat—the golden era of California football. Since Smith died and had his ashes strewn over Berkeley Field the Blue and Gold has never quite regained that post-war pinnacle.

California football dates back to the 90's but the rugby interlude of 1906-1914 broke the continuity of the game at Berkeley. Only two pre-rugbyites have earned places on the all-time Bear elevens—Orval Overall, a mighty guard on the 1903 team, and "Wrec" Womble, powerhouse end on the 1901 juggernaut. Overall is better known to Easterners as a star pitcher on the 1907-1909 Chicago Cubs. He was a giant with hands like grabbuckets.

Babe Horrell was beyond question California's finest center. His lateral range was limited only by the width of the field and how he could pick off enemy passes! George Latham had a terrific offensive charge and fed the ball flawlessly to the flashy 1920 back field.

Ted Beckett, All-America running guard in 1930, had no equal at Berkeley at heading interference though Cortes Majors, of 1920 fame, was very nearly his equal.

Stewart Beam is usually considered the best of California's many fine tackles. Paired with Dan McMillan he opened the holes through which Toomey, Erb and Sprott darted to glory.

Brick Muller belongs in a class apart at end. This flame-thatched Olympic athlete could throw a pass as powerfully as he hurled the javelin. His 70-yard heave to Brodie Stephens in the 1920 Rose Bowl game demoralized Ohio State and stands as the most sensational pass in football history. Muller's jumping prowess and speed served him ably as a ball-carrier on end-around plays. He ranks with Hardwick, Hinkey and Shevlin among the great ends of all-time. Irvine Phillips, a tall, sinewy ball hawk, tops the Bear ends of more recent vintage. His catches of passes against Stanford will not soon be forgotten at Berkeley.

Peppery Charlie Erb, pilot of the unconquered 1920, '21 and '22 teams, wins the quarterback's baton without a dissenting voice, though Arleigh Williams reached spectacular heights on occasions. Benny Lom, a more versatile player than Erb, has been shifted to halfback, where his talents as a runner, passer and kicker would have free scope. Virtually single-handed Lom almost pulled the 1929 Rose Bowl game out of the Georgia Tech fire.

Pesky Sprott and Crip Toomey were savage tackle slashers of the same stripe, twin lance heads of the 1920 team—regarded by many as the best eleven in Pacific Coast history. Tut Imlay succeeded them and ably followed in their footsteps.

Center to Stage Ring-Mat Show

Winter Season Opens at Macfarland Tonight.

The Community Center's winter season program will be launched tonight at Macfarland Junior High School with a boxing and wrestling show staged by club members culled from the various neighborhood gyms. Five bouts and two wrestling matches are scheduled.

Applications for franchises in community leagues must be in the hands of gym directors not later than Friday night, when the directors and team managers meet to discuss plans for the season at Langley Junior High School. The meeting is scheduled for 8 o'clock.

Tonight's boxing card includes Dave Walsh vs. Charley Smith, 135 pounds; Jack Pearson vs. Charley Kurtz, 115 pounds; Arthur Miller vs. Charley Mehrling, 145 pounds; Toddy Lagos vs. Eddie Gerstenfeld, 90 pounds, and Al Buckley vs. Bob Russell, 145 pounds.

Bill Smith and Myer Eudell, 150-pounders, and Frank Stallone and Paul Chucklehead, 125-pound artists, will supply the wrestling. Admission is free.

Remington Net For 7 Months Doubles 1934

Kennecott Raises Rate; Tubize Resumes; Extra Voted by Railroad.

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—James H. Rand, jr., president and chairman of Remington Rand, Inc., told directors at the regular meeting today that net earnings for the seven months ended October 31 totaled $1,170,099, an increase of more than 100 per cent over the net earnings of $534,389 in the same period last year.

Directors declared two initial quarterly cash dividends of 31¼ cents each on the 5 per cent prior preferred stock, payable January 1 and April 1 to stock of record December 10 and March 10. Directors also declared an initial semiannual dividend of $3 on the $6 preferred stock payable in 5 per cent prior preferred stock as approved by the recapitalization plan. This payment will be made on April 1 to stock of record March 10.

Kennecott Copper.

Directors of the Kennecott Copper Co. today declared a dividend of 20 cents a share on the corporation's capital stock. The disbursement is payable December 26, to stock of record November 29.

The last previous dividend was 15 cents a share, paid on September 30 last. A 60-cent annual rate was established in June, 1934, after a dividend lapse of two years.

Tubize-Chatillon Corporation.

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—Tubize-Chatillon Corporation has declared a dividend of $1.75 on the 7 per cent preferred stock, payable January 2 to stock of record December 10.

This marks a resumption of dividends, the last payment having been the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on January 1, 1933.

Cinn., N. O. & Texas.

Cincinnati, Nov. 19 (AP).—Directors of the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific Railway Co. declared today an extra dividend of $3 a share on common stock.

The extra, with the regular semi-annual dividend of $4 a share, will be paid December 26 to stockholders of record December 4, making a total of $11 paid on common shares this year. A similar amount was disbursed in 1934.

Chesapeake & Ohio.

Cleveland, Nov. 19 (AP).—Directors of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway declared today a regular quarterly dividend of 70 cents, payable January 1, 1936, to stockholders of record December 6, 1935. Directors of the Chesapeake Corporation declared a regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents per share, payable January 1, 1936, to stockholders of record December 6.

The Market

Stocks Resume Advance to New Highs in Active Trading; Bonds Firm.

New York, Nov. 19.—Stocks showed much more disposition to shake off bearishness and resume the advance than to go further down, after the irregularity of yesterday's late trading. Most stocks were carried to higher prices, from a fraction to 3 points in the favorites, in the last hour. Turnover was about the same as the previous day, at around 2,750,000 shares. Poor bonds were strong; others were indifferent. December wheat closed ⅛ cent higher at 97⅛ cents a bushel.

Industrial fields were rather barren of news either to support or to depress the security markets. The fact, announced by one of the braintrusters, that the Government is after all going to keep up its heavy expenditures that might properly come from local efforts, probably had no effect, as promises of economy are listened to with one eye closed and only half an ear open by most people anyhow.

Trade Threat.

The same uneasy feeling that rules among those who sincerely wish to see a balanced budget and among almost every one in business or dependent upon it with regard to an end to Government reform programs, is present, to a lesser extent, on the score of a world war. No one knows much more today than he did yesterday just what this country will play in Italy's commerce, now that sanctions have gone into effect; but every one realizes that any interference with trade will be a blow to business recovery.

Meanwhile, affairs are progressing in China, also along lines that promise no trade advantages (if nothing worse) to this country. Spurred by the difficulties which have overtaken China in part because of currency trouble flowing from our silver policy, and, shielded by indications of the impotence or indifference of the Occident, the Japanese are proceeding to take greater portions of China. Naturally our trade with the new provinces friendly to Japan will soon fall into whatever state is desired by Japan, as was the case with Manchuria. The importance of all that is that this country must secure a great revival of its foreign trade if it is not to slip back into a fresh deflation of its industries and a lower standard of living.

Foreign currencies kept their balance. Sterling was quoted a little higher, but francs were far from buoyant. Italian money was held to a peg by some agency, new or old. Money markets were uiet and unchanged.

Opportunity was taken of a lull in the general run of stocks to run up a handful of issues with special appeal, but which nevertheless have not lacked strength. General Electric and Westinghouse stood out prominently, rising to new high prices. Greatest activity was shown by Radio, which on a long succession of thousand-share blocks forged ahead until before the middle of the last hour the price had reached a new high at 11.

Radio Rises.

Associated Dry Goods spurted for a while in the morning in response to the extra $5 dividend voted by Lord & Taylor, most of which flows to Associated. American Can came to life in the late trading and rose 3 points or so in short order. Telephone forged ahead to a new high price and demand for other communications issues was sturdy. I. T. T. rose a point on large volume. Postal Telegraph preferred climber 2 points and Western Union resumed its advance.

Building shares again were good. Radiator and Thompson Starrett were the features. Otis rose to a new top. Utilities in general were strong, especially the tractions. Great Northern set a good pace for the rails, some of which gained 1 to 3 points. Rail equipments were not slow to follow. Motors were narrow, but the accessories turned buoyant.

Whisky and alcohol stocks rallied sharply.

Bank Pays 91 For Anacostia Five Per Cents

Block of About $357,000 Face Value Will Be Canceled.

A block of Anacostia & Potomac River Railroad 5 per cent first mortgage gold bonds, due 1949, for the purchase of which the Baltimore National Bank has been holding $325,000, has been acquired by the bank at an average price of 91 and will be retired. At that price about $357,000 face value bonds will be canceled, leaving about $2,094,000 of the bonds outstanding.

The bank recently advertised that it would pay not over 92 for $325,000 worth of the bonds, and, although they have sold as high as 94 on the Washington Stock Exchange this year, more than the desired number of bonds was offered where the tenders were opened.

Reserve Directors Elected.

W. W. Hoxton chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, announced yesterday that L. E. Johnson, president of the First National Bank, Alderson, W. Va., has been elected by the banks in group 3 as a class "A" director to succeed himself, his present term expiring on December 31. It was also announced that Edwin Malloy, president and treasurer of the Cheraw Cotton Mills, Inc., Cheraw, S. C., was elected by the banks in group 2 as a class "B" director to succeed himself. This group includes several Washington institutions which are members of the Richmond Reserve Bank. Each director was chosen for a term of three years from January 1 next.

D. J. Harrison Honored.

Daniel Jenifer Harrison, underwriter of the Washington agency of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., was the guest of honor yesterday at a luncheon given at the Lee House by John F. Cremen, general agent of the company. The occasion was Mr. Harrison's tenth anniversary with the agency, during which time he has submitted more than $4,000,000 of business to the Massachusetts Mutual. Mr. Harrison also is a past president of the Life Insurance Club of Washington.

Safe Deposit Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the safe deposit section of the D. C. Bankers Association will be held in the board room of the American Security and Trust Co. tonight at 8 o'clock. At this time the matter of amending the by-laws of the section will be voted upon and all delegates are urged to be present.

$43,963,500 Ohio Edison Bonds Offered

An issue of $43,963,500 first and consolidated bonds, 4 per cent series of 1935, due 1965, of the Ohio Edison Co. is being offered to the public today by a group of investment banking houses, headed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. The bonds are dated November 1, and are priced at 100½ and accrued interest.

Net proceeds of the sale, estimated at $42,913,348 after deducting expenses, will be used to provide funds for the redemption of $40,115,500 outstanding underlying bonds, and to reimburse the company's treasury for $3,843,000 underlying bonds already redeemed.

The underwriters state in the prospectus that they have agreed to purchase these bonds from the company at 98 per cent, or a total of $43,084,230 plus interest. At 100½ and interest, the offering price to the public, the bonds will bring $44,183,317.50 and interest. The underwriting discounts are 2½ per cent or $1,099,087.50.

The Ohio Edison Co. is the Ohio operating subsidiary of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, and supplies electric energy to 221 communities in Ohio, as well as rural areas. Net earnings for 9 months of this year were $5,286,697.

Bus Business Sets All-Time Record

New York, Nov. 19.—Long-haul intercity bus companies have reached an all-time high in operations and net income according to reports for the first nine months of 1935 to be published in the November issue of Bus Transporation. An analysis of the operations of more than 16,000 buses covering a half billion bus-miles and doing a gross business of $116,000,000 in the period covered indicate that traffic volume became exceptionally good in the third quarter. Net income in the third quarter in the face of increasing taxes and costs was the highest for any quarter in the five years that the magazine has been compiling quarterly statistics of operating conditions.

Passenger revenues per bus-mile also are higher and are nearly 3 per cent ahead of those in the previous year.

Corn Up 2 Cents; Supply Is Scarce

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Brisk upturns of corn prices today hoisted the market for that cereal 2 cents a bushel. Complete exhaustion of supplies of corn in Chicago public elevators gave emphasis to reports of extraordinary delays to corn movement because of abnormal lateness and wetness of the country's 1935 corn crop.

The corn market closed firm, ⅞ to 1⅝ above yesterday's finish, December, 61½ to 61⅝; wheat, ⅛ to ⅜ up; December, 97⅛ to 97¼; oats at ⅛ decline to ⅛ advance, and provisions showing 2 cents to 5 cents setback.

'Kidnaping for Love' Seen; Maid, Baby Found

Oakland, Calif., Nov. 19 (AP).—An asserted kidnaping motivated by a nursemaid's love for her baby victim was disclosed by police today with the arrest of the maid and recovery of the child missing from his Phoenix, Ariz., home since August 17.

"I couldn't bear to leave the baby," police quoted the maid, Mrs. Stella Cutting, "so we decided to bring him along."

At Phoenix, the parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Fox, said they were convinced the girl kidnaped the 2½-year-old child, James Fox, jr., because of her love for him.

Strange As It Seems —By John Hix

IN 1893, when Grover Cleveland was President, Miss Theo Hall was appointed postmistress of Medical Lake, Wash. For 42 years, until her death this year, she served in the same position in spite of the change of administrations that often result in changes of postoffice jobs. Her appointments were continued under President McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Strange as it seems, Trinidad was named by Christopher Columbus before the great explorer knew that there was such a place as Trinidad. When Columbus set out on his third voyage to the New World, he vowed that he would dedicate the first new land he found to the Holy Trinity. When he discovered the island that is now called Trinidad, he named it Trinidado, subsequently shortened in English to Trinidad.

Jakob Ludwig Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, the famous German composer, commonly known as Felix Mendelssohn, began his career of musical composition at the age of nine. He started taking music lessons at the age of four. Before he was in his teens he had written between 50 and 60 pieces for piano, violin and organ. At 13 he composed six complete symphonies, and by the time he was 15 he was the author of four operas. His "Trumped Overture" and overture to "A Midsummer Night's Dream" were written when he was 17.

LEGAL NOTICES

WILLIAM A. COOMBE, Attorney.
Colorado Building.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia. Anna M. Theriault, plaintiff, vs. Fred W. Theriault, Fort Kent, Me., defendant. No. 59448. Equity. The object of this suit is to secure for the plaintiff, Alma M. Theriault, a divorce from the bond of marriage from the defendant, Fred W. Theriault, upon the ground of voluntary separation from bed and board for five consecutive years without cohabitation. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 19th day of November, 1935, ordered that the defendant, Fred W. Theriault, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the FOURTH DAY, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. JENNINGS BAILEY, Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) FRANCIS CUNNINGHAM, Clerk. By RICHARD J. KIRKLAND, Assistant Clerk. 20,27,4

'First Mention' Given C. U. Student In Contest

Raleigh T. Daniel, of 3229 Idaho avenue northwest, a senior at Catholic University, has received a "first mention" award in the class B architectural competition sponsored by the Beaux Arts Institute of Design. The problem was "An Artist's Summer Colony" and attracted 200 entrants.

Another Washington student, Albert O. L. Goenner, of 1307 Clifton street, received a "mention" in the same contest. Both drawings were submitted by the department of architecture of Catholic University.

The lecture will be under the auspicies of the Washington Society of Fine Arts.

Keats Museum Receives Letter About Endymion

London (AP).—An important Keats document, the gift of an anonymous American, has been received by the Keats Memorial House and Museum, Hampstead.

It is a letter written by Jane Porter, English novelist, in which she tells of her delight in "Endymion" and refers to Lockhart's "ill-natured" review which advised Keats to give up poetry and go "back to the plasters, pills and ointment boxes" of the apothecary's shop.

Keats started out as an apothecary's helper.

New Questions Face Principals In Loring Case

Detective Reverses Self on Statement; Looks for Slip in Stories.

Reversing himself on previous statements, Lieut. Joseph H. Itzel, Baltimore detective who is seeking the murderer of Corinna Loring, now takes the position that none of those questioned is "out of the picture."

This was indicated by a statement Itzel made last night. He said:

"I am looking for a slip in the stories told me by material witnesses. If we catch somebody on a slip, then we can go hell-bent along that line."

As Itzel has talked to various persons close to Corinna, he has been telling reporters:

"He is out of it."

"She is out of it."

More Questioning.

Why he has put them back into the investigation was not clear last night, although it was apparent that he suspects somebody of withholding certain facts.

At least half of those to whom Itzel has talked so far have been or will be interviewed again.

Lieut. Itzel also announced last night that a flat iron picked up in the Loring home had been turned over to Robert W. Hicks, Washington criminologist, who has been analyzing evidence in the case.

Corinna, according to Mrs. George Loring, her mother, was using this iron to get her trousseau ready just before she disappeared from her Mount Rainier home on the night of November 4.

Wounds Studied.

When her body was found on the following Saturday afternoon, it was discovered she had two wounds of a triangular shape on either side of her head.

Itzel wants to know if the iron could have been used to inflict those wounds.

Last night Itzel went back to Baltimore, where today he will attend the funeral of a relative. He expects to return to Upper Marlboro, inquiry headquarters, immediately thereafter.

A "lead' given him by the family had been run down and found to be of no value, Lieut. Itzel said last night.

Theory Considered.

It was Leo LoJacono, brother-in-law of Corinna, who volunteered the information.

"I admit it is almost too fantastic," police quoted LoJacono as saying, "but it is the only thing we can think of."

His story was this: About three years ago a young Mount Rainier man was courting Corinna. His mother was very anxious that he marry her. When, instead, he turned from Corinna and married another girl, the mother flew into a rage.

Ever since then, the mother has been upbraiding her son for his "blindness." Not only that but she has vented her rage on her husband, blaming him for not having better advised the son.

Fights Reported.

As a result of the woman's continual harassment of him, the father recently began drinking heavily. Fights between him and the wife have been frequent.

LoJacono's theory—the one he confesses is "almost too fantastic"—is that the father, while on a liquor rampage, decided that one way to end the turmoil in his home was to remove the innocent cause of it—Corinna Loring.

The investigators agreed with LoJacono that it was a fantastic theory. Nevertheless, they began checking on the man's movements on the night of November 4. Itzel said last night the man definitely was "out."

Meantime, another suspect was eliminated from the picture. This was the man who, according to reports, appeared for work at the Washington Navy Yard the day after the murder with his face "badly scratched" and later disappeared.

Lieut. Joseph H. Itzel, who is in charge of the investigation, said last night that this man is "out," a check having been shown that he could not have known Corinna Loring or have been in Mount Rainier that night.

Lieut. Itzel spent most of yesterday at the inquiry headquarters in Upper Marlboro.

Among those Itzel interviewed was Dr. William H. Norton, of Mount Rainier, Corinna Loring's physician. His contribution, if any, was not revealed.

Police Chief Jeremiah Crowley, of Prince Georges County, took two young girls to Upper Marlboro for questioning. Itzel talked to them, but would not say what information they had offered.

Falls, Somersaults, Safe.

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 19 (AP).—Two-year-old Helen Louise Murray toppled backward from a second story window today, turned a somersault in a 25-foot fall—and, police were told, seemingly landed upon her feet. She suffered only slight bruises.

Murder in the Capital

By Karl Schriftgiesser

Who was the slayer of quiet Corinna Loring, almost on the eve of her bridal day?

As ace detectives seek to unravel this ghastly crime, The Washington Post has been delving into the histories of unsolved murders in and around the District.

Karl Schriftgiesser has been assigned to write these true tales of slayings unsolved, some committed many years ago. The fourth of his series, "Murder in the Capital," appears this morning.

Delving 50 years into the past, into the Washington of the 1880's, Mr. Schriftgiesser today recounts the murder of Antonio M. Soteldo, jr., a noted journalist of Washington's Newspaper Row, who was shot to death at the height of his career.

The '80s were a period of yellow journalism, lush, vicious, slandering newspapering, when the libel laws were forgotten and the freedom of the press was not even licensed. They were a period of personal journalism: not the personal journalism of great editors, but of personalities that generally stung like a glove-slap in the face. Newspapers spread gossip, not facts; disrupted homes, crushed men and forced some of those whose homes were disrupted, whose reputations were crushed, to invoke their own law in defense. This law was often the law of gunfire. It was once evoked in the world-famous Newspaper Row of Washington in those swashbuckling, hard-drinking, glorious days when Congressmen went armed and every city editor had a gun in the drawer of his desk. In its way, its evocation made criminal history, for in this city one of the earliest attempts at scientific crime deduction was tried. That it failed does not really matter now.

One of two men killed Antonio M. Soteldo, jr., in his day a noted journalist of Washington. Had not all the bullets weighed the same, the case might not have gone down in history as one of the great unsolved crimes of Washington history. But they did.

Died for Forebearance.

In 1882 Newspaper Row in Washington was the working colony of the journalistic elite. Reporters, correspondents, editors and tramp printers were thick as flies. In this motley, two outstanding characters were Soteldo, who was to die for his decency and Christian forebearance, and Clarence M. Barton, managing editor of the National Republican, who got touched with lead but didn't die.

Soteldo had been at various times a Washington correspondent of the New York Sun, the San Francisco Chronicle, the New York Times, the Baltimore American, and managing editor of the National Republican, published in the Capital. It was Barton who had replaced him in the last position. Soteldo had become correspondent for the Baltimore Times.

Yes, they were lush and bloody days. Had not Brann the Iconclast lost his life in a newspaper feud in Texas? Had not a correspondent shot to death, on the Capitol steps, a representative who had objected to the writer's accurate expose of the Patent Office scandals? It was in this hectic atmosphere that Mrs. Soteldo picked up, on the morning of January 13, 1882, a copy of the National Republican and read the following account:

"Antonio M. Soteldo and Charles F. Keegan are alleged journalists. Keegan is just out of the New Jersey Penitentiary after serving a term for libel. In a downtown saloon yesterday Keegan and Soteldo were drinking in company with a woman.

Insult Bitter Pill.

"But Keegan, well plied with liquor, insulted the woman, who was a particular friend of Soteldo. The result was that the latter set upon his friend and beat him. Keegan was arrested and while searching through saloons for some of his cronies to supply his bail he disappeared.

"It is not forgotten in this town that when Soteldo was managing editor of the National Republican, he boasted that he held up the mirror to Nature in presenting the naked facts of passing events to the public through its columns, just as the Republican does this morning."

The insult was a pretty bitter pill for Soteldo to swallow. The story, probably more or less true, rankled in the proud breast of Mrs. Soteldo, who was the daughter of an Ohio railroad magnate. But contrary to the natural impulsiveness of his nationality, the Spanish Soteldo did nothing. He decided to take his chances with the law of libel in the courts.

But the gossips kept pointing their finger at him and things were unhappy at home, as one may imagine. Meanwhile his former associates on the National Republican kept up their assaults upon his character. Soteldo was not idle. He patiently gathered information against Barton, so that he might have a weapon over the editor's head that would bludgeon out a retraction at the proper time.

Went to Barton's Office.

On February 9 the paper came out with the crowning insult. It charged Soteldo with attempting to bribe a printer to get for him the original manuscript from which the insults had been printed. Whether the accusation was factual or inspired is not known. But it did set off the fireworks.

Seeking solace from the unhappiness he was suffering at home because of that "particular friend of Soteldo's" of the bar-room incident, he drank heavily and brooded upon his wrongs. He asked his brother Augustus for advice and together they sought out Barton at his office one evening to deman an opology.

With documents purporting to show that Barton had once misused funds, and admitted it repentantly when caught, they went to the offices of the nawspaper on the evening of February 10.

"These are for you," said Antonio Soteldo. "I want to show you that if I were vengeful I could blacken your name as you have mine. Look over these papers and decide for yourself."

He pushed the sheaf toward Barton, seated in a chair in the editorial room. Barton bit his cigar, glanced over the papers, disdainfully pushed them away.

Soteldo Slapped.

"I'm not interested," he said.

"You're not, eh?"

"No! And get to hell out of here," shouted Barton.

He slapped Soteldo in the face.

What happened next is not exactly known.

Augustus said that Barton pulled a pistol from the drawer of his desk and fired at Antonio Soteldo, and that he, Augustus, drew his own gun and fired at Barton.

In Newspaper Row the barking of the guns was heard. Men looked toward the lighted newspaper office, saw two shadows swaying back and forth between the windows and the dim gas lamps. Then the lights went out and all was dark and quiet.

Compositors rushed in, grappled with Augustus, took a gun from him. Barton lay in a pool of blood. A bullet had pierced his neck, another had lodged in his chest. In another room Antonio Soteldo lay paralyzed. He died a few days later. Barton lingered near death, but a suspender buckle had deflected one of the shots and the neck wound was only superficial. He was soon back at his desk, "upholding the mirror to nature" and Washington's gossip.

Police were faced with the difficulty of placing the responsibility. Antonio's pistol was found in his pocket fully loaded. Near Barton lay a gun, one chamber empty. The revolver taken from Augustus had been fired five times.

Augustus and Barton each accused the other, Augustus insisting he had fired only after Barton had shot Antonio in the back.

Thus came the first attempt, in Washington at least, to place the blame for a killing through the science of ballistics. Each survivor of the battle had guns of a similar make, but the ammunition used was different.

Police took all the bullets in the case, fired and otherwise, and carefully weighed them and then compared the weight with the fatal shot taken from Antonio Soteldo's body. The tests failed.

Each bullet balanced the weight of the fatal shot.

Today the science of ballistics would easily have placed the blame. It is well known that every pistol leaves its own unmistakable print upon any bullet that passes through its barrel. Every pistol leaves its own "lands" and "grooves" upon each bullet as plainly as a thumb or forefinger leaves its telltale whorls upon a piece of glass. But they didn't know that, in 1882.

And so, baffled by the failure of a science that was not then in existence, they reverted to traditional police methods and arrested the man against whom they thought they had the better chance of conviction. They arrested Augustus.

Through weary and verbose days defense lawyers attacked the yellow journalism of the day seeking to shift the blame upon the shoulders of Barton while the authorities lengthily pleaded for the "freedom of the press."

Barton Never Tried.

Augustus Soteldo briefly defended himself. He said, simply and without emotion:

"I shot to save my brother's life after Barton had fired at him. I shot to kill Barton after he fired into my brother's neck. The shots I fired could not have killed Antonio. He was not in the line of my aim."

Justice Wylie scathingly denounced the yellow press in his charge to the jury, saying that "these newspapers are becoming so regardless of truth that the people are beginning to disregard the opinions of all newspapers."

The jury found Soteldo not guilty. He left town shortly afterward to disappear into the mists of history's forgetfulness.

District Tourist Trade Gains 22 Pct. in Year

The tourist trade in Washington appears to have gained more this year than in resort cities, according to Curtis Hodges, executive director of the greater National Capital committee of the Board of Trade. Washington tourist trade is 22 per cent above last year, he said, while resort hotels report only a 16 per cent gain.

There have been 2,281,843 tourists reported in Washington from January 1 to November 1, this year. Hodges said on this basis the year's total should be 2,533,878, as against the 2,076,225 recorded in 1934.

ASIDE to Police Commissioner Valentine: If you'll check with the Italian Line, you'll learn that Vera Stretz and the late Dr. Fritz Gebhardt occupied Cabin 460 on D deck and Cabin 21 on sun deck, on the December 22 West Indies cruise of the S. S. Vulcania . . . Fellow passengers, Dr. and Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler and Mrs. Kingdon Gould may recall them . . . Julian Field got his divorce from Rita yesterday, and lovely Peggy Morrow got her final papers from Jack Chadburn last Friday . . . Field and Miss Morrow will elope to Greenwich or Jersey City within 48 hours . . . Dan Topping and Shipwreck Kelly, two wealthy local youngsters who bought the Brooklyn Dodgers, professional football team, are beginning to believe the proposition is all wet . . . On three successive Sundays the Dodger games have been rained out . . . They have finally come to a momentous decision . . . Inasmuch as they both play the night club circuit, Dan and Shipwreck have decided that their project is suffering from daylight-poisoning . . . They will play the Chicago Bears, therefore, tomorrow night . . . Kenneth Thornhill, whose divorce action is on Page 1's, will wed Mme. Sondra Svenska, the singer, after the final papers.

*Chronology of a Celluloid Crackup: One of the craft points out that he forecast the Clark Gable smashup as long ago as October 14, more than a month back . . . First reference appeared more than a year ago in this column on June 28, 1934: "The Clark Gables tell Coast pals the parting will be amicable" . . . Again on January 9, 1935: "Sizzler Special: The Clark Gables have Built Up to a Terrific Letdown and the cash settlement will be arranged shortly (Mrs. Gable, who did plenty for the big fellow, which he appreciates, will cut a heavy slice from Gable's new contract, $5,000 a week for seven years)" . . . Finally, on October 7, 1935: "Clark Gable's South American trip revives the divorce rumors" . . . That is the chronology of a marriage that was held together by not only dug up a tremendous bankroll to produce it, but also demonstrated conclusively that he knew how to get major value from his angel's dough . . . Roxy was the only other one to equal or surpass Rose as a money-digger-upper . . . And Roxy couldn't come within hailing distance of Billy for sheer showmanship . . . Jimmy Durante's magnificent performance in the show puts him back in the front ranks of the stars, a position he'd sacrificed by badly-written radio programs. You chuckle at the recollection of Durante stealing the elephant . . . Caught red-handed, Durante is accosted by a G-Man. "What are you doing with that elephant?" . . . "What elephant?" says Jimmy innocently, expressing a new high in near-sightedness.

M. G. M.'s fear of how a divorce would affect the box office.

James Montgomery Flagg, Tony Sarg, Arthur William Brown, Russell Patterson and this reporter were judges in a contest yesterday to determine the most beautiful eyes on Broadway . . . While we were waiting for the contest to start, autograph hunters besieged the jurymen . . . One girl came up timidly and said: "Which of you is Tony Sarg? . . . Flagg, snowy-thatched and distinguished in appearance, said gravely: "The five of us are Tony Sarg, ma'am" . . . The girl retreated, looking very puzzled . . . Cobina Wright prefers Walter Varney . . . The Jerry Goffs expect Sir Stork shortly . . . Trudy Burke and Eddie Stone are blazing . . . The whole town will be at the Henry King, Milt Douglas opening at Central Park Casino . . . Wire birthday greetings to Supreme Court Justice Cotillo.

Yesterday's statement in this space that Billy Rose is the No. 1 showman of the town aroused considerable discussion . . . Hastily-impaneled juries gabbed about it for hours in Stem restaurants . . . I stick to my original statement . . . Rose, with "Jumbo,"
